PLAN TO "SPEED UP" SEWER WORK

Contractors to Receive Extra $8,000 if Trunk Line is Finished by Dec. 31 Next.

TO AVOID LITIGATION

Cauldwell-Wingate Co. and Atlantic Construction Co. Have Been Delayed With Work and Sewer Commission Votes to Compromise.

For the purpose of "speeding up" the work on the trunk sewer line and also avoiding any possible litigation that might be instituted because of certain conditions which have arisen, the Joint Sewer Commission at its monthly meeting last night voted to make an additional allowance of $8,000 to the Cauldwell-Wingate Company and the Atlantic Construction Company, which jointly has the contract for this work. This extra sum is to be paid to the contractors provided the work is completed by December 31 next, otherwise the money is not to be turned over as stated.

The contractors have experienced difficulties with their work not anticipated, they being delayed because of failure on the part of the committee to secure rights of way promptly, and through some changes made in the rights of way. It is because of these things that Lindabury, Depue & Faulks, of counsel for the three municipalities in the sewer work, are of the opinion that the contractors might have a just claim against the municipalities and if they should take the matters to court would be sustained in their contention.

Then another thing that has delayed the work is the scarcity of labor. It has been almost impossible to employ sufficient labor at the prevailing wage rate to keep the work going in a satisfactory manner. Wages have jumped until now ordinary labor is being paid $2.25 a day and it is hard to get it at that price. The contractors have decided to go to an additional expense and provide a suitable place on the job where their men can be fed. This they believe will help to keep the men employed.

This proposition to compromise with the contractors as a means of hurrying the work was taken up by a committee with the heads of the contracting firms, and while no official acceptance of it has been acknowledged, it is the opinion that they will agree to the plan. The offer was put in a long resolution which was adopted by the committee last night. It is hoped that it will prove an incentive for the contractors to double their efforts.

E. L. Bader, who has the contract for building the sewage beds on the Darling farm, is getting along well with that work and it is said that the plant will be ready for use by September 1. It was reported last night that 86 per cent. of the trunk line is completed and 83 per cent. of the sewage disposal plant.

Bills aggregating $17,520.37 were ordered paid last night. It is likely that in response to a request from E. L. Bader a payment will be made the contractor out of the retained percentage of the contract price. This would afford the contractor more of a working capital.

MRS. CRIST BENEFICIARY OF HER FATHER'S ESTATE

Among the bequests mentioned in the will of former Senator Jacob W. Welch, of Middle Valley, father of Mrs. Elizabeth Crist, of this city, which was admitted to probate on Monday at Morristown, is one of local interest. To his daughter, Mrs. Crist, he left the residence at 503 Park avenue, and the Blimm building at Third and Washington streets, and also forty shares of the stock of the Clinton National Bank. The residue is to be divided into three parts, one each to the son and daughter, and the last third to the widow for use during her life. Then the residue is to be divided between the two children.

NEW PASTOR ARRIVES.

Rev. H. E. Clark, the newly appointed pastor of the Congregational church, arrived in this city yesterday. He was accompanied by Mrs. Clark and their little child and T. G. Mayberry, of Bernardsville. At present they are located at Truell Inn. Mr. Clark will hold his first service in the Plainfield church next Sunday morning, when several new members will affiliate with the church.

LITERARY CLUB MEETS.

The Vamswackhoe Literary Club, of North Plainfield, met last night at the home of Alfred Willett on Craig place. Messrs. LaPorte, Seidel and Lowrie were named a committee to raise funds for the rally next month. After the meeting refreshments were served.

BIBLE CLASS TO MEET.

The Marie F. Brake Bible Class will meet tomorrow afternoon at 3:15 o'clock. Any High School girl or any other girl over fourteen years of age is invited to join the class, and will be made permanent members at the next business meeting.

LOCAL ELKS PLANNING FOR NEWARK REUNION

Plainfield Lodge Will Send Big Delegation to the State Gathering.

The Newark reunion committee of Plainfield lodge of Elks, which is making arrangements for Plainfield's representation at the State gathering in September, is already making a determined effort to eclipse even the wonderful showing made in Atlantic City last year. At the latter reunion, Plainfield won two prizes, one for the best appearance of men in line and for the most handsome float. It is hoped to have a delegation of at least 200 at Newark and the Plainfielders will also put a float in line even handsomer than its previous one.

It was reported at the regular meeting of Plainfield lodge last night, that the reunion committee had selected the costume to be worn. It will be a twobutton gray sack suit, cut and made to order for each individual by a New York tailor. Beside the suit the outfit will comprise straw hat with wide purple band, white shirt, turn down collar, purple crash tie, white belt, white socks, white shoes and each member will carry a cane. It is planned to have the same band from Allentown head the delegation and if this cannot be secured an equally famous musical organization will be engaged. In the business session of Plainfield lodge last night, arrangements were commenced for the annual Flag Day exercises to be held on Wednesday night, June 14. They will take place in the lodge rooms of the Watchung avenue clubhouse and will be for members only.

"TAGGERS" WILL BE DRESSED AS NURSES

Attractive Women Will Try and Raise $5,000 for the Hospital on June 17.

It is to be hoped that every man, woman and child in Plainfield—whether rich or poor, in good health or sick—will feel on June 17 as this one person does who sent in to the committee in charge of "Rose Tag Day" the verse herewith.

"On June the 17th this year,
Plainfield will help its sufferers here,
For that is going to be Rose Tag Day,
And then we all will sing our lay,
"We'll open our purses, we won't be tight,
We want to make some sufferer bright."

If all of our good citizens feel that way towards the wonderful humanitarian work that the Women's Auxiliary of Muhlenberg Hospital does for this community, then it is safe to predict that there will not be the least trouble in obtaining the $5,000 that is wanted and needed to carry on their work.

It might be well to tell once more just what the Women's Auxiliary is. It is the helping hand to the board of governors of the hospital. It is entirely composed of women, who give their time, their energy, their money, to assist in furnishing flowers, fruits, jellies and delicacies to the ward patients at the hospital. It buys appointments for the children's ward and the private rooms. It gives presents to the patients and workers. It purchases all the materials and makes such articles as bandages, sleeping garments, towels, sheets, etc., for the whole hospital During 1915 over 5,000 such articles were made.

The above are only a few of the things the Women's Auxiliary does. Their work is one of the noblest and most charitable works done in this city. These women are now asking every man, woman and child in this community to do "their little bit" by contributing as much money as they are able to this community institution on June 17. On that day nearly 500 women, dressed as nurses, will give up their time to be "taggers." They will give a rose to every person who contributes any money.

To the young woman who collects the most money from sunrise to sunset will be given, as a reward, her choice of four orchestra seats at any New York theatre she may choose. The "tagger" collecting the second greatest amount will receive two orchestra seats. If there are a 3 young women in Plainfield who would care to be "taggers," they can obtain full information as to their duties by getting in communication with either Mrs. F. V. Warren, 966 Hillside avenue, president of the Women's Auxiliary, or with Mrs. A. V. Heeley, 321 West Eighth street, chairman of the women "taggers," who will give them full information.

Let every Plainfielder's heart rule his or her purse on June 17, so that at sunset on that day the much needed $5,000 will have been obtained.

FALLS UNDER TRAIN BUT IS NOT HURT

George Berse Escapes Death by Remarkable Agility and Coolness.

George Berse, who lives at 318 East Fifth street, had a narrow escape from death at the North Avenue station this morning. In attempting to board the last car on the 7:22 train, Mr. Berse missed the step and fell. He rolled under the coach, after the first truck had passed, and those who saw the accident started to run toward the tracks to pick up his mangled body as soon as the train had passed. With remarkable presence of mind, Mr. Berse rolled his body from under the car before the rear trucks reached him. He arose and brushed his clothing, and when the next train came along, calmly boarded it and went on to New York.

YOUNG WOMAN IS TERRIBLY BURNED

Miss Fannie Sabonavitz Removed to Hospital in Critical Condition.

Miss Fannie Sabonavitz, twenty years old, employed as a cook at Smelson's restaurant, on Somerset street, was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital at 1 o'clock this afternoon, suffering from serious burns received while at work in the restaurant kitchen. The young woman struck a match to light a gas stove, but the head flew off and ignited her clothing. Before help could arrive she was enveloped in the flames and was badly burned about the lower part of the body and also about the arms and head.

Miss Sabonavitz's screams brought assistance from Samuel Smelson, the proprietor of the place, and Charlie Ham, a laundryman, whose place adjoins the restaurant. The flames were extinguished by water thrown on them by Smelson. By the time the last vestige of fire had been beaten out the woman's clothing had been almost entirely consumed.

Dr. A. H. Dundon, arriving in response to a hurry call, gave Miss Sabonavitz "first aid," after which she was removed to the hospital by ambulance. While the burns are serious, the physicians believe the victim inhaled no flame, and there is a possibility that she may recover.

HEBREW SCHOOL TO HOLD "EXAMS" AND GIVE PRIZES

The local Hebrew School which has been conducted successfully under the auspices of the local Zionist organization has sent out invitations for the annual examination which will take place next Sunday afternoon at 2:30 in the New street synagogue.

Through the generosity of Alex. Kramer, of New York, B. J. Kline and M. Meindelsohn, of this city, the committee has secured several valuable prizes, consisting of books and a silver medal which will be offered to the best pupils in the various classes.

The committee has also been fortunate in getting Dr. Leon Albun, of Harrisburg, Pa., who is a recognized leader in the system of modern Hebrew education, to deliver an address.

The committee requests that the parents who are interested in the welfare of the school would bring a package to be raffled off in order to turn a little money to defray the expense.

PRESBYTERIAN MINISTERS' ASSOCIATION MEETS HERE

The Presbyterian Ministers' Association within the bounds of the Synod of New Jersey will meet in semi-annual session today in the Bethel Presbyterian chapel, at Fifth and Washington streets. The sessions will be held at 3 and 8 p. m. The Rev. W. L. Imes, pastor of Bethel chapel, will open the meeting this afternoon with a devotional service, and Rev. E. F. Eggleston, D. D., of Newark, president of the association, will pronounce the prayer. Following the routine business round table talks will be given by several clergymen. A hymn and benediction will close the afternoon meeting and dinner will be served at 6 o'clock.

The evening service will be opened at 7:45 with a fifteen minute song service led by the Bethel choir, with J. A. Williams, as leader. Addresses will feature the evening session and Miss Stella V. Hill will sing several soprano solos, and a mixed quartet will render selections. A social half-hour will close the session.

TO ASK $15,000 IN NEXT 10 DAYS

Y. M. H. A. Members Begin Campaign for a New Building.

BIG MEETING TONIGHT

Judge Newcorn to Act as Chairman—Many Checks Have Come in Unsolicited—Prominent Speakers From Out of Town.

The ten days' campaign to raise $15,000 for a new home for he Plainfield Young Men's Hebrew Association will be launched tonight at a mass meeting to be held in the auditorium of the Columbus Club. All who are interested in the movement have been invited and it is expected that the building will be filled. Judge William Newcorn will act as chairman of the meeting.

All arrangements for the campaign were completed at a meeting of the committee in charge held last night and real work of solicitation begins tomorrow. If confidence and enthusiasm will bring success the money is as good as raised.

Those in charge of the campaign were much encouraged by the number of subscriptions to the building fund that have come in without solicitation. Within the past few days many local citizens have sent checks to the committee explaining that they wanted to have a part in the building of a home for the Plainfield Y. M. H. A. The total of the checks received will not be made public, but with the subscriptions of tonight it is expected to offer a good start toward the $15,000 wanted.

Speakers at the mass meeting of tonight will be Judge William Newcorn, of Plainfield; Albert Leon, of Perth Amboy; Louis Brenner, field secretary of the Pennsylvania Y. M. H. A.; the Rev. S. Marlainsky, who will speak in the mother tongue; Max Levy, president of the New Jersey Y. M. H. A., and Falk Younker, field secretary of the New York Y. M. H. A.

The meeting will be called to order at 8 o'clock.

DEMONSTRATOR BREAKS WRIST CRANKING CAR

Theodore Raff, of Duer street, who is employed at Weinman's Cafe, is suffering from a broken right wrist received Tuesday in attempting to show Charles Shirley the proper way to crank a car. The machine belongs to Mr. Shirley, who has only just recovered from a broken wrist received six weeks ago in cranking up, and Mr. Rath, who has made automobiles a study, was explaining to the owner how to avoid having the same thing happen again. Rath threw the crank over, only to have it "kick" back at him, the broken wrist resulting.

The injured man subjected to an X-ray examination by Dr. Dundon, who located the break and gave the proper attention. Rath declares that he will give no more demonstrations.

EDWARD COUGHLIN DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Following a lingering illness with an incurable ailment, Edward Coughlin, aged 51 years, of 857 Leland avenue, passed away at his home yesterday afternoon. Mr. Coughlin was one of Netherwood's oldest and best known residents, having come there twenty-six years ago, when that section boasted of only two houses, one of these being the pesent home of former Police Captain Christian Frederickson, located next door.

He was born in Ireland and married there in early life. Since coming to America he had been engaged in landscape gardening, and had worked for some of Plainfield's most prominent families. Besides a wife, he is survived by the following children, all of whom live at home: Matthew, Edward, John, Mary and Marcella. He had acquired considerable land in the vicinity of his home, and spent much time and money in developing the tract.

The funeral will be held at St. Mary's church tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock.

HIGH SCHOOL EXHIBIT.

The annual exhibitions of the work of the various departments of the High School will open tonight at 7:30. The exhibit is being held in the new gymnasium and is open to the public for inspection. Teachers will be present to escort spectators around the room and explain the work of the different departments.

CHOIR TO ORGANIZE.

The members of the Biederwolf choir will meet in the Washington School tonight to effect a permanent organization of the singers. Clifford Braider will preside during the meeting until the officers are elected and some definite plans accepted for the future. All members are urged to be present.

NEW YORK AGENTS PRESENT COAL BIDS

Compete With Local Firms for Furnishing Coal to Public Schools.

Bids were received at a special meeting of the Plainfield Board of Education last night for furnishing the city schools with coal for the coming year. There were four local bidders and three bids from New York agents. The Plainfield firms bidding were Boice, Runyon & Co., Consumers Coal Company, Wadley & Goodenough and Joseph Harrigan.

The other bids were submitted by J. M. Hetfield, W. A. Pinton and Seiler, Brown & Rogers. Mr. Hetfield, Mr. Pinto and George T. Rogers, of the last named firm, reside here, but do business in New York. All of the bids were referred to the building committee and a report will be made later. The amount of coal required is 700 tons of buckwheat, 730 tons of pea, 120 tons of egg and 10 tons of stove coal.

DR. EDGAR C. ABBOTT TALKS ON SHAKESPEARE

Well Known Lecturer Describes Him as "Man-Poet and Dramatist."

Dr. Edgar C. Abbott, of Boston, addressed a large and appreciative audience at the home of Mrs. J. K. Myers on East Seventh street yesterday afternoon, when he gave the first of a Shakespeare Tercentenary course of lecture-recitals for the benefit of the Arthur Home for Blind Babies at Summit, the proceeds of the lecture to go entirely to that object.

Dr. Abbott spoke yesterday on "Shakespeare—the Man, Poet and Dramatist." He told of the unusual interest in the Shakespeare Tercentenary. He referred to Shakespeare as a universal leader of the human race and to the common devotion of the people to him. He characterized the mind of Shakespeare as an intellectual ocean.

Dr. Abbott has made a deep study of Shakespeare and his works and his talk yesterday was a delight to the large audience present. The second recital will be given tomorrow afternoon at 3:45 at the home of Mrs. Arthur M. Harris, 965 Central avenue, when he will speak on "Hamlet."

INVITATIONS ISSUED FOR MISS M'CUTCHEON'S WEDDING

Invitations have been issued for the marriage of Miss Verna H. McCutcheon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. McCutcheon, of Washington, Conn., to Walter S. Logan, of New York city. The ceremony will take place at the bride's parents' residence, at "Brookside," on Saturday, June 24. Mrs. L. A. Williams, Jr., and Mrs. George Grandy, both of this city, sisters of the bride, will be among the bridal attendants.

Miss McCutcheon is well known in this city, and until seven years ago she and her parents resided on Plainfield avenue at what is now known as "Oakwood."

"DAWN OF TOMORROW" WILL BE PRESENTED

Dramatic Entertainment to Be Given at Evergreen Avenue School June 8.

A dramatic entertainment of unusual interest has been arranged by the Public Recreation Committee for Thursday evening, June 8, in the auditorium of the new Evergreen Avenue School. The program includes a monologue, a dialogue and a complete play. The monolgue written by Frances Hodgson Burnett is called the "Dawn of a Tomorrow." It is charming in its idealism and in its prophetic vision of the Brotherhood of Man. Miss Lillian Lamson impersonates the dreamer to an extremely sympathetic manner.

The dialogue that will be enacted is the now well known "Silent System." John Drew made a hit in "The Silent System" and many other prominent actors have had a try at it. On Thursday evening the parts will be taken by Miss Lillian Lamson and Charles L. Lewis, supervisor of music in the Plainfield public schools.

The play that is offered as a feature of the evening's entertainment ought to attract by its name alone—"Other People's Money." It is as attractive and as amusing as the name suggests. The cast are members of the Plainfield High School. One who has witnessed the rehearsals declares that these young thespians show a fine appreciation and a fresh enthusiasm sometimes lacking in professional actors. Tickets for the entertainment may be secured from Mrs. H. C. White, of 99 Rockview avenue, the borough.

DR. H. V. HUBBARD ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR

Local Specialist Given High Honors by Post-Graduate Hospital, New York.

Dr. H. V. Hubbard, of Central avenue, eye, ear and throat specialist, has just been given high honors at the New York Post-Graduate Medical School and Hospital, New York. Arthur F. Chace, secretary has just notified him that at a special meeting of the board of directors of the institution, upon recommendation of the faculty, he was appointed adjunct professor in the department of ophthalmology, under Professor A. E. Davis. The appointment takes effect at once.

Dr. Hubbard has been connected with the Post-Graduate Hospital in New York for the past ten years, and half that time has been chief of clinic For several years he has been an instructor there, attending to all new cases coming to the hospital on Wednesday and Saturdays, and these average from 25 to 60 a day. Several months ago Dr. Hubbard introduced a course in ophthalmic therapeutics, which he has charge of and also gives instruction. The work at the Post-Graduate Hospital takes Dr. Hubbard to New York on Wednesday and Saturday of each week. His recent advancement to an associate professorship is a recognition of his ability in his chosen profession.

C. F. STOUT RECEIVED GIFT.

Chauncey F. Stout, who acted as secretary and treasurer of the Elks' committee conducting the performance of "The Mystic Rose," was presented with a silver card case by his associates on the committee during the business session of the lodge last night. Mr. Stout was very active in promoting the entertainment and much of the credit for its success is due his efforts. William C. Mulvey, chairman of the committee, made the presentation in behalf of himself, Joseph C. Martin, Edward J. Harding, Jr., and John H. Cose. The case was suitably inscribed. The gift was a complete surprise to Mr. Stout but he responded in a fitting manner.

Scotch Plains and Fanwood

MUCH INTEREST IN BIG MASS MEETING

School Question Comes up for Discussion Again Tomorrow Night.

The second mass meeting of the residents of the Fanwood borough and the Willow Grove section of the township interested in the local school question will be held in the Fanwood firehouse tomorrow night. At the meeting held a week ago a committee was appointed to canvass the borough and township to get signatures to a petition to be presented to the Fanwood Township Board of Education asking for a school south of the C. R. R. of N. J. tracks to accommodate the children of Fanwood and Willow Grove and at the meeting tomorrow night that committee will make its report.

Before the petition is presented again to the Board the people are going to have prepared all necessary data concerning the size building required, the number of children that would attend such a school and the estimated cost of maintenance. Besides petitioning the Board the people residing in the Scotch Plains section of the township will be approached and asked to support the proposition after the matter is explained to them.

Although it has not as yet been definitely announced, it is expected that the Board of Education will call a meeting on or about June 23 of the voters of the township and borough at which time they will be asked to vote sufficient funds to repair School No. 1 and build an addition at the same time, and it will be at this time that the borough and Willow Grove end of the township will ask that the amount voted for the addition be made smaller and a sum voted for the building of a school on south Martine avenue.

NEW GOLF COURSE READY JULY FOURTH

Fine New Links Being Put in Shape for Opening Play.

Work on the Shackamaxson Golf Club in the Willow Grove section is now progressing at a rapid rate and by the Fourth of July the first nine holes will be ready for play. Although the place will be open for use as soon as possible, the various features of the course and the clubhouse will probably not be entirely completed before fall.

The contractors have about completed the course over the first nine holes and the section over which it is laid is being transformed into a really park like area. In a number of places the ground has been filled in and in others trees and shrubbery have been planted. It is planned to have several shelters built at various intervals over the course and rustic bridges are to be erected over the several water hazards. Just when the clubhouse will be available for use is not yet known but work is being carried forward as fast as possible and it is probable that by the coming of cold weather it will be finished. With grill room, gymnasium and other up-to-date features found in other clubhouses throughout the country, the building will be one of the features of the enterprise when it is ready for use.

Although it is intended to make provision for swimming in "Lambert's Pond," the necessary changes to permit it may not be made in time for the coming summer. It is proposed to turn one bank of the pond into a rolling beach, and the pond will also be deepened by dredging. By the coming of cold weather a skating shed will have been constructed at one end of the pond where parties may use it. Work will be going on through the summer turning the neck of land formed by the turn of the pond into a miniature park and other improvements will be made as they are needed.

LOCAL VASSAR GRADUATE.

A number of local people will attend the commencement exercises at Vassar College that begin tomorrow and continue to June 6. Miss Dorothy Beeken, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Beeken, of North avenue, is a member of the graduating class and one of the honor students.

250 WEDDING INVITATIONS FOR EVENT HERE TONIGHT

A wedding, for which over two hundred invitations have been sent out, will be celebrated tonight in the Episcopal church when the rector, the Rev. Oscar Stuart Michael, marries Miss Ellan Ridley Morgan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Morgan, of Scotch Plains, and Frank Carrington Woodruff, of Rahway. Mr. Michael will be assisted by the Rev. John Rushton, of Zion and St. Timothy's, New York city. Following the ceremony a reception will be held and later the couple will leave on a wedding trip.

Town Topics

When Reginald Huse rose at the meeting held in the Fanwood firehouse last Friday night to discuss the school question and said that unless the matter was handled carefully it would be the cause of bad feeling between Fanwood and Scotch Plains he not only said something that was true but something that has already occurred when there has been something of mutual interest to the two places. Just why this ill feeling has existed for many years is rather hard to explain, but nevertheless it does and it only needs something like the present school issue to have it break out in full force. As we understand it, the reason that Fanwood had itself set off from the township as a borough back in the late '80's was on account of this same ill-feeling. At the present time the only thing in which both places are directly connected is the schools, they both being in the same district, and as education is something that is a prime necessity it would seem that when a proposition comes up that would better local conditions it would be far better for the residents of the two places to work in unison toward accomplishing that end than getting at "fever heat" over it.

Although the streets of the borough are on the whole well lighted at night it seems that in the general course of events the Council has forgotten to place a light at one point that is rather important. Situated as it is near the railroad tracks and quite a distance off the road the borough hall stands in total darkness after nightfall and anyone going to the place can hardly find the door. But probably the best reason why a light should be placed there was demonstrated the other night when the marshal was locking a fellow up. Just as the darkness in the vicinity of the building was reached the prisoner, a husky negro, saw fit to start an argument and it was so dark that the marshal said afterward that he had a hard time locating his man. The borough recorder and several others will bring the matter up to the Council at the next meeting and it is probable that something will be done.

Now that Springfield road is closed to traffic while it is being repaired, the only direct line across State is South avenue and with the extra travel now being done on that thoroughfare traffic conditions are beginning to need attention. With many cross streets, it is becoming unsafe for vehicles to pass up South avenue for fear of being run into, and although several autoists have been stopped and fined for speeding there are still many cases where the speed limit is not obeyed. There have been several minor accidents in the past few weeks and very likely to be more unless some steps are taken to regulate the traffic.

GATHERED AT RANDOM

Adjutant and Mrs. E. D. Dinkelacker will assist the Rev. Raymond E. Marshal in conducting the service at the Methodist church tonight. They will play several trombone selections.

Street Commissioner Augustus Sheelen supervised the applying of oil on the borough streets yesterday afternoon.

A meeting of the All Saints' Guild of the Episcopal church will be held at the home of Mrs. Paul Tuzo, of Terrill road, tomorrow afternoon.

The weekly meeting of the Lend-a-Hand Society will be held in the parlors of the Baptist church tomorrow afternoon.

Mayor William H. Hoar and daughter, of the borough, are on a month's pleasure trip to the Pacific coast. After reaching San Francisco they will travel up the coast to Portland and Seattle.

A regular semi-monthly session of the Jr. O. U. A. M. is scheduled for tonight at 8 o'clock in Excelsior Hall.

Mr. and Mrs. James Miniszek, of Midway avenue, have returned from visiting at Greenwood Lake, N. J.

The weekly meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Episcopal church was held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Albert Riblet, of Russell road.

Ascension Day services were conducted in the Episcopal church at 10:30 this morning by the Rev. Oscar S. Michael.

Miss Ethel Strong, of Martine avenue, is the only local student that will graduate from the Plainfield High School this year. The commencement exercises will be held in the High School Auditorium on the night of June 22.

THE TELEPHONE FOR PROTECTION.

"The telephone has prevented more crime and helped arrest more criminals than all the six-shooters in the world."

Thus the chief of police of Englewood, N. J., advertises in the newspapers of that city, urging the use of the telephone to help the police in the detection of crime, says The Telephone Review, New York. The advertisement, which follows, has been adopted or adapted by the police of many other cities and inserted in the daily or weekly papers with a view to extending the campaign of public coöperation in the maintenance of the law:

IS YOUR WEAPON

The telephone has prevented more crime and helped to arrest more criminals than all the six-shooters in the world.

It isn't your business to undertake the arrest of a burglar—that is up to the police.

But it is most emphatically your business to notify the police station promptly whenever you see or hear anything which arouses your suspicions. This applies not only to your own house, but to your neighbor's.

A light in your neighbor's house which you thought unoccupied, may mean a burglary is in progress. A suspicious looking person lurking about your neighbor's yard may mean that a burglary is being contemplated.

Be suspicious. Telephone first. You may be wrong, but again you may be the means of preventing a crime or arresting a criminal.

JOHN J. PYE, Chief of Police.
Phone Englewood 131.

The Fire Department of several cities, too, has taken up the idea of advertising to inform the public how best to co-operate for the prevention of and protection from fires. After a big fire in Glen Cove, the Board of Fire Commissioners published this notice in the local paper:

PUBLIC NOTICE.

With reference to the question of Telephone Service following the sounding of the Fire Alarm, the public and users of the telephone system, generally, are hereby requested by the Board of Fire Commissioners to comply with the ruling as stated below, following an agreement entered into by the Telephone Company and your Board of Fire Commissioners, as follows:—

Do Not—Phone for information as to the location of a fire through a spirit of curiosity only, as hundreds of calls made approximately at one time does demoralize the system. Kindly reserve the use of the phone to the individuals and officials directly concerned.

Do Not—Ask "Central" to tell you where the fire is—rather, ask for No. 366 Glen Cove or No. 280 Glen Cove and "Central" will connect you with either number as speedily as the service will allow.

The above Phones are located in the two Fire Houses and each will be operated by an active fireman assigned to that duty during the period of the fire, for the purpose of giving the desired information to the public. The Telephone Company has agreed to directly connect such calls with the above phones for the purpose of conveying this information only.

Kindly post the above numbers in a conspicuous place near your phone, as also the Fire Alarm Call, No. 600 Glen Cove.

Study the system so as not to confuse the above members.

We feel that compliance with the above timely suggestions will do much toward improving the present condition, in that the tendency to cripple the Telephone Service and to handicap the Fire Department System, will be greatly offset.

Kindly do YOUR part with reason and thereby coöperate with your

BOARD OF FIRE COMMISSIONERS.

COMPETITIVE THEORY EXPLODED.

The Phoenix Water Company applied to the Pennsylvania Public Service Commission for the approval of a contract with the Borough of Phoenix containing the grant of a franchise to operate in said borough. The Philadelphia Gas and Electric Company, which was already operating in the borough, objected. The Commission dismissed the application, stating that the competitive theory in the operation of public utility enterprises has long since been exploded, it being obvious that it involved an economic waste and was inconsistent with the Commission's power of regulation through which the utility already in the field could be compelled to give adequate service at reasonable rates. That, moreover, interest on capital unwisely invested for competition and the additional operating expenses involved therein would add burdens to the community which would ultimately result in an increase of rates. Commenting on the above decision The Telephone Review, N. Y., says:

It provides an authoritative answer to the fortunately infrequent, but nevertheless occasionally insistent repetition of the old fallacy that "competition is the life of trade"; as if modern business had not caught up with the fact that it is coöperation and not competition, that competition may send the prices of things upward as well as downward, as everybody knows, and that since telephone rates are now fixed by commission, the interests of both the public and the Company are protected instead of both being jeopardized.

Peasant Life in Palestine.

The actual peasant life of Palestine has not greatly changed since Bible times, and every village today boasts of its upper room, or guest chamber, where the men meet and chat about the local news. These guest chambers have been in vogue since the days of the patriarchs. Farming, of course, is the principal occupation. The Palestine farmer sows first and plows afterward, as a rule. He scatters the seed over the ground by hand and then plows it in. The plows are very primitive and are driven, as a rule, by oxen. A farmer's field is not marked off by a fence as we understand the term. In the mountainous country lands are inclosed by loose stone walls, still called by the ancient Hebrew name jedar, and on the plains by thorn hedges. When the open fields are owned individually the boundary lines are indicated by deep furrows, in which at intervals stones are laid as landmarks. It is therefore readily seen how easily these boundaries could be changed by an avaricious neighbor, undeterred by the Mosaic warning, "Cursed be he that removeth his neighbor's landmarks."

Equal to It.

"I was recently playing in a melodrama," said an actor, "where in the last scene the heroine and myself were supposed to be imprisoned in a turret chamber, every door locked and barred on the outside and an infernal machine placed underneath, timed to explode in five minutes.

"We were working up 'the agony.' The audience was breathless with excitement. I made a dash toward one of the doors with the intention of trying to break it down and found it wide open. Here was a predicament. I stood dumfounded. The audience began to titter.

"The heroine unromantically whispered, 'Oh, Charlie, the scene is bottled up!'

"An inspiration came to me. I seized my sweetheart and dragged her through the open door, shouting, 'Ah, thank heaven, a way of escape!'

"Then, dashing back with a wail of agony—'No; the outer door is fastened! We are lost! Lost!'"

Troubles of a Great Bank.

The Bank of England has had its troubles, notwithstanding its great financial strength. It has passed through many perils. At various times its notes have been at a heavy discount, its credit has been assailed, it has been threatened with impeachment and it has been attacked by rioters. The first "run" on the bank occurred in 1707. Other panics or runs occurred in 1745, 1797 and 1825. In 1832 the Duke of Wellington was unpopular, and four men placarded the walls of London with the words, "To stop the duke, go for gold." Nobody knew exactly what it meant, but it produced a tremendous run on the bank. At one time the bank lost £320,000, or almost $1,500,000, through the forgeries of one man and still more at another time by the forgeries of another man.

A Dramatic Situation.

Beau Brummel was once sitting at a table with one Bligh, who was known to be insane. The Beau, having lost a considerable stake, affected, in his farcical way, a very tragic air and cried out, "Waiter, bring me a flat candlestick and a pistol!" Upon which Bligh, who was sitting opposite to him, calmly produced two loaded pistols from his coat pocket, which he placed on the table, and said, "Mr. Brummel, if you are really desirous to put a period to your existence I am extremely happy to offer you the means without troubling the waiter." The effect upon those present may be easily imagined at finding themselves in the company of a known madman who had loaded weapons about him.

The Similarity.

"Lucky at cards, unlucky at love," quoted the wise guy.

"Well, either is simply a case of holding hands," said the simple mug.—Philadelphia Record.

Solve It.

The sphinx pronounced a riddle.

"How many girls would swim out beyond the danger line if the lifeguard was a woman?" she asked.—New York Sun.

EARL HAVER IS IMPROVING FROM SEVERE INJURIES

Earl Haver, who has been confined to his home since Saturday evening when he was injured while clinging to the step of a crowded trolley car, is doing well at his home.

It seems that Haver was the last one of twenty persons to get aboard a Bound Brook car at the Prespect avenue crossing Saturday evening. The car started up, it is said, before those who were ahead of Haver could move forward sufficiently so that he could get up on the platform and as he was clinging to the step he was struck on the legs by a guard contrivance of boards and a sewer pipe placed around a house connection trench being dug in front of Gustav Winter's property. The boards were knocked off of the pipe and one of the pipes was knocked over and broken. Haver was fortunately able to retain his hold. Witnesses say that if his hold had been broken that he might have been killed. He staid on the car until he reached Bound Brook when the injuries sustained by his limbs commenced to bother him and he returned home.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Perrine have moved from one of the Merschrod houses on North avenue to Somerset street, Plainfield.

Edwin Lewis, Edgar Shively and son, Alvin, spent Decoration Day at Coney Island.

Miss Nellie Wahl, who has scarlet fever, is improving.

MRS. BENWARD IMPROVING.

Mrs. Peter Benward, wife of the night gateman at the Washington avenue railroad crossing, is reported to be doing better at Hampton, where she went upon the advice of her physician.

Mr. and Mrs. Garry Felmer, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Hayes and two children, all of New York, were entertained by Mr. and Mrs H. A. Wickham, Decoration Day.

Martin Bowman and Paul Kratzel enjoyed Decoration Day in fishing off Sandy Hook. They caught forty fish between them.

Mrs. Edward Krinic has returned from a visit of several days at Newark.

Mrs. Alexander Stillwaggon is ill.

TO GIVE CANTATA.

"Queen Esther," a cantata, will be given by the choir of the First Baptist church in the church this evening for the benefit of the pipe organ fund.

Margaret Vail, daughter of Mrs. Fred Vail, was detained home from school today by a sore throat.

PARENT-TEACHER MEETING.

Little business of importance was transacted at the last meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association for the year held in the Lincoln School. The committee in charge of the Baby Welfare exhibit reported the affair a success. Following the meeting there was a short entertainment.

REPAIRING STAND.

The stands at Maurer Oval are being put in shape for the large crowd which will undoubtedly flock there after the Sunday-school parade Saturday afternoon has passed to witness the local team and the Plainfield Tabs fight it out in the race for the pennant. The game will start at 3:30.

Richard Schwoerer has taken a position with the Hall Printing Press Company.

R. Percy Vail has purchased a new automobile.

Daniel Moody has been awarded the contract of repainting Robert Fairbairn's farmhouse down country.

South Plainfield.

The members of the Sodality of the Sacred Heart church are making great preparations for the euchre and dance which they will hold in Washington Hall tomorrow evening. The euchre will start at 8 o'clock and will be followed by dancing. Music will be furnished by Stuart's orchestra, of Plainfield. Arrangements also have been made with the Suburban Transit Company to make special trips from Plainfield. The first bus will leave in front of Proctor's Theatre at 7:30.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward TenEyck have been entertaining Miss Pauline Soper, of Elizabeth, for the past few days.

The Misses Margaret and Anna Hamilton have returned home after spending Decoration Day with their grandmother, Mrs. Margaret Hamilton, of Fords.

Vincent Sanatoro has returned home after being the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Pomponio, of New York, over Decoration Day.

Miss Rebecca Bradley, of Irvington, has gone to her home after being the guest of her uncle, George Sandhere.

Mr. and Mrs. William Andrews have been visiting relatives in Scranton, Pa.

Thomas Saverd, who is ill with pneumonia, is improved.

John Conger, of Easton, was the guest of his mother, Mrs. Charles Blackford, yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. George Bradbury returned yesterday after spending a day with friends in Newark.

HOUSE VOTES MORE FOR AERIAL DEFENSE

Authorizes Armor Plant to Cost $11,000,000.

Washington, June 1.—The house voted into the naval appropriation bill a rider authorising the construction of a government armor plate plant at a cost of $11,000,000, and also increased from $2,000,000 to $3,500,000 the appropriation for aeronautics.

The Republican minority, through Representative Roberts of Massachusetts, offered the amendment for a larger sum for aviation. It was adopted by the close vote of 114 to 16. If the Democrats of the committee insist upon the smaller appropriation called for in the bill they will be entitled to a separate roll call on this amendment when the naval bill is put on final passage Friday.

The Republicans stubbornly fought the provision for a government armor plate factory. The action of the house ends the armor plate controversy, however, as the senate had previously passed the bill that was made in order as a rider upon the naval budget. This bill, sponsored in the upper chamber by Senator Tillman, was included in the house naval supply bill because of the fear that it might not be reached if it took its regular course on the congested house calendars for miscellaneous legislation.

Representative Thomas S. Butler of Pennsylvania offered an amendment that was generally supported by his fellow Republicans, providing that construction of a government armor plate plant should be delayed pending an investigation by the federal trade commission of the prices the government should pay for armor plate.

The Butler amendment stipulated that private manufacturers should be given an opportunity to meet a price decided to be fair by the trade commission. In the event the secretary of the navy was able to make a satisfactory contract with private manufacturers, the Butler amendment provided, construction of the government plant should not be begun.

GERMANY NEAR STARVATION.

Food Question Is Becoming a Most Serious Factor.

London, June 1.—Investigation of reports on the actual food situation in Germany reveals the fact that conditions are becoming worse daily. Officials are no longer able to conceal the alarming state of affairs. The food situation is threatening to become the most important factor of the great war.

It has been said that the German government prompted the alarming reports of a food shortage months ago with a view to misleading enemies. This idea is entirely unfounded. It is obvious that the German authorities are unable to stage food riots throughout the country, thousands of women and children waiting all night in front of the provision stores and the ever growing discontent of the people which is apparent on all sides.

GIRL TRIES SUICIDE.

Paterson Young Woman Brooded Over Mother's Death.

Paterson, June 1.—Brooding since the death of her mother a year ago and the loss of her father a month ago, Hattie Young, twenty-six, tried to end her life. She dropped a note out of her bedroom window and turned on the gas.

An hour later a passerby discovered the note, and the door to the girl's room was forced. She will recover.

BORDER FEARS TROUBLE NEAR

Obregon Calls on All of His Countrymen.

GREAT TROOP MOVEMENT.

Carranza Force Marching to Point Where Pershing's Line Could Easily Be Cut and Americans Isolated—First Chief's Note to Washington Adds to Complication.

El Paso, June 1.—Starting from Villa Ahumada, three thousand Mexican soldiers are marching westward in the direction of El Valle.

General Gavira, commander of all Mexican forces in north Chihuahua, left Juarez for Casas Grandes.

Mexican artillery is being centered along the Mexican National railroad line between Juarez and Chihuahua.

Minister of War Obregon has called upon all Mexicans, regardless of past factional adherences, to take up arms and commissions in the army of Carranza.

Mexican Consul Garcia in El Paso has posted a bulletin calling upon all Mexican citizens living in El Paso to register at the Mexican consulate.

The above apparently unrelated developments of the past two days, together with the presence of the last Carranza note in the hands of United States state department, are conditions that are daily increasing the size of the giant interrogation mark which symbolizes the mental attitude of the citizenship of El Paso.

"What's going to happen next?" is the cry of the borderland. The military observers are beginning to wonder whether the presentation of the Carranza note and the completion of the movement of 30,000 Mexican troops in northern Chihuahua at the same time is a coincidence.

Think They Can Fight.

It is further believed here that the Mexican opinion, popular and official, is that Mexico now occupies a military position sufficiently strong to support its increased insistence with a demonstration of force.

The departure of the comparatively large and fast moving column of Mexican cavalry from Villa Ahumada in the direction of El Valle is looked upon with much concern by borderland authorities who are familiar with the location, strength and equipment of General Pershing's command.

El Valle is about forty miles west of Villa Ahumada. It has no railroad and is one of the most vital points in the Pershing expedition southermost line of communication. A sudden foray at this point by a superior number of Mexicans would if successful cut the American line of communications in two and leave the Namiquipa base cut off from the border.

Without communications by rail or wire the isolated American forces might find themselves seriously embarrassed in such an event as a break in the long line behind them. Protestation, diplomatic and personal, by Mexican representatives against the possibility of such an occurrence cannot be counted upon in the belief of those who have had personal experience with the extent of the control which the officials boast of having over the detached units that represent the army of Carranza.

When the Pershing expedition brought artillery into Mexico the native officials openly characterized it as an evidence of insincerity of purpose on the grounds that cannon were unnecessary in the pursuit of bandits.

Artillery at Border.

A man acquainted with the number of cannon available to the Mexican forces says that it would be safe to estimate that more than half of the artillery at General Obregon's command is now stationed along the Mexican National railroad, paralleling the American line of communications.

Newspaper correspondents and photographers who have asked General Gavira within the last week for passports to go to Villa Ahumada or other points of the Mexican mobilization between Juarez and Chihuahua have been refused with the statement that the Mexican government does not wish to permit Americans to place themselves in danger of attack by bandits.

This fact and the evident attempt of Mexican authorities to maintain secrecy over movements along that 500 mile stretch of all important railroad tracks have given rise to the belief that things are happening along that line which the Mexicans do not want Washington to know until the time is ripe.

"What's going to happen next?" is the cry of the borderland. El Pasoans who have watched the situation for years frankly admit they do not know. Among refugees from Mexico awaiting some definite information upon which they can base their future movements are up in air. Army officials daring not to hope and daring less to be quoted, plead ignorance; the borderland is being forced to wait and watch, and while it does it swears.

TROOPERS HOLD BIG FIELD DAY

Give Exhibition at Essex Country Club.

WAR TACTICS EMPLOYED.

Tilting, Tent Pegging and Drills Under Fire Displayed—Final Event Is Melee In Which Wooden Sabers Are Substituted For the Deadlier Weapons.

Newark, June 1.—An impressive showing was made by Essex troop before a large audience at the annual field day events held on the polo grounds of the Essex County Country club, Mount Pleasant avenue, West Orange.

Corporal Cecil C. Agate carried off the honors in the first event at tilting, which was open to all active members of the troop, winning the Colonel E. H. Wright medal. The affair was run on a course 378 feet long and included right cut against infantry, quarter point, left cut, tierce point, right cut horsemanship and saber exercises. Sergeant James Marshall carried off second honors, while third place went to Sergeant William Wherry.

Others qualifying for the final were Sergeant Phineas G. Staunton, Captain Russell Freeman and Trooper Thomas Shyrock.

The second event, ten pegging, was won by Trooper John Krueger, with two points, and Sergeant Philip Hedges second, with one and one-half points. In this event ten inch tent pegs are driven half way into the ground and the trooper is required to extract them on the point of the saber while riding at full speed.

Modern war tactics were displayed in the third event by a provisional troop of twenty-four men from Troop C, with First Lieutenant Hobart B. Brown of Troop C commanding. It consisted of a drill, including different methods of mounted and dismounted action and fire control; horses under good cover, linked by twos, all men dismounted except guard; troop in column of twos, surprised, men on side nearest enemy are dismounted; dismounted action from column fours, illustrating fire control by signal and advancing under fire; mounted action followed by a charge.

The final event, a melee between two teams of five men each from Troops A and C, was won by the former after a close battle. The affair was run off in three bouts of two minutes each, the side with the most plumes left at the end to be the winner. The winners, who wore the white plumes, were represented by Sergeant Hedges, Corporals Keasbey and Bryant and Troopers Alcott and Ryan. Troop C contestants included Sergeants French and Taff, Corporals Lee, Schouler and Kane. Each man was mounted and armed with a long wooden stick, with which he was to knock the plume from the helmets of the opposing riders.

First Lieutenant Hobart B. Brown was chairman of the committee in charge, assisted by Corporals Edwin C. Feigenspan and Douglas D. Schouler and Troopers Daniel A. Heald, Raymond I. Mount and Edmund C. O'Brien.

EXPECT U-BOATS IN MERCHANT FLEET

Von Buelow May Come to United States In Submarine.

London, June 1.—The feasibility of a German submarine merchant fleet is not discounted in naval circles here. On the contrary, there is believed to be no reason why it should not be attempted. It is even suggested that Prince von Buelow, if he desires to go upon a mission to the United States, as rumored recently, may cross the Atlantic in a submarine, which would achieve a spectacular effect. He would also avoid the risk of refusal of a safe conduct by the British.

There is a report that a transatlantic submarine has been built at Stettin and that it will shortly proceed on a sea voyage from Hamburg. The report is not discredited here. The estimated length of the boat is 450 feet, and the craft is said to be able to remain at sea for twenty days without touching port.

Naval authorities regard this as possible, as a British submarine went forty-eight days without touching port, moving all the time. The question as to what status such a submarine merchant fleet would have is speculative, but it is thought here that there is no reason why such boats could not be registered as merchantmen and enjoy the same privileges.

An interesting situation would arise if the boats carried passengers, the chief question being whether they would be warned and whether the safety of the passengers would be guaranteed in case the U-boat encountered allied warships.

Rebuilding In Dublin.

London, June 1.—Herbert L. Samuel, the home secretary, has gone to Dublin to take charge of the question of the rebuilding of houses destroyed during the recent revolt and the compensation of owners of buildings for the damage done their premises during the uprising.

Wilson a "Pontius Pilate."

Paris, June 1.—Jean Richepin, the academician, who contributes fervent not to say frenzied articles to the Intransigeant, concludes a protest against "unsolicited mediation" with the words, "If ever we ask for a mediator it will not be Pontius Pilate."

TALKS ON POWER, NO. 3

A Case in Point

Public Service Electric Company, Camden, N. J.

Gentlemen:

In reply to your letter of the 2d inst., we would state that prior to our contracting with you for electric power service, we made our own current, and we made the change with considerable fear and misgiving as to the probable outcome.

We are happy to state that results have been most satisfactory; inasmuch as, since the installation of your service, we have always had plenty of power and not once, to the best of our recollection, have we been compelled to lose any time through shut-downs on your part.

We have no objection whatever to your publishing this letter, if you see fit.

Yours truly,
R. H. COMEY COMPANY,
(Signed) L. A. GOODWIN,
Secretary.

In factories operated by engine-and-belting there is a loss of power, due to friction, varying from 27 per cent. to 75 per cent. of all the power used (Proved by tests).

It is usually 50 per cent. and over.

In an engine-and-belt-driven factory that in many ways represented usual factory conditions,

—A hundred horse-power engine was belted to the main shaft.

—By actual test the average load of this plant was 75 horse-power.

The friction load was 58 horse-power.

Therefore 58 per cent. of the total connected load, or 77.3 per cent. of all the power used, was wasted through friction.

A large number of test reports on file will prove that the friction-loss in this factory was not unusual.

We showed the owner of this factory how electric power eliminated friction losses and now he is one of more than 10,000 electric power users who are being supplied with current from Public Service's great system of 22 generating stations and 61 sub-stations.

Some customers have a connected load of several thousand horse-power each; for instance:

Edison Storage Battery Co.,	3953 H. P.
Lewis T. Nixon,	3884 H. P.
Manhattan Rubber Co.,	2300 H. P.

Day or night these 10,000 customers have an abundant supply of reliable power that may be easily and economically increased.

—And they have at their service, free of charge, a corps of highly trained Public Service engineers.

May we estimate the cost of operating your factory with Public Service power?

WOMAN BEATEN AND TIED.

Jersey City Intruders Attack Her as She Listens to Music.

Jersey City, June 1.—Mrs. Mary Allen, thirty-five years old, of 859 York street, this city, went to the front window of her home to listen to music in a house across the street. Her husband, Victor J. Allen, and their child were asleep in a bedroom nearby. As Mrs. Allen sat at the window two men who had entered through a window at the rear of the apartment came into the room, and when she ran one of them hit her on the head.

Mr. Allen awoke and found his wife unconscious on the floor, with her hands and feet tied. Dr. T. J. Hamill was called and attended Mrs. Allen, who regained consciousness and told her story. Fifty-three dollars was missing from Allen's trousers pockets.

MURPHY IS CHOSEN.

Elected National Committeeman by Unanimous Vote.

Trenton, June 1.—Former Governor Franklin Murphy was unanimously reelected a member of the national Republican committee for four years by the state Republican committee here. Mr. Murphy was placed in nomination by Hamilton F. Kean of Union county. Mr. Kean said Mr. Murphy had made an effective representative and that the state could not do better than to continue him in the national body.

The nomination was seconded by David Baird of Camden county.

Watchung.

A large number of members and friends of the Wilson Memorial church tendered a reception to Rev. Mebane Ramsay, pastor, last evening. The chapel was beautifully decorated with masses of flowers, palms and ferns. Addresses were made by Messrs. George W. Winans, George T. Hughes, Charles E. Nier, Henry R. Kennedy, Walter H. Vaysey, Arthur H. Spicer, Ephriam S. Ackor, Harry B. MacDonald, William E. Patte and Rev. Mebane Ramsay. Douglas W. Demler rendered several solos; Daniel H. Hawkins gave an appropriate reading and Frances E. Bodin recited. At the conclusion of the pleasant evening, which was enjoyed by all, dainty refreshments were served by the Ladies' Aid Society.

Miss Elsie F. Schmidt will lead the Christian Endeavor service tomorrow evening. The topic will be "How Missions Are Blessing the World."

Miss Mary Rose Eaton is confined to her home with scarlet fever.

Mrs. Samuel J. Robinson, of West Third street, who recently underwent a serious operation, is again critically ill and will submit to a second operation tomorrow.

Charles Everitt, a former resident of the borough, but now living in Brooklyn, returned home yesterday after spending several days with local relatives.

NO "PUSSY FOOTING" ON ROAD SITUATION

Over 100 Representatives Will Attend State Federation Convention.

Jersey City, June 1.—There will be no "pussy footing" on the road situation in New Jersey if the list of speakers scheduled for the annual convention of the State Chamber Federation at Beach Haven on June 15, 16, 17 is any criterion. Representatives from over 100 commercial agricultural and civic organizations will be in attendance and participate in the discussions.

The full program, just received by the Daily Press, plans for a reception by the Long Beach Board of Trade, retail affairs session, agricultural session, civic session, state roads session, club outing and annual dinner.

"This Beach convention," said Director Augustus V. Hamburg, "is a most striking proof of the development in community conscience. Two years ago when a few representatives met at Atlantic City to consider forming the Federation there was not one who had the vision for the organization that is a reality today.

"The Federation is a clearing house through the State Chamber of commercial, agricultural and civic organizations in New Jersey to promote the interests of their respective communities and to secure unity and harmony of action.

"The purpose of the annual convention is to establish a New Jersey forum. It is open to all who are interested. Each commercial organization, grange, women's club, civic society or automobile association is eligible to send delegates. The host of the convention will be the Long Beach Board of Trade. Ample hotel accommodations will be available at moderate rates and to reach Beach Haven there are adequate railroad facilities and good roads for automobiles.

The arrangements for the convention are in the hands of the Long Beach Board of Trade under whose auspices it will be held and the following special committee: James M. Reilly, Newark, Chairman; John J. Fitzgerald, Paterson; John H. Hankinson, Trenton; Hug Lynch, Perth Amboy; Mrs. Wilbur F. Osler, Leonia; Louis Voorhees, New Brunswick; Roscoe D. Wyatt, Hoboken.

LORD KITCHENER.
Head of British War Office Which Is Resident.

Lord Kitchener, head of the British war office, was made the target for the hardest criticism heard in the house of commons since the beginning of the war when Colonel Winston Churchill, former first lord of the admiralty, arose to discuss a motion to reduce Kitchener's salary. Churchill charged the war office with "grave mismanagement," "inefficiency" and "defective organization."

EXPERTS IN TRACKING.

Australian Natives of Both Sexes Trained From Childhood.

The Australian aboriginals are the finest trackers in the world, London Answers declares.

On many occasions they have performed feats which are almost beyond belief. But to them the work is quite habitual. The boys are taught to track from birth.

The women are just as expert as the men. Horse tracks are child's play to them. They can track a horse at full gallop. They can track anything—possums, snakes, iguanas, even beetles leave sufficient trail for them to work on.

The standard of honor among these tribes is high. When one of them breaks their strict code, fearing the wrath of the tribe, he bolts and, knowing he will be pursued, uses all his knowledge in an effort to elude those in search of him. But it is questionable if there is a single case on record where he escaped.

What might be called classes in tracking are held for the youngsters. The tutor will get them in a body and then disappear into the bush and do everything he can to make them lose his tracks. He will tiptoe along fallen logs, swim a quarter of a mile along a stream, double on his tracks, and so on.

Finally he returns to the boys, who then set out to pick up the tracks.

ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH.

Diet Hints For Sufferers Afflicted With This Trouble.

Acidity of the stomach and ulcerated stomach are largely on the increase in both England and America, if statistics are to be believed. And Dr. Willard J. Stone points out in the Journal of the American Medical Association that these are the two countries in which the consumption of sugar is greatest.

Dr. Stone recommends an almost starch and sugar free diet for persons troubled with acidity. He says the following articles of food may be eaten with safety: Fresh fruit pulp or fruit juices, such as grapefruit, oranges, peaches and watermelon, without sugar; broth, soft boiled or poached eggs, fish, chicken, broiled or baked meats, bacon, milk, tea, cream, butter, green vegetables, such as asparagus, spinach, cauliflower, watercress, endive, squash, carrots, turnips, lettuce, fruit and lettuce salads, with olive oil dressing containing a very small quantity of lemon juice; Brazil nuts, pecans or filberts.

The following foods are prohibited: Candy, sugar, sirups and condiments; the fresh fruits which contain more than 10 per cent carbohydrates, such as apples, pears, bananas, cherries, currants, plums; of the vegetables, peas, parsnips, beans, potatoes, corn; the cereals, rice, macaroni, bread, crackers, cocoa, chocolate and coffee.

Franklin as a Printer.

A letter of Charles Wilson Peale, who painted the first portrait of Washington, is dated Oct. 28, 1814, and discusses inventions, windmills, etc. In it he says:

"Dr. Franklin when he was a young man went to London and worked in divers shops and in different parts of the printing business. I heard a curious anecdote of him. He hired himself to work at press in an office. When a friend of the owner of the press came to see him, the printer told his friend that he was in great want of a compositor and asked where he could find one. 'I am much surprised that you should want a compositor when you keep a man at the press (pointing to Franklin) who is the best compositor in London,' he said."

Changed the Koreans.

Koreans were quick to quarrel in ancient days and won a bad reputation on this account. At one time, a historian explains, fatal quarrels became so frequent in the country that drastic measures were necessary. A law was promulgated ordering adult males to wear on all occasions a china headdress shaped like an inverted flowerpot. It was impossible to fight when crowned with this fragile gear, and the penalties for removing it were severe. The first offense entailed fifty blows on the soles of the feet, and the second meant decapitation. This decree had the most soothing effects, the nature of the inhabitants changed as if by magic, and Korea was called the Land of the Morning Calm.

SUMMER SCHOOL PLANS ANNOUNCED

Many Teachers Will Attend Annual Session at Asbury Park, June 6-13.

Many of the Sunday-school teachers of New Jersey will spend a week at Asbury Park from July 6-13, attending the New Jersey Summer School in order to better prepare themselves for the work of teaching.

In the past twenty-two years, hundreds of Sunday-school teachers and officers who have been giving their time throughout the year, have, at their own expense, traveled to Asbury Park and paid their hotel bills in order to be more successful in helping the children.

The teachers will be the finest that can anywhere be secured. Miss Margaret Slattery, former teacher in the Fitchburg Normal School, and now member of the Massachusetts State Board of Education, famous all over the country for her remarkable books and inspiring addresses, and Miss Nannie Lee Frayser, the wonderful story teller from Kentucky, will both be there.

Mrs. Maud K. Baldwin, of Pennsylvania, and Mrs. Florence Sears Ware, of Massachusetts, will teach the primary. Miss Frances Weld Danielson, who knows perhaps more about the very littlest scholars than any other woman in America, will give her best help, as will Prof. B. S. Winchester, of Yale.

The Bible will be taught by Rev. Dr. Leon K. Willman, formerly teacher of this subject in the Hill School at Pottstown, Pa., and the Rev. Dr. Frank K. Sanders, well known author and lecturer.

Frank L. Brown, superintendent of a school of 3,000 members in Brooklyn, and general secretary of the World's Sunday-school Association, will preside over the Superintendents' Conference, and Rev. Dr. Joseph Clark, of New York, will conduct a course in co-operative work among the Sunday-schools.

Rev. Dr. Milton S. Littlefield, who has won great reputation for showing how to make maps and do other hand work in the Sunday-school, will guide teachers of older boys, and Miss Constance Du Boice, daughter of Paterson Du Bois, author of "Beckonings from Little Hands," the teachers of older girls.

All classes of Sunday-school workers come to the school, not merely those who teach the children, but those who teach adults. Many superintendents not only send their teachers, but are enthusiastic enough to come themselves and this year a pastor's class has been added.

Teachers from schools of every sort are also present, not only the big city schools, but the little rural schoolhouse Sunday-schools. They may be at disadvantage during the rest of the year, but at Asbury Park they have the choicest teachers and every opportunity.

The school sessions are in the morning and afternoon, but there is a long noon time for bathing and the evenings are free for recreation and socialability. So the school is remarkable not only for the fine instruction it furnishes, but for the grand good times and the pleasant companionship which it encourages.

The school is conducted by the New Jersey Sunday-school Association, 835 Broad street, Newark, from which a booklet of sixteen pages fully describing the opportunities offered may be obtained.

YALE BATTERY "SORE."

President Hadley Refuses It Permission to Enter Preparedness Parade.

Hartford, Conn., June 1.—Much adverse criticism was heard here after it was learned that President Arthur T. Hadley of Yale had refused to permit the Yale battery to participate in the preparedness parade which is to be held in this city next Saturday.

The parade is intended to represent the whole state, and it is expected that between 18,000 and 20,000 persons will be in line. Former Governor Morgan G. Bulkeley is taking an active part in the arrangements and has pledged $1,200 toward the expenses of procuring horses, equipment and wagons. He offered to bear the entire expense of bringing the Yale battery and its guns from New Haven and also to furnish the necessary horses and mules.

JAPAN MAY MOVE IN CHINA.

Considers Shifting of Railway Guards to Disturbed Sections.

Tokyo, June 1.—The negotiations between the Chinese republic and Japan concerning the revolutionary disorders in Shantung province, which are alleged to be endangering the lives and property of Japanese residents, are occupying the attention of both the officials and people of Japan.

The situation was considered by the cabinet. Officials denied that the government has decided to send the Japanese guards who are patrolling the Chinese railroad in Shantung to other points where Japanese citizens are said to be in danger, but it is thought possible that this step may be taken before long unless satisfactory protection is provided by the Chinese government.

SAYS PRISONERS CAN BE EMPLOYED.

The question of employing prisoners in the county jail has come up in Monmouth. Judge Rulif V. Lawrence, of that county, has decided that they may be used on public construction work, but not in private industries or undertakings. A canning factory owner and a farmer both offer to give employment to the men in the Freehold jail, and charitably inclined persons have urged that the offer be accepted.

If Judge Lawrence's opinion is correct, we fail to see why Sheriff Otto cannot be allowed to carry out his plan of using the men in the Union county jail on county work. The Freeholders, for some unknown reason, seem to be averse to such a humanitarian move. The Trenton Times points out that while abuses might creep in if convict labor was leased to private companies or individuals, the taxpayers would get more benefit than they do now from the employment of prisoners at road work, as is now done in some sections of the State, and to which many of them are not adapted. Still if the law does not authorize such contracts there can be nothing done unless the Legislature amends the law.

There is no class of men in official service that should be recognized more favorably in the matter of pensions by the Government than the letter carriers. These men have hard work, and they do it faithfully and well. In this age, when all the big corporations are adopting pension systems, it is a shame that the United States Government cannot do better by the postmen than it does. In the public service the pay is none too large, and after reaching a certain salary there is no length of service which will make it possible to increase. The men stay on the job until they reach an age where it is impossible for them to get anything else to do, and then are thrown aside in much the same way that a manufacturer will discard a worn out machine. Justice cannot be done to these faithful employes too soon.

It is costing the United States $72,000 or more a day to keep the army in Mexico, in what appears to be a vain effort to capture Villa. Up to date most of his lieutenants have been taken, and it is said that several places where he has hidden ammunition and supplies have been discovered. If the Government offered one-quarter of what it is spending daily down there for his body, dead or alive, it's a safe bet that he would be produced within a week. All reports received from that section indicate that life, even that of a famous bandit, is held mighty cheap, and some one of his followers would undoubtedly be willing to shoot him and drag in the remains for $5,000 or $10,000.

If the demand of the great mass of the party is met, the Republicans will nominate Theodore Roosevelt at the convention which meets in Chicago next week. The reception which is being accorded him everywhere that he goes, proves that he is still first in the hearts of the great mass. There are probably hundreds of thousands who voted for other candidates in 1912 who want the opportunity to vote for T. R. this year, to show that they realize the mistake which was made then.

There seems to be a demand for Charles N. Fowler as the Republican candidate for President, according to newspaper reports. The demand apparently comes from Charles N. Fowler. If he got back into the Congressional race this year, he might do something, but the mere writing of a book on national issues will not make any man Presidential timber.

EX-CONVICT HAS SWELL JOB.

Detroit, Mich., June 1.—J. G. Reese, reformed robber and jailbird, is today in uniform as an elevator man for Henry Ford. He was hunted for a daylight robbery in Canton, O., and had jumped his bail, when he told his story to the auto philanthropist. Ford put him to work for a while, and then told him to go back and satisfy the law. When he presented himself in court and told his story, the prosecutors asked for his freedom, and he is now happy and efficient.

Professor E. Pluribus Jenkins, the new superintendent of the Hickeyville schools, will give a moving picture lecture with 4,500 feet of films at the schoolhouse next Thursday evening, showing the working of the human system and how to reduce the high cost of living. He will show the human stomach running on high speed and digesting breakfast food, and again running on secondary speed, digesting corned beef and cabbage. He will also show the effects of whiskey on the thorax. A free will offering will be taken and the professor will get enough to pay for printing the handbills if he is lucky. If the professor had lived in our midst very long he would take time by the fetlock and charge an admission at the door.

- Proctor's Theatre -

Through special arrangements made by the Proctor management, Thomas H. Ince, the renowned productor of some of the greatest photoplay spectacles of the age, presents H. B. Warner, the popular Broadway favorite, and now one of the most famous of Triangle players, in "The Beggar of Cawnpore," a photoplay that marks Mr. Warner's most triumphant accomplishment as a character delineator. "The Beggar of Cawnpore" is one of the first films ever to hit upon the Sepoy Rebellion of 1857 for its general theme. It is a welcome and healthy sign when photoplay-wrights dig into their histories for material, for the vivid impressions from the screen teach infinitely more than dry and dusty pages, and persons in general stand in great need of knowing how nations are made and disintegrated. "The Beggar of Cawnpore" is a Triangle play in six wonderful parts and is one of the swiftest, most amazingly picturesque screen dramas yet offered to the public, a photoplay that will indeed be hard to equal. In addition today Mack Swain, the genial funmaker, is seen in a Keystone comedy entitled "His Bitter Pill," and tomorrow the headline offering will be Theodore Roberts, assisted by an all-star cast including Carlyle Blackwell and Dorothy Davenport in a Paramount picture entitled "Mr. Grex of Monte Carlo," which was adapted to the screen from E. Phillips Oppenheim's famous story of the same name. There will also be a famous L-KO comedy presented on Friday, while Saturday will bring forth Julius Steger, in his first screen production entitled "The Blindness of Love," produced by the renowned Metro company. Another L-KO comedy will be provided on Saturday, to the intense delight of the children. An extraordinary production has been secured by the management for presentation on Tuesday in the form of Douglas Fairbanks in "The Good Bad Man," the identical picture that was selected from a score of others to inaugurate the opening of the beautiful new Rialto Theatre, New York.

.· Plainfield Theatre. ·.

Anniversary week programs at the Plainfield Theatre continue to draw capacity houses at every performance, the eight acts composing the bill being of a varied nature and sure to please both young and old. Manager Shannon today opens the last half of the week with another eight-act program, a complete change being presented this afternoon.

The feature for the last half of the week is the girl act entitled "Poppyland," a company of ten people with special costumes and scenery, entertaining with twenty minutes of pleasing singing and dancing. Tom Haverly presents an amusing sketch, assisted by his own company, while Lloyd and Gates and Shak and Dearville, a quartet of comedians, furnish funnisms to drive away the blues. Beside those already mentioned four other big acts are on the program, every one of the highest class obtainable at the best agencies in the city.

Tonight the fourteenth episode of the "Iron Claw" will be shown and tomorrow's picture portion of the program will have as its feature, "The Verdict," in the serial, "The Strange Case of Mary Page." The Pathe weekly will be shown on Saturday as well as one and two reel comedies and dramas.

GUESS WHO'S HERE?

DUNELLEN CHURCH IS 50 YEARS OLD

Will Celebrate Semi-Centennial With Exercises Sunday and Monday.

On Sunday and Monday the Methodist Episcopal church, of Dunellen, will celebrate its semi-centennial. The following program has been arranged:

Sunday, June 4—Morning, 10:30 o'clock, sermon, James William Marshall, D. D., superintendent of the New Brunswick District, New Jersey Conference. Afternoon, 2:30 o'clock, Sunday-school rally, H. S. Townley, presiding; address, Hon. Frederick A. Pope, Somerville, subject, "Master Builders." Evening, 7.30 o'clock, sermon, Walter Wesley Winans, D. D., pastor of M. E. church, Hempstead, Long Island.

Monday, June 5—Evening, 8 o'clock, Frederick J. Hubach, D. D., superintendent of Elizabeth District, presiding; reunion of former pastors and members followed by a social hour.

A list of the pastors of the church in order, with the length of their pastorate, will be of interest to no small number of the readers of this paper: C. E. Little, 1866-7; H. M. Simpson, 1868; T. D. Frazee, 1869; M. Herr, 1870; G. W. Gibson, 1871; J. A. Kingsbury, 1872; J. W. Marshall, 1873-5; C. S. Woodruff, 1876-8; S. D. Jones, 1879-89; A. S. Compton, 1881-3; James McGee, 1884; C. S. Van Cleeve, 1885; Geo. Krantz, 1886; J. W. Seron, 1887-90; W. C. Kinney, 1891-4; S. F. Custard, 1895-6; J. Mead, 1897; E. S. Jamieson, 1898-9; S. K. Doolittle, 190[illegible]; E. C. Dutcher, 1906-8; W. A. Knox, 1909-1913; D. W. O. Ramsey, 1914.

SONS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION TO ORGANIZE

A meeting for the organization of a chapter of the Sons of the American Revolution will be held at the office of Harvey R. Linbarger, 197 North avenue, this city, Wednesday night, June 14, at 8 o'clock, to which all members of the society or those eligible to membership residing in and about Plainfield are urgently requested to attend.

It is believed that there is a sufficient number of people in this city and vicinity eligible to membership to make a strong chapter. Continental Chapter, D. A. R., of Plainfield, has been interested in this movement, and the members have been doing all that they could to aid the cause along. It is understood that those who have the matter in charge are assured of the required number of members to form the chapter, but are anxious to enroll all who can and are willing to join the organization.

BICYCLE THIEF GETS SENTENCE OF 90 DAYS

Benjamin Governale, of Newark, who stole a bicycle here Decoration Day, and then resisted arrest when four citizens caught him, was this morning fined $50 or ninety days by Judge De Meza in police court. Harry Guritzsky, a companion of Governale, who was charged with disorderly conduct, was fined $20 or sixty days.

PARTY'S VIRTUES TOLD BY BAKER

Takes a Fling at Republican Disorganization.

DEFENDS FOREIGN POLICY

Says Wilson's Is "the One Sane and Serene Spirit Which Will Redeem This Age"—Cites Achievements of the Democratic Majority in Congress.

Columbus, O., June 1.—A comprehensive account of the accomplishments of the Democratic party since the commencement of its control of the government was given by Secretary of War Baker in his speech at the Democratic state convention.

Mr. Baker asserted that the Republican party is no longer a coherent organization, but is an aggregation of factions.

He cited the federal reserve bank law as one of the greatest achievements of the Democratic congress, stating that the measure has "blessed every section of this whole nation with the assurance of a scientific monetary system.

Another measure which Mr. Baker claimed for the credit of the Democratic party is the rural credits bill, which, he declared, "will place the farmer on an equality with the merchant and the captain of industry in commanding the credit necessary to his enterprises.

He cited the Underwood tariff as one of the statesmanlike acts of the present congress, stating that it is "a conservative and promising start toward more sympathetic commercial relations between us and the other nations of the earth.

Further Accomplishments.

Secretary Baker mentioned the passage of the constitutional amendment providing for the direct election of senators and the federal trade commission as further accomplishments to be credited to the Democrats.

Mr. Baker declared that the increases of the army and navy were necessary in the interest of adequate preparedness.

He defended the policy of President Wilson both in regard to Mexico and in its respect to the belligerent nations of Europe.

He asserted that the executive has been "the one sane and serene spirit which will redeem this age, and when the election comes it will be found that the people of America, whatever their sympathies in the European struggle, realize that the one indispensable exponent of the mind, the friendliness and the ideals of America in the remaking of the old order in the old world is the finest type produced in this age by the new order in the new world—Woodrow Wilson."

DR. A. V. V. RAYMOND WILL MAKE ADDRESS

Former Plainfielder to Speak at Hartrdige School Commencement Exercises.

The announcement that Dr. Andrew V. V. Raymond, former president of Union College and now pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Buffalo, will deliver the commencement address at The Hartridge School the morning of June 9 is a source of great pleasure to a host of Plainfielders. Dr. Raymond was for some time a well-loved pastor in this town and is was from his church here that he was called to the Broadway Tabernacle in New York, and thence to Union College, which during his administration and through his efforts was enriched academically and materially.

Aside from Plainfield's personal interest in the man and the minister, his coming gives the school and its friends an opportunity to hear again an eloquent speaker who has the gift of couching inspiring thoughts in beautiful language.

Dr. Raymond spoke at the first commencement exercises of The Hartridge School, ten years ago, and he will find a warm welcome awaiting him on his return.

INTERESTING MEETING AT PARK AVENUE CHURCH

An interesting meeting will be held at the Park avenue Baptist church tomorrow night, when all who have united with the church since Dr. B. S. Hudson became pastor will meet for a prayer and song service. All are asked to bring their Biederwolf song books. The meeting will begin at 8 o'clock.

TO REPAIR ALL SCHOOL BUILDINGS IN BOROUGH

During the summer vacations many repairs will be made to school buildings in the borough of North Plainfield. At a meeting of the Borough Board of Education held Monday evening the building and grounds committee, through F. O. Dunning, told of the need of school improvements and the committee was authorized to have the work done. School janitors are to be given two weeks' vacation with full pay.

The Board refused to alter a recent decision raising tuition fees to $60 a year. F. E. Bodin, representing the Board of Education of North Plainfield township, appeared before the Borough Board and asked for a reduction of the tuition rate. He was told that it could not be reduced. Payment of bills amounting to $4,439.63 was authorized. The Board adjourned to meet June 19, when forty diplomas to be presented to graduates at the commencement exercises of June 23 will be signed.

AVOIDED THAT ONE.

Dearie, if you had it to do over again would you still marry me?

I certainly would. You'll have to find some better excuse than that for starting an argument.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

A Fox Proves To Be a Good Friend.

It Set Up a Loud Scream.

[Adapted from Grimm's Fairy Tales.]

"I KNOW a good fairy story," said daddy, taking Jack and Evelyn on his lap. When they clapped for him he told them: "A gold bird once tried to steal a king's gold apples. So the king ordered his gardener's sons to go and find the gold bird. Two of the sons failed because they would not take the advice of a fox they met by the roadside. But the youngest lad did as the fox said and stayed all night in a poor little inn instead of the pleasant one, where his two brothers had made merry and forgotten their duty.

"After the young lad had rested in the mean little inn the fox came to him and said: 'Go straight on till you come to a castle before which lies a troop of soldiers fast asleep and snoring. Don't notice them, but go into the castle and keep going till you come to the room where the gold bird sits in a wooden cage. Close by it stands a beautiful gold one. But if you take the bird out and put him in the gold cage you will be sorry for it.'

"Then the fox stretched out his bushy tail, the lad sat down on it, and away they flew over rocks and hills till their hair whistled in the wind.

"It all happened just as the fox had said. So the lad went into the castle and found the room where the golden bird sat in his wooden cage. Close by stood the gold cage and three gold apples the bird had stolen from the king's tree.

"Then the lad said to himself, 'How droll it would be to carry off this gold bird in a shabby old cage!' So he opened the cage door, took hold of the bird and put it in the gold cage. But at once it set up such a loud scream that all the soldiers woke up. They took the lad, made him a prisoner and led him before the king.

"The next morning all the king's court sat in judgment of the lad and doomed him to death unless he could bring the king a gold horse that could run as swiftly as the wind. If he did this he was to have the gold bird for his very own.

"So in great sadness the lad set out again, when all of a sudden he met his friend, the fox. 'Heyday, young gentleman!' cried the fox. 'You see now what happened to you for not taking my advice about the gold cage. But I can help you find the gold horse that goes faster than the wind if you will do as I say. You must go straight on till you come to the castle where the gold horse stands in his stall. By his side his groom is fast asleep. Take the horse, but don't change his old leather saddle for the gold one close by.'" Then daddy stopped.

"Oh, daddy! Couldn't you tell some more?" cried the children.

And daddy hugged them good night.

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

Ralph's Virtuous Mother-in-Law Will Tell Him a Thing or Two.

"It certainly is a very pleasant house," Mrs. Mertage's tone was gracious, and she looked fondly at her daughter, whom she regarded as the chief ornament of the well-appointed home. "I am so glad Ralph was able to get such a place in this impossible little town."

"The worst of it is, I am afraid it will be sold and we will have to move next year. Mrs. Townsend is anxious to dispose of it," answered Ethel fingering her mother's handsome velvet wrap.

"Sold! Hasn't Ralph bought it? You said he had bought it when you showed me the kodak. Why does he not buy it at once and not run any risk about it? There is not another place here fit to live in; at least that could be rented," she added, looking out at the pretty Morton home next door. Ethel shrugged her pretty shoulders and said:

"Oh, he says he has no money. Indeed I knew that, but he said he had a good salary, more than enough to support us nicely; that we could save enough to buy the house"—Ethel paused.

"Well, why does he not do it, then?" asked the mother elevating her brows.

"Because it takes every cent he makes to pay running expenses. Ralph blames me for extravagance, but I have had not a single thing to wear—that is, nothing but gloves, and silk stocking and a fall hat and a coat and——"

"Why, certainly, a woman has to have certain essentials. I am surprised at Ralph. He never seemed to be niggardly before you were married." Mrs. Mertage looked indignant.

"Oh, he is not exactly niggardly," explained Ethel, virtuously standing up for her husband, "but——"

"Well, I call it plain niggardly," interrupted the mother. "No man has a right to marry who cannot keep a wife in as good style as she has been accustomed to. I wonder at Ralph." Mrs. Mertage looked militant.

"Oh, I suppose he did not know how much it cost to live. I did not. You never said anything to me about it."

"It is the man's business to know how much it costs to live, and he should be very sure he can furnish a respectable income before he asks a girl brought up as you were to be his wife. To think that you of all girls should be called upon to have financial troubles—you who have never had to give money a thought." She looked dolefully at her daughter. "I always said to your father: 'Don't talk to me about money matters. That is your province. You furnish the money, my part is to spend it.' And he always did. I will say that for him. He had his faults, but after the first year he never bothered me about economy. I never could have respected him if he had not been able to keep up his end....'"

"He must have made a great deal," interrupted Ethel. "We always had all we wanted."

"I know nothing about it. I have no head for business as I told him. I must talk to Ralph. I fear you do not know how to stand up for yourself, you have been so protected all your life. Ralph is young. He must be told a few things." Mrs. Mertage's lips were drawn in a straight line of determination.

"Oh, don't mamma, he will not like it and——"

"Like it!" echoed the mother. "I do not care whether he likes it or not. I do not like it that my daughter has to be pinched financially, when she has always been used to everything."

"Please do not say anything to him. I want everything to go smoothly while you are here, and——"

"Well, you leave that to me. I guess he will not treat me disrespectfully." Mrs. Mertage gave her head a determined nod.

THE WOMAN'S COLUMN

New York—Another busy week is before the clubwomen's delegates at the Biennial. Every minute is provided for, from now until Friday, when the delegates will be homeward bound. The most general topic of the various State circles is the election of a new president of the General Federation. Mrs. Samuel B. Sneath, who comes from Ohio and Louisiana, has made a favorable impression during her campaign for the office, to succeed Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker, of Texas. Mrs. Sneath is a bank official in New Orleans, and maintains her old home in Tiffin, O. Her campaign manager is Miss Anna B. Johnson, of Springfield, O. Mrs. Pennybacker has said that she will leave office with a feeling of relief, for the extensive travelling and arduous labors of the national president make the office a trying one.

Milwaukee—"Future medical training depends on learning a few things well," said Dr. Sarah Hobson, of Chicago, in a recent address before the Wisconsin Homeopathic Society. "The great necessity of a student is that he or she read widely, but with discrimination, and thereby learn the law of similars. The duty of a physician is to relieve the suffering and teach patients how to keep well."

Washington—The most potent influence against the present boom in behalf of Justice Charles E. Hughes for the Republican nomination for the presidency is that of Mrs. Hughes, it is said. Mrs. Hughes, according to friends of the family, has declared the family shall not sacrifice itself to politics. "We had no family life in Albany," she is quoted as saying. "We have a family life now and while Mr. Hughes remains on the supreme bench it will endure. But it would end with our entrance into the White House. I know what it would mean and I shall never give my consent."

San Francisco—Dr. Lillian Jane Martin, acting head of the department of psychology at Leland Stanford University, and a member of the faculty since the University was opened, will be retired at the end of the present college year. Her retirement, at the age of 65, follows a long and efficient service as an educator. She was born at Olean, N. Y., and studied at Vassar and the University of Gottingen. She taught in San Francisco High School for ten years before joining the Stanford faculty under Dr. David Starr Jordan in 1899. She has written some notable works on psychology in the German language.

St. Louis.—One of the most interesting women visitors that St. Louis has entertained lately is Mrs. Catherine Booth-Clibborn, called "La Marechale" by the French people since she led her Salvation Army legions into that country. She is the eldest daughter of the founders of the Salvation Army. She commenced speaking at 14, and, though handicapped by physical weakness, she was successful in a long campaign in France and Switzerland, and other European countries. She was insulted, persecuted and imprisoned for offending against accustomed forms of religion and because of the prejudice against women preaching. She is the mother of ten children, the oldest of whom is 26. Her daughter is aiding her in conducting meetings, and the eldest son is doing Red Cross work.

San Francisco.—Mrs. W. A. Scott, society and club woman, has been serving as chairman of the board of governors of the National Service Training School, which will be opened at the Presidio on Thursday. Mrs. J. Franklin Bell, wife of the commander of the western division of the army; Mrs. Philip Andrews, wife of the commandant of the naval station at Yerba Buena; Mrs. Mariana Bertola, of Mills College, and other prominent women are on the board. Nearly 500 patriotic women have been enrolled for the course in first aid, home care of the sick and sanitation. There will be drill work in military signalling, and the women will be encamped for two weeks.

MOTHERS' WORK

Conducted by the Plainfield Mothers' Association. Every Thursday

Contributing Staff.
Mrs. Joseph Smith and Mrs. J. C. Evans.

The pupils of the science department of the High School, under the direction of Mr. Hubbard, gave a splendid demonstration of the work being accomplished in that line at the parent-teachers' meeting last Thursday evening.

A mother seemingly reaches a crisis in her life when her child begins to make decisions without her aid or advice. She feels that he is going into a far country where she cannot follow, because she cannot penetrate his mind and know his thought and feelings, just as when he was a little boy or her daughter a little girl. During those early years of childhood mother's opinion was generally accepted without dissent, so now it is hard for her to realize that her almost grown-up son or daughter has a strong mind of his or her own. A mother said a few days ago: "Clara won't listen to me any more. She has such curious opinions of her own, and wants to make her own decisions, and, of course, I see that she is right in a way, yet her opinions are often so at variance with my own, and I cannot help but feel that with my larger experience and wider knowledge of life, that I am right and she is wrong, and it worries me because she cannot see things as I do." Did we see "things" as our mothers saw them? If it were possible to have done so, we undoubtedly would have been wiser in many ways than we were. If the child cannot get the parents' viewpoint, then the parents must get the child's point of view.

When the individuality of a boy or girl begins to stir from within, something is going to happen. He or she is dominated by an impulse to stand alone, for the time being, to formulate opinions, to make unaided decisions. They glory in their newfound power.

Many mistakes they will make, yet some of our most lasting lessons have been learned through mistakes. A mother was telling her grown son that he should do so-and-so about religious and political affairs. He turned and said: "Mother, I am a man now, and must think these things out for myself. I am willing to discuss these matters with you, and I have great respect for your opinion, but I feel that I must ultimately make my own deecisions." The Mothers' Magazine for May published an article, "Getting Your Child's Point of View," by Hildegarde Hawthorne, in which she says, quoting some mother: "I think the greatest joy I have as a mother is the knowledge that I know my youngsters trust me. They feel sure that I will get their point of view and act according to that. And that gives them a sense of security."

"They can appeal to me directly, as man to man, if I may put it so. I'm not someone living in a world of which they know nothing, and incapable of comprehending theirs, but a comrade who understands. My influence is great because I see things as they see them in addition to my own point of view."

"A child's mind is acutely interesting."

"The reasons that lie behind his actions are usually far clearer and more coherent than the adult reasons, with their growing complexities."

One of the most deplorable things a mother can do, and which will bear evil fruit in after years, is to deliberately lie to and deceive her child. A mother took up the 'phone and pretended to call the Bogie-man for the benefit of little Charlie, who had been crying for more candy.

"Hello, Mr. Bogie-man, Charlie is a bad boy today, what can I do with him? What's that? You'll come and get him if he asks for any more candy? I'm to let you know? All right. Good-bye." Then to Charlie, "Did you hear that? Better not cry any more for candy unless you want the Bogie-man to come."

Again, a mother bought two fine vases, beautifully hand-painted. She did a little painting herself, and when her son, a boy of sixteen, said, "Why, mother, what jolly fine vases, did you paint 'em?" she replied, "Why, didn't you know I did it. I do lots of things when you are out." A trifling deception, perhaps, yet can we wonder if that boy is deceptive?

The Best You Have.

By Madeline Bridges.

There are loyal hearts, there are spirits brave,
There are souls that are pure and true;
Then give to the world the best you have,
And the best shall come back to you.

Give love, and love to your heart will flow,
A strength in your utmost need;
Have faith and a score of hearts will show
Their faith in your word and deed.

For life is the mirror of King and Slave,
'Tis just what you are and do;
Then give to the world the best you have,
And the best will come back to you.

HOW BLOTTERS ABSORB INK.

Being a Simple Explanation of Capillary Attraction.

Every student of physics knows that water will run up a narrow tube by capillary attraction. Anything immersed in water has a similar attraction for the water—that is, the object becomes wet by the water that clings to it. The amount is limited by the weight of the liquid itself. Place your hand in water and your hand when withdrawn is wet. The limited attraction between the hand and the water is gauged by the weight of the water that clings to the hand.

Imagine several hands placed close together in water, but not touching one another. If this composite hand were formed of ten single hands it would attract ten times as much water as the one hand would attract and hold on its surface. So a wisp of hay, composed of a hundred spears of dried grass, placed in water will remove a hundred times as much of the fluid as would cling to one spear. Bushes in a marsh will remove a certain amount of water, which will by capillary attraction cling to their submerged parts.

Under the microscope fibrous blotting paper when absorbing ink resembles on a small scale a marsh matted with shrubs and sticks and twigs around which water is flowing, as ink runs about and among the fibers that together form the spongy paper. There is a limit to the amount of liquid which a blotter will absorb, as there is a limit to the amount of water that a marsh will absorb without overflowing. That limit in the blotter is the combined capillary attraction of the fibrous shrubs and sticks and twigs that together form the paper.—Popular Science Monthly.

EQUINE EVOLUTION.

There Was a Time When the Horse Was Only Two Feet High.

The variations which lead up to the formation of a new species are so imperceptible, they stretch over such a vast period of time, that their survival value from generation to generation is and must be very slight. Take the case of the horse, for instance.

The development of the horse seems to stretch over a period of at least 3,000,000 years, or from the eohippus of eocene times, an animal less than two feet high and probably weighing less than a hundred pounds, to the horse of late tertiary times, the pliohippus, much like the superb creature we know today, five feet high and weighing 1,000 or 1,200 pounds.

If this animal increased in height only one-quarter of an inch in 10,000 years he would be six feet high in less than 2,000,000 years. So, if we allow him 3,000,000 years to develop in, his increase in height must have been even less than one-fourth of an inch in 10,000 years.

Think of it! Our horse of today might be increasing or diminishing in size at that rate and the fact never be noticed during the whole period. In weight the same—one-eighth of a pound in a hundred years, and he would weigh 14,000 pounds in less than 2,000,000 years, a rate of increase that our scales would hardly detect in a century of time.

The transformations of the other animals have probably been equally slow. Science would feel safe in saying that a flying fish never becomes a bird. But can we conceive how slight the change would have to be in every thousand years to bring it about in geologic or biologic time?—John Burroughs in North American Review.

Don't Whip a Child In Anger.

It is absurd to whip a child who is overcome by anger. The best thing to do is to let him alone and let his passion wear itself out. If he could be taken before the anger gets the upper hand of him he might be controlled.

What the parent should do is to study the things which will arouse the child's anger and then avoid these things. It is the height of folly for a parent to excite anger in a child and then try to control it by punishment. It is worse than folly; it is brutal and is likely to ruin the child.—Mother's Magazine.

A Widow at Nine.

Marriage at the age of thirteen, as in the case of a woman who has just died at Shoreditch, would not have been regarded as extraordinary in the seventeenth century. In those days children of noble families, particularly wards in chancery, were frequently wedded at the age of nine and sometimes even at five. Little Moll Villiers, the Duke of Buckingham's daughter, was not merely a wife, but a widow, at nine, and we read of her romping in the garden and climbing cherry trees in her widow's veil. In almost every instance, however, such marriages were in name only, and the little wives were allowed to reach their teens before taking up the burdens of wedded life.—London Telegraph.

EVIDENT NEED FOR A SCHOOL IN SCORE KEEPING.

When the City League convenes for its weekly session next Monday night one of the principal bits of business to be transacted will be an investigation into the game records being kept by various scorers. At the suggestion of the Plainfield Daily Press sporting department league officials have promised to inquire into the cause for incomplete tallies that have come to hand during the past two weeks and some agreement may be reached whereby competent record keepers will be placed in charge of this important phase of the organization's work. While there may be some kicks forthcoming over the publication of Tuesday's box scores by local papers yesterday the leaguers have no ones but themselves to blame for the inaccurate figures. Whether because of incompetency or sheer neglect in many cases the box scores were minus a number of important features, while in several instances records were not received until late yesterday morning. There is absolutely no excuse for this tardiness. The games were completed by 5 o'clock Tuesday night and just why we should have to wait until 11 o'clock yesterday morning for the returns is a mystery. A school in score keeping may prove a valuable asset to the local loop.

WELCOME ADDITION TO THE CITY LEAGUE.

"Walt" Nelson, another former Plainfield "Pet" and Central New Jersey League star, has cast his lot with the City circuit. "Big Six," as he was dubbed while sporting a Pet uniform, has been singled out on more than one occasion as the best backstop in these parts and that he should decide to line up with some of his old teammates on the local circuit is a cause for rejoicing from some quarters. Two years ago he was offered a berth on the Boston Red Sox waiting list but preferred to stick to the position he holds with the Central Railroad and get his recreation Saturday afternoons. Besides being a clever catcher he can hit and use his think tank, and this latter quality is more than a whole lot of big leaguers are capable of these days.

ANYTHING SIGNIFICANT ABOUT THIS?

Just why the Netherwoods should have selected the same date as Johnny McGraw's club to discontinue their winning streak is one problem we'll probably never be able to solve, but the followers of the local aggregation anticipate the inauguration of a second string such as the Giants have already launched. The Netherwood's record establishes a creditable mark to be shot at by other City League clubs and will no doubt stand considerable battering before it is demolished. The East Enders have proven themselves to be good biginners and are optimistic of their chances of pulling down the pennant no matter how many stars the other five clubs can herd together.

ABOUT TIME TO STOP SIGNING NEW ONES.

Isn't it about time the league officials began to "shut-off" on newcomers? Present circumstances indicate that the league is going to keep on signing now material all season and if this is true there is bound to be some tall kicking from the regulars who were the original reporters to practice when the reorganization chord was sounded last month. There will have to be some limit put to this releasing and taking on stunt and the present is just as good as any time to shove in the stop-cock. Some good material has been brought into the fold to date, and it might be well to give the six managers at least a fortnight's notice of the closing down date for receiving.

Now that the City Leaguers have found a way to get around the Sunday baseball cards staged between league clubs the managements of the contending forces may be looked upon to sign some special Sunday talent. The practice of bringing rival league forces together outside the organization's schedule was one to be discouraged and the league officials took the only course when they put a ban on performances under league names.

Plainfield Country Club tennis officials set a time precedent for establishing a club title when they staged the preliminary rounds Saturday afternoon and the finals Tuesday. This is the way every tourney should be arranged, although it is not always possible, and other local clubs should take the tip and make the competition as compact as possible. This business of stringing out a title fight over a period of several weeks or a month is bad practice and serves to detract interest rather than stimulate it.

Queries--Comment--Answers

Query—What is the proper way to hang the American flag? J. T .C.

Answer—The flag should be hung with the blue field toward the left at the top as you are facing it.

Query—To settle a bet will you please tell me how many letter carriers there are in New York city? A says they were all in Plainfield Tuesday; B says not. A. B.

Answer—There are 2,733 carriers in Manhattan and the Bronx. They were not all here Tuesday.

Query—How many stories high is the Woolworth Building and what is its heighth in feet? J. M.

Answer—It is fifty-one stories high or 750 feet.

Query—Is there any way to ascertain the record speed for railroads? If so, what? X. Y. Z.

Answer—The best short distance run record is held by the N. Y. Central, the distance between Croton and Ossining, 8.51 miles, having been done in two minutes, or at the rate of 105 miles an hour. The best long distance mark is credited to the "20th Century Limited" of the Lake Shore in a non stop run from Elkhart to Toledo, 133 miles, in one hour and forty-seven minutes at the rate of 74.26 miles per hour.

DICK SHOTT RETURNS.

Hope Chapel will have the services of Dick Schott when it lines up next Saturday afternoon. Schott quit the Chapel outfit three weeks ago to accept a job with the Hopewell semi-pro team but has decided to sever connections with that combine and will be available for City League mound duty during the remainder of the season.

GAME CALLED OFF.

Owing to the death of Edward Coughlin, father of the two Coughlin boys, who play for the Netherwood City League club, the contest between that combine and the First Baptist team, scheduled for Saturday afternoon, will be called off.

NEW STRENGTH RECORD.

Cambridge, Mass., June 1.—All strength records at Harvard were broken yesterday by Charles E. Wright, of West Newton, a sophomore. Wright scored a total of 1486.9 points, exceeding the previous high mark made by George Percy, a member of the hockey team, by 44.5 points.

SEMI-FINALS AND FINALS IN GOLF TOURNEY AT THE P. C. C.

Competition in the semi-finals and finals of the spring championship golf tourney will be started at the Plainfield Country Club Saturday afternoon. The event will be eighteen holes, match play handicap and a big entry list has already lined up in the preliminary rounds. This will be continued the following week.

The qualifying round in the title fight was played May 27 and the first and second rounds were staged last Tuesday.

PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL CONFIDENT OF EVENING UP

The second interscholastic league meeting between North Plainfield and Plainfield High Schools will take place on Hyde Oval, North Plainfield, Saturday afternoon. Both teams are putting on the finishing touches in their preliminary practise work for the engagement and the local team is confident of taking the second and evening up the series.

The initial game went to the boroughites on Parker Field by the overwhelming count of 9 to 1. Since that time, however, the Plainfield coach has been grooming his pets in the weak points brought out in the first meeting and the second match will probably be harder fought. No announcement of batteries or officials has been made to date.

FRED CLARK AWARDED MARKMANSHIP MEDAL

Fred Clark won the national membership bronze medal provided by the government in conformance with an act of Congress for the best shot of the respective rifle clubs of the country at the meet of the New Market Rifle Club Tuesday on the F. O. Nelson range. The elimination ranges were at 200 and 300 yards and the finals at 500 yards, the following in addition to Clark qualifying: George Endicott, George Bennett, F. O. Nelson, Robert Randolph, Frank Ruckman. George Endicott obtained the second highest score.

Clark and Endicott also qualified as expert riflemen in a match conducted under government regulations, each receiving a bronze medal and a new Krag rifle from Uncle Sam. The ranges were 200, 300 and 500 yards; the first two being rapid fire and the last slow.

WOMEN BOWLERS SPILL THE PINS AT DUNELLEN

Dunellen women defeated a representative team of the fair sex of South Bound Brook at the latter place last evening in a bowling match, taking three straight games. The two teams have played a total of nine games this season and the Dunellen team has won seven of them. Miss Ruth Voorhees, the well known athlete, who is captain of the Dunellen five, would like to arrange matches with any woman's team in this vicinity.

The scores of last evening's games follow:

DUNELLEN.

Mrs. Apgar	114	85	113
Mrs. Vail	89	106	96
Mrs. Dice	115	130	104
Miss Voorhees	122	120	125

TIGERS TO PRACTICE EARLY.

Princeton's football squad will begin Fall practice on Sept. 12, thus allowing sixteen full days of work before the first game of the year, which is scheduled for Sept. 30. Every afternoon up to commencement Coach Rush will meet candidates for the team and give them primary instruction, especially in punting. The men are expected to keep in fairly good training during the Summer vacation.

QUALIFYING TITLE ROUND.

The qualifying round for the club championship will be played at the Westfield Golf Club on Saturday. This will comprise 18 holes medal play, the first sixteen to play at match play for the championship medal and a second sixteen to qualify for match play for the second sixteen cup. The match play rounds will be on succeeding Saturdays.

PUTTING CONTESTS.

Commencing next Saturday, the Westfield Golf Club will hold putting contests for women, the prize each week to be donated by one of the club members. The prize for next Saturday is donated by Mrs. J. H. Drake, and the contest is scheduled for 3 p. m.

LAST TAB CONTEST ON FOREIGN SOIL

Manager Scott Signs St. Peter Team for Sunday Afternoon.

Next Sunday the T. A. B. S. baseball team will leave its home grounds and journey to New Brunswick to meet the fast Knights of St. Peter's nine of that place. The Knights have a first class team and are stronger than usual this season and Manager Scott's men will have to go some to register a victory over this speedy crew.

McFadden, who pitched effectively last Sunday, will probably do the twirling with Teeling on the receiving end. As a good many fans have signified their intention of accompanying the team on this trip a special car has been arranged for and all those who intend to go may take the car at T. A. B. Hall at 1 o'clock or at the trolley station at 1:15 sharp.

After this game, Manager Scott expects to play every Sunday on Avon Oval. The attraction for a week from Sunday will be the strong Harrison P. C. from Newark.

OLDRING, FORMER LOCALITE, IS THIRTY-TWO YEARS OLD

Reuben Oldring, the blonde-haired outfielder, who is one of the handful of survivors of the old Athletics, and who at one time played semi-pro ball in Plainfield, was 32 years old Tuesday. Rube is so called because his name is Reuben, and not because he was born in New York City, although that might be sufficient reason. It will be remembered that Oldring announced his permanent retirement from baseball last winter, but a guy about his height and build and general appearance and who answers to his name has been playing with the Athletics this season, arousing the suspicion that Oldring reconsidered his determination to settle down on his farm at Shiloh, N. J.

Rube joined the Athletics 10 years ago, having previously played with Hoboken and Montgomery, Ala. He was given a trial by the Yankees in 1905, but didn't make good in his home town.

MANY WILL TEE UP.

Approximately 250 golfers will tee up in the three tournaments which are being held in the metropolitan districts today. The entry list in the New Jersey State championship at the Englewood course has passed the hundred mark, and it is expected that nearly that number will be on hand at the first tee at Wykagyl, where the Westchester championship will be decided. In addition to these events the women of the metropolitan district will hold forth in a one-day tournament at the Glen Ridge links.

YALE A. A. GOT $190,203.95.

New Haven, Conn., June 1.—Revenues of the Yale University Athletic Association for the year ended Aug. 31 last totaled $190,203.95, according to the annual report made public recently. The balance of the reserve fund is $90,267.74. The greatest revenue came from football. This item was $106,765.52. Baseball was next with $40,514.56. The expenses of the crew were nearly $25,000, and the receipts $5,500. The expenses of the track team also exceeded the revenues.

EDITOR PIERSON QUITS.

Truman T. Pierson, who for the past eight months has served as sporting editor of the Courier-News, severed connections with that publication last night. He has made no definite plans for the future.

LOCAL HORSE ENTERED.

Adam C. Blair, of West Sixth street, who has been the owner of a number of speedy race horses, will enter a new steed in the events at the Waverly track, Newark, Saturday afternoon.

OVERTON YALE CAPTAIN.

New Haven, June 1.—John W. Overton, of Nashville, Tenn., was last night elected captain of the Yale track team. He is a mile runner. Last season he was captain of the cross-country team.

SOME SPICY SPORT CHATS

Weeghman of Cubs Doing Everything to Please Fans.

ALL KINDS OF INNOVATIONS

Lets Chicago Know When Games Are Postponed, Etc.—Boston Braves Recover Old Jinx This Season—Other Notes.

Since organized baseball has entered the field of big business and left sport somewhat behind, it ought to take a larger view of the convenience of the public than it has as yet shown a disposition to do.

Charles Weeghman, now of the Chicago Cubs, has shown the right spirit in a recent innovation by means of which he hopes to be able to apprise fans downtown whether or not a game is to be played.

Lack of such information causes fans many useless trips to and from the baseball parks on days when the weather or ground conditions are uncertain.

Weeghman, according to dispatches, is arranging to have blue flags run up on all the prominent buildings in the loop district of Chicago whenever games are called off; a different colored bunting when the game is to be played.

Here are some other innovations the various major league park owners will sooner or later have to introduce and which if magnates were out to please fans they would start introducing right now:

Refund admissions instead of rain checks.

Free score cards, with key to the score board cipher where numbers are used.

Official ruling on all plays (shown by score board).

Clean grand stand and box seats.

There is a long list of other things that might be done to prove that baseball promoters are interested in deserving that little six bits or more which fans give up for all kinds of baseball—good, bad and indifferent.

In a way the Boston Braves are to be commiserated. Just as its jinx was believed to have been eliminated for several weeks he suddenly recovers and will shortly be seen in action.

Not everybody, however, "views with alarm" the return of Sherwood Nottingham Magee to the Braves' batting order. Many even think it something to be overjoyed about. And when you read the dope about the number of runs he drives across the plate annually you, too, will almost take this view.

But not quite. Just at the point of adopting it there comes to the mind the fact that, although Magee has always been a great hitter, he has also been a still greater jinx. Philadelphia had on several occasions fine chances to win the pennant, but something always happened to the team to kill its rosy outlook.

Last year when Magee changed over to the Braves it was thought the then world's champions would romp home with the 1915 flag. But nary a romp. It was a funeral procession in which Evers broke everything from his ankle to his promise not to swear and was able to play in only half the season's games. Everything went to pieces.

On the other hand, the club that Magee left—the despised and "wrecked" Phils—jumped out and beat Boston for the pennant!

Lee Fohl is sure of his job at Cleveland. He will be in charge of the Indians for the rest of the season at least, and it is not at all unlikely that he will be signed to a long term contract when his present contract expires.

The coming of Tris Speaker to the Indians started reports that he would be made manager. When these rumors reached Speaker he went to Owner Dunn and told him that he had no ambitions to lead any team and that he wanted to remain a player. He felt that Fohl had done wonders and proved himself a real manager and said he would be pleased to play under him for the remainder of his baseball days.

PLAINFIELD AT FOREST HILL IN INTERSECTIONAL TOURNEY

Plainfield women golfers, entered in the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association's international title fight, will visit the Forest Hill links tomorrow to play a scheduled match with the women golfers of that place. Last week the locals were idle, Forest Hill failing to put in appearance here.

Hollywood will play at Westfield tomorrow, Arcola at Montclair, Hackensack at Englewood, Norwood at Glen Ridge, and Cranford at Baltusrol.

SPORTS PROVE FAILURE.

Only two of Columbia's sports have been paying propositions so far this year, according to a partial report submitted by Graduate Manager Harry A. Fisher to the Athletic Association. In spite of a very heavy initial expense accompanying the return of football to Columbia last year, the gridiron game proved profitable, although the entire cost of erecting stands, fences, and of altering the playing field, were charged against the season's account. The other profitable sport is rifle shooting, adopted again this year after two years of suspension. Basket ball was played at a loss for the first time in ten years. By the end of the baseball season that sport will have netted a considerable sum, although at present there is a deficit, due to the cancellation of several important games because of unfavorable weather conditions.

NEW HOME-RUN RULE.

President Johnson made a new rule governing balls hit into the bleachers or grandstand at the Polo Grounds. In future a ball that goes into either structure inside the foul posts will be called a home run, no matter where it may land.

Everyone Should Drink Hot Water in the Morning

Wash away all the stomach, liver, and bowel poisons before breakfast.

To feel your best day in and day out, to feel clean inside; no sour bile to coat your tongue and sicken your breath or dull your head; no constipation, bilious attacks, sick headache, colds, rheumatism or gassy, acid stomach, you must bathe on the inside like you bathe outside. This is vastly more important, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do, says a well-known physician.

To keep these poisons and toxins well flushed from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, drink before breakfast each day, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will cleanse, purify and freshen the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from your pharmacist. It is inexpensive and almost tasteless, except a sourish twinge which is not unpleasant. Drink phosphated hot water every morning to rid your system of these vile poisons and toxins; also to prevent their formation.

To feel like young folks feel; like you felt before your blood, nerves and muscles became saturated with an accumulation of body poisons, begin this treatment and above all, keep it up! As soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and purifying, so limestone phosphate and hot water before breakfast, act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.—Adv.

WALKING FERNS.

These Curious Plants Travel About in a Novel Manner.

Some plants when they get the wanderlust and want to travel send out their seed children fastened to tiny airships or winged kites. Others shoot their seeds like bullets from guns. This one reaches out his foot, takes a long step and travels just like you do when you visit the woods. That's why we call him the walking fern.

His fronds are green and heart shaped. They taper at the ends, and at each tip a bud forms. From this bud a cluster of small fronds and roots develop, dangling from the end of the frond like weight on the end of a spring.

As the cluster grows and gets heavier the top of the frond bends toward the earth. The weight of the rain and dew helps bend until finally the tip touches the earth. There the partially developed roots take hold and start a new plant.

So the fern keeps on walking, sending out new fronds, bending them to the earth and starting new plants. The plants are linked together by the fine, threadlike fronds until instead of one walking fern they have a whole parade.

Unfortunately this interesting plant is more or less rare, although it is a native of the eastern United States. It doesn't thrive well as a cultivated plant, or perhaps we would see more of it.—Philadelphia North American.

FLIGHT OF THE ALBATROSS.

Wing Movements That a Chance Snap With a Camera Revealed.

During the voyage of a vessel from British Columbia to San Francisco the photographic test was applied to a long disputed point in natural history. A large albatross had been following the steamer and keeping pace with it for several hours, and the wonder grew among the watchers on board the ship how the bird was able to fly so swiftly while apparently keeping its wings extended without flapping them. As this is a common method of flight with the albatross, the explanation used to be offered that the bird took advantage of slight winds and air currents, and was so able to glide upon what might be called atmospheric slopes.

As the albatross sailed alongside the ship, about fifteen feet away, the naturalist snapped his camera at it and obtained a photograph that astonished him and his fellow passengers.

The photograph revealed, what no eye had caught, the wings of the albatross, each some five feet long, in the act of making a downward stroke. The explanation naturally suggested was that more or less frequently the bird must have made a stroke of this kind with its wings, although the eye could not detect the motion, and that the camera chanced to be snapped at precisely the right moment.—New York Post.

Some Big Trees.

What undoubtedly is the largest deciduous tree now growing in the United States is a sycamore near Worthington, Ind., which at five feet from the ground measures forty-two feet three inches in circumference. Its height is approximately 150 feet. According to local claims, this remarkable specimen is inferior to one long since felled in the same district, which had a girth of sixty-seven feet. A valley oak which measures thirty-seven feet six inches in circumference was the largest nut bearing tree found during a contest. This is situated in San Benito county, Cal., and reaches to a height of 125 feet. In a good season it bears a ton of acorns. America's largest elm seems to be "the great elm" at Wethersfield, Conn., which at the base has a circumference of over fifty-five feet. It is supposed to be about 250 years old. — Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Naming the Aegean Sea.

The Aegean sea is remarkable among the seas of the world for the obscurity in which the origin of its name is involved. Even the ancients could not give a certain answer on the point. A popular view was that it was named after Aegeus, the father of Theseus, who threw himself into it when his son forgot to hoist the white sail upon his return from Crete as a signal that he had slain the Minotaur. But others derived the name from Aegea, a queen of the Amazons, who also perished in this sea; others from the town of Aegae, in Euboea (Negropont), and a fourth theory traced it to the word "aigee," goats, which the islands of the archipelago were fancifully thought to resemble.

Who Is to Blame?

It is a very conservative thing to say that there are four women to every man in the church membership of America. Many people are wont to lay the blame for this upon the churches. Quite a number of folks would like to lay it upon the men. Some fault the women for it. Is it not possible that the responsibility rests upon our social structure?—Bernard I. Bell in Atlant'

Traits of the Zulu.

It is a recognized fact, says the Southern Workman, that the Zulu tribe is one of the finest in southern Africa. The Zulu has a sturdy frame, a strong chest, wonderful digestion, magnificent teeth and fine muscles. He can stand hunger, fatigue and exposure.

While he is slow to adopt modern methods of tillage, irrigation and fertilizing, he is beginning to recognize their advantages. His hospitality, indifference to pain, sense of humor, good temper, love of children and trustworthiness are all good traits in his character. "He is a manly specimen, not a cringing toady, and in his natural state a gentleman, every bit of him."

In general he is law abiding and obedient, and he is not purposely cruel. He has a strong musical sense and a remarkable knowledge of time and rhythm. His powers of singing, even when but slightly trained, are extraordinary.

CHINESE PRINTING.

Queer Old Ancient Methods Are Still Used by Many Natives.

Chinese hold that the art of printing was discovered in China about fifty years before the Christian era. Until the discovery of the art of paper making, A. D. 95, they printed on silk or cloth cut in the form of leaves. The method employed to this day by many native Chinese printers is substantially as follows:

No printing press is used. The delicate nature of the Chinese paper will not admit of it. When the blocks are engraved, the paper is cut and the ink is ready one man with his brush prints a large number of sheets in a day. The block to be printed must be placed perfectly level and secured firmly. The printer has two brushes, one of them stiffer than the other, which he can hold in his hand and use at either end. He dips it into the ink and rubs the block with it, taking care not to moisten it too much or leave it too dry. If it were wetted too much the characters would be blurred; if too little they would not print.

When once the block is got into the proper condition he can print three or four impressions without dipping the brush into the ink again.

The second brush is used to rub over the paper with a small degree of pressure that it may take the impression. This it does easily, for, not being sized with alum, it receives the ink the instant it comes in contact with it.

It is only necessary that the brush should be passed over every part of the sheet with a greater or smaller degree of pressure and repeated in proportion as the printer finds there is more or less ink upon the block.—Los Angeles Times.

THREE RACIAL INSTINCTS.

One Reason, Perhaps, For the Interest Taken In Baseball.

How shall we explain the absorbing interest in baseball and football? In baseball we have a game combining three of the most deep seated racial instincts—the instinct to throw, to run and to strike. During untold periods of the life history of our race survival has come to him who could throw the straightest, run the swiftest and strike the hardest. To throw something at something is almost as natural for a boy as to breathe.

Throwing, batting, running, are no longer of any service in this age of mind, but they were the conditions of survival in the distant past. Baseball reinstates those ancient attitudes and brings a thrill of cherished memories. Any one who has ever held a bat in hand and assumed the expectant attitude of the batter knows the peculiar thrill which is explained only by recalling that his distant ancestors in just that attitude beat down with a real club many an opposing foe, whether man or beast, and those who held clubs in this position and struck hard quickly survived and transmitted this instinct.

The awkward throw of girls, like the left arm throw of boys, is widely known. The plays of girls reveal their own set of instincts recalling the habits of primitive. "We are the descendants of those men who could throw and those women who loved children."—From "The Psychology of Relaxation," by G. T. W. Patrick.

Luck.

Luck is that which has made your successful neighbor what he is and has conspired to prevent you from becoming what you would like to be. Luck is good or bad, according to whether you are contemplating your neighbor's success or accounting on your own failures.

Luck is a handy little thing to have around, for if it does not benefit you it at least affords you an objective kicking point. Also, the mere mention of its name relieves you of the necessity of making many embarrassing excuses. Luck is a barb which may prevent disaster from poaching on your domains, but if it does not do this you at least have the satisfaction of impaling upon it all reasons for your defeat.

Luck is perhaps more unlucky than you are.—Judge.

East Indian Monkeys.

A naturalist who has traveled in the East Indies says: "The effect on the monkeys of man's appearance is most interesting. The expression of their emotions is certainly almost human as they sit and stare at him, coughing and snarling with anger and contempt, drawing back their heads and throwing the hand before the face with a gesture of abhorrence and other movements indicative of shocked and outraged feelings. But predominant is the expression of absolute horror, which, coming from those we consider our still degraded cousins, is to our superiority very aggravating."

Wonderful!

"Just think of it! A whole splendid dinner—soup, fish, entree, joint with two vegetables, dessert and cheese—for a dime!"

"Wonderful! Where can you get such a dinner at such a price?"

"Nowhere; but just think of it!"—Exchange.

No Help.

"Few actors are satisfied with their newspaper notices."

"Nor can they ever be. Of necessity the name of the actor must be printed in smaller type than the name of the newspaper."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

In every part and corner of our life to lose oneself is to be a gainer; to forget oneself is to be happy.—Stevenson.

LARRY EVANS.

THEN I'LL COME BACK TO YOU

By LARRY EVANS

AUTHOR OF "ONCE TO EVERY MAN"

Copyright, 1915, by THE H. K. FLY COMPANY

SYNOPSIS. — Stephen O'Mara, a homeless and friendless boy, starting from the wilderness to see the city, is welcomed to the home of Caleb Hunter and his sister Sarah. Stephen meets Barbara Allison, young and rich, and Caleb gives him a home. Barbara ridicules Stephen, who runs away, declaring that he'll come back when worthy of her. Caleb learns that Stephen was well born. Ten years later Stephen returns, still loving Barbara, and learns she is to wed Archibald Wickersham.

CHAPTER VIII.

Doctor and Patient.

FAT JOE leaned over and drew a blanket a little higher across the sleeping man's shoulder, while Steve continued silently to study Garry's face. Even in unconsciousness a faintly crooked smile of skepticism still clung to the lips.

"It was like him," Steve remarked at last very soberly. "Somehow the minute he began to speak I knew it was exactly the sort of thing I expected him to say. The probability of death is a much more amusing prospect to some men, Joe, than the perplexity of living."

Fat Joe flashed a swift, half puzzled glance at his chief's face. He started to ask a question, then scowled and checked himself and turned instead to kindle a fire in the stove of the lean-to kitchen of the cabin. But a half hour later he was still murmuring the last phrase over to himself perplexedly when Steve came leading the horse Ragtime up to the open door. Saddled and with reins a-trail, the animal had been wandering throughout the night about the upper end of the construction camp clearing. At the sound of hoofbeats outside Fat Joe left the stove and the half cooked breakfast he had set himself to prepare.

"So that's the way one of 'em come," he murmured. "I was wondering some. Last night I didn't notice the horse, being a mite too hurried to give ample attention to details, as it were. But ain't—ain't this one of Allison's horses?"

"No, Joe," Steve answered heavily. "He is from Allison's stables, but we have him to thank, just the same, along with Garry, for our blue prints and estimates. It was Mr. Devereau whom he brought up here last night and in fairly good time, I should judge, too, from the pace at which they set out. Garry turned him into the hill road, and he must have stuck to it blindly until he struck our fork." And after a longer pause: "The horse is Miss Allison's own property," he added quietly.

"I happened to run into Harrigan this morning," Fat Joe said in an unconcerned manner.

As disinterestedly as had Joe, Steve now drained his coffee cup and waited.

"He was down to the cook shanty," Fat Joe rambled on. "It's an hour since he'd ought to have been out there with the powder squad in the north cut, and when I asks him if he was feelin' indisposed this morning he says no, but the supply teams was going out and one of the drivers had told him that I was sending him along to help with the loadin'. He had such a nice, frank, open faced way of lying that I couldn't bring myself to correct him. I just let it stand that way and told him such was the arrangement." Joe saw swift satisfaction play across Steve's face. "He had a bandage around his head not much different from this one our friend here is wearing. But he said he was scratched by a twig."

"But as for me"—Joe's high voice rang a little—"but, as for me, well, I always did pride myself that I could shoot some, whether it was by daylight or dark!"

Stephen O'Mara touched a match to the dry grains of tobacco which he had been tamping into the bowl of his pipe. He swung slowly around toward the inert figure on the bunk.

"He'll sleep the day through, I think," he said, "and the night perhaps. But I'd advise you to look in on him now and then, just the same. He did us a good turn last night. It's the second good turn he's done for me, Joe. And now perhaps the chance has come to even up the score a little. You would know, wouldn't you, Joe, just how many drinks to prescribe for a man who has been as—as ill as Garry has?"

Fat Joe's face commenced to shine, and at that he was only beginning to understand.

"Ain't I the doctor?" he demanded aggrievedly. "You don't have to go no deeper into technicalities with me. And I told you last night anyway, didn't I, that it would have to be his last little celebration unless he was figurin' on a longer journey than he's ever took before. Well, I've handled so many cases just like his that there ain't even a little enjoyable novelty in 'em any more for me."

Steve received the statement with another nod.

"That's it," he mused. "That's it exactly. It would have to be his last unless he is figuring on a longer journey than he has ever taken before."

He crossed and leaned over the thin and motionless form of his friend. He laid one hand gently upon the sleeping man's shoulder.

"He did that for me once, Joe," he spoke quietly. "He dropped his hand on my shoulder like that, and I never forgot the weight of it. You watch him, Joe—watch him closely for awhile, because—because, you see, a man does stray along once in so often who's so badly bewildered and trail weary, so tired of trying and—and hurt in soul that the thought of such a journey as you speak of begins to seem the shortest route after all to an end of thoughts which even alcohol can't wipe out. You take care of him, and if he wakes before I get back explain to him a little just how he came here, and thank him a lot for what he did. Ask him to wait until I come back from Morrison, will you?"

For a moment Joe just stood and blinked, dumfounded.

Steve recrossed to the door and began to unfasten the feed bag from Ragtime's nose. He leaned over to lengthen a stirrup, stopped again to light his pipe.

"Watch things!" he called as he swung to the saddle and put Ragtime to the slope. "Watch things!" His voice drifted up from below clear and eager. "And drive 'em, Joe—drive 'em—drive 'em from daylight till dark!"

From the threshold Fat Joe watched him until horse and rider disappeared beyond the line of timber.

Barbara Allison's presence upon the dusty hill road that morning was more than the result of a merely casual whim, even though when she turned her mount north into that mountain highway a scant two hours before the choice had been made without actual thought for the route she was selecting.

The night before as soon as she had re-entered hurriedly the glowing lodge a-sprawl upon the hill the impulse had first come to her—a swift and almost blind desire to turn and escape, if only for a little while, from the roomful of chatter and laughter and bright eyed badinage loosed upon her immediately after the unmasking by Dexter Allison's perfectly cadenced announcement of his daughter's engagement. All in a breath the huge room had become stiflingly oppressive, the gayety unbearable.

And yet afterward, alone in her room, when the last treble note had died away and she had dismissed Cecile, her sleepy eyed maid, the sense of oppression had returned redoubled. She did not want to sleep. She was glad of her wide eyed wakefulness, but in the darkness walls and ceiling and floor seemed fairly to close in upon her and hedge in soul and brain as well as body. It was the first time the girl had ever known the need—the driving desire—to be alone out of doors, where there was nothing but sky and skyline to bound her thoughts. And at last when her restlessness became no longer bearable, while the remainder of the house still slept behind drawn curtains, she rose and slipped into boots and breeches and riding coat and descended to order a not too wide awake groom to saddle a horse. And in the very middle of his sensational report of Ragtime's empty stall she swung to the saddle and turned toward the north.

Mile after mile, the roan mare placidly choosing the pace, she rode with one leg dangling over the pummel of the saddle, everything else forgotten in that preoccupied endeavor to review each moment she had shared with him.

When the higher morning sun found her far beyond the rolling pasture land, miles in the heavy timber, she had dismounted, there where the highest loop in the road commanded its breath taking sweep of country, and was sitting cross legged upon the trunk of a fallen tree at the road edge.

Then suddenly Stephen O'Mara in the flesh appeared before her astride Ragtime and leading her roan, which, contentedly cropping the bush tops, had disappeared a full quarter of an hour before.

The girl gasped at the suddenness of his coming. She half started to rise before she remembered the instability of her perch and then crouched even lower than before when she saw that he was not yet aware of her nearness. She waited, eyes gleefully bright, until he was almost opposite her before she coughed, ever so faintly. Then she tilted her nose aloft in enchanting mimicry of his lean and forward thrust face.

"We never speak," she confided dolefully to the empty air in front of her—"we never speak as we pass by."

He whirled. So swiftly that it took her breath he was out of the saddle and across the road and standing knee deep in the undergrowth beside her. Only his profile had been visible to her at first. Now the white line of his jaw and the light in the eyes that searched her face chilled her even as they sent the blood singing in every vein. She half lifted both hands to him apprehensively.

"You aren't going to tell me, are you," she asked, "that anything dreadful has happened to Garry?"

Dumbly, but most reassuringly, Steve shook his head. From the top of her hatless, wind tossed, brown crowned head to the tips of the absurdly small boots tucked up beneath her he scanned her slim body. Barbara realized that he was trying to speak and finding the effort hard. Slowly he removed his hat and passed one hand across his forehead.

"Man," he ejaculated fervidly to himself, "but that's the longest hundred yards you've ever traveled on foot or a-horseback!" and abruptly, accusingly to her, "Do you know that I've been months and years and ages rounding that bend to—to find you a little crumpled up heap in the road?"

"I'm sorry," she murmured humbly. "I'm sorry to—disappoint you; but, you see, I didn't know"—

She laughed at him. Her lips curled, petal-like, in a gurgling peal of enjoyment at his shamefaced grin.

"I found your horse rolling," he explained, and his gravity was dogged in the face of her brightness. "How I knew it was yours I don't know, but I did just the same. I thought she had thrown you. I'd already made up my mind, if there was one scratch on your body, to take that mare's head between my hands and break her neck! You see, I believed I knew already just what it would mean to me if anything ever happened to you. But it's a lot different imagining the world without you—and—and facing the actual possibility of it. Was I—fairly tragic?"

CHAPTER IX.

"Not a Chance in the World."

"OF course you've found Garry?" She hastened to swing the conversation to a less personal quarter. "Is he—will you tell me about it, please?"

"No," he stated, and there was something lugubrious in the baldness of the statement. "He found me. And it was the biggest stroke of luck that he did. I grow more and more lucky this morning. Wouldn't you say so?"

"But you must have an inkling as to the man's identity!" she cried. "Why, you've got to find that out before he does more harm next time. Haven't you a suspicion even?"

"Why, yes," he admitted. "Both Joe and I do believe we know who it was, but we aren't sure because we don't understand yet what that man's motive might be. I'd tell you only I don't like to accuse anybody until there is cause for it. But that's what brought me down here this morning—that and because I wanted to tell Miss Burrell that Garry is safe and will continue to be from now on, I hope. Those were two of my reasons for coming at least. I had a more important one than either, but"—

Barbara did not wait for him to tell her what it was. She was staring at him in unfeigned surprise.

"To tell Miriam?" she echoed. "Do you—you can't mean that you knew she cared for Garry?"

"Didn't you?"

The girl shook her head.

"Never until just a little while ago. I—do you know, in the last few days I've begun to realize how much more you—other people—observe than I do. I've begun to wonder if I haven't been very blindly self sufficient. For I never dreamed of such a thing until something happened after I left you last night." Her voice faltered, but her eyes clung resolutely to his. "She came to me and asked me if I knew where he had gone. She had seen him ride away, too, Mr. O'Mara. And I learned it then just from the terror in her face. But I didn't know until later how much she cared.

"She came into my room this morning, and that, although you can't know it, was more than odd in itself, because I have always been the one to carry my woes to her. It must have been between 4 and 5, for I had counted a clock striking 4, and yet she was still dressed in her party costume. Have you guessed what she had been doing? Mr. O'Mara, she had been out looking for him! She had slipped out and been waiting because she was sure Ragtime would bolt and—and come back home, dragging him by a stirrup! Wasn't that a horrible thing to wait for alone in the dark?"

With a little shudder the girl put her hands over her eyes as if to shut out the picture.

"She wasn't hysterical, either. She was just ice and wringing wet and blue with cold. Cool, proud, intolerant Miriam Burrell! And I'd never dreamed of her caring for anybody until that minute! I sent her to bed, and I think I hated Garry Devereau for an hour or two. Why, Mr. O'Mara, I'd never believed that a girl could care that much for any man!"

She sat a long time, nursing one slim knee between her palms.

"Mr. O'Mara," she appealed to him at last, "how might one reopen a—a rather difficult subject with—with a suddenly most difficult conversationalist?"

Without turning his head he made answer:

"I think Fat Joe's method is as good as any," he suggested. "Joe says the only way to reopen any argument is to take a running jump and land, all spraddled out, right in the middle of it. He insists that such procedure leaves no doubt in the mind of any one that the discussion is about to be resumed."

She laughed a little.

"Then shall we consider that I've taken the—the jump and landed?"

Just when she was wishing most that she could see his face he swung around toward her. Again his gravity was a totally gentle thing. It made her remember the self possessed kindliness with which he had met her unreasonable rage the night before.

"Twice I've been bitterly unkind to you," she began, "once a long time ago and—and once last night. And on both occasions you have just tried to tell me, indirectly at least, that you cared, hadn't you?"

"Indirectly?" he murmured. "Was I as obscure as that?" And then whimsically, "Won't you call that explanation enough and let me tell it to you again—so you can't misunderstand?"

"I've asked you to forgive me the first offense," she hurriedly denied his appeal. "And the second, Mr. O'Mara, years ago you told me I didn't think you good enough to—to be my knight. My outburst was only childish temper that day, but did you think last night that I still underrated you?"

Steve finally shook his head when she persisted in waiting for his answer.

"You just have finished now," he warned her, however. "I'm not going to tell you one single bit of what I think of you until it comes my turn!"

She tried to laugh at his stubbornness, but she had trouble with this explanation, which grew more vexingly intricate and involved the further she went.

"Then we'll say you didn't," she continued. "I told you last night, less kindly than I might have, that I was engaged to Mr. Wickersham. And I've just confessed, too, that I didn't know a girl could care for any man as unutterably, as blindly and pridelessly, as Miriam cares for the man Garry is. That is the truth. For quite a long, long time it has been understood that I was to marry Mr. Wickersham. I have always admired him—found him above petty things; but, Mr. O'Mara, I have always been sure for just as long a time that the ability to care for any one the—the way I think you believed last night I might care for you was left out of me. And so it wasn't you who awoke my contempt, even though I did turn it against you. It was I myself. It was I and not you who was not 'good enough,' for even if I am the kind of girl who can't love anybody very much, except perhaps herself, I should at least play fair. Isn't—isn't that so?"

Minute after minute passed, while she sat plaiting the cloth tight stretched over one knee. Lips softly a-quiver, she waited, earnest, eager that he understand from her explanation that which she did not yet understand at all herself. Again she wished that he would turn. She wanted greatly to see whatever there might be behind his heavy silence.

"Isn't it?" she faltered timidly.

And yet when his head did come around she found she couldn't face him.

"Is it my turn now?" he asked.

Her answer was barely audible.

"If—if you have to—have it. But I've told you how useless it is."

"Would you mind looking at me just a minute?" said Steve.

The brown head drooped even lower over the restless fingers. It shook ever so faintly.

"I'd rather not. I'm listening."

His laugh tilted recklessly in sheer joy at her refusal.

"Then I'll have to tell you," he stated, "that I'm smiling in spite of the hopelessness. I'm smiling, even though my throat is aching and my lips pretty dry.

"You've just finished trying to argue my man's case from your woman's point of view, one of the hardest, least satisfactory things that could be attempted, no doubt. And if it were possible I know I'd be loving you right now even more than I did before just because you've been so entirely unsuccessful at it. Maybe I could straighten out a point or two that must have been not quite clear to you; maybe—but I don't want to argue back at you now.

"You say my telling you all I must tell you can't help my case a little bit. All right; we'll let it stand like that for the moment. And you say you are going to marry Mr. Wickersham. All right again, but better prophets than either of us have made mistakes before now! If he hadn't forced on me one condition which I would have liked to be different I'd rather have had to mention no other man at all. This isn't the way I'd have chosen to tell you how much I care. I'd rather have told you a little at a time, but there isn't time for that now. So maybe it'll sound crude to you. I've not rehearsed it with any other woman, you see. And if it does sound that way it won't help me much, either, will it? But you're going to believe what I say!

"You started back a dozen years or so in order to make your explanation clear. I'm starting there myself so I'll be sure you understand. You've been grieving because you hurt me—hurt me twice. Will you stop now if I tell you that I wouldn't exchange those two—shall we call them wounds—for all the kindnesses of all the other women in the world? I did believe that you didn't think me good enough that first time. That was why I was cut deeper than you'll ever know, because I knew it was only the truth. I admitted it—remember? I admitted it when I said I was coming back. Well, I'm back now, and I'm still not good enough, and not because I haven't tried to be, either. I'm just not admitting any man alive could be that. But I'm telling you, too, in the same breath that the man who takes you will have to prove he's a whole lot better before I stand aside!"

For the first time since he had begun the girl moved. Her head leaped back. She half lifted one hand in protest, but the very gladness in his face silenced her.

"My turn," he reminded her quizzically. "You've just finished a rather involved bit of reasoning concerning the way other women love, a lot of which I'll have to confess I didn't attend as closely as I should have. Perhaps that's because no man's method of caring has ever interested me a great deal, except my own.

"I loved you when you were a little bit of a girl—because I loved you! And I love you that way now. Your face was the first woman face I ever looked on and—really—saw. And since that first morning it's been with me—been with me a lot of times when I didn't have anything else to look up to. I've been less hungry for thought of you, less thirsty when the road got pretty long at times. I—I worshiped you. Do you hear? Why, I've prayed to you, dumbly, wordlessly, out of black bitterness, when it seemed that any other divinity must be too busy to give any heed to—to the ragged little tad I was. Now, do you think I haven't known what it was long before this to go on when there wasn't any hope?" He waited. Her breath came in a long and quivering gasp. "I—I don't think that I want to—listen any more," she faltered.

His face went white at that, and then he was smiling again.

"I told you I'd have chosen to tell you differently"—the drawling gentleness was unaltered—"but I'll have to finish this way now. There may not be many chances for me to speak, for I've come back to you almost too late. And I don't want to hurt you. Why, I'm going to keep the laughter in your eyes and heart as long as you live, for I thought it would be a woman I'd find when I came back, and I've found you still a girl—all save in those moments when you've seemed half boy to me. And that is strange, too, isn't it—strange that I never knew how much I wanted you to be like that until you taught me the wonder of it yourself? My eyes are stinging. I don't talk quite plainly. My throat is too tight for easy speech, for it's just the old wonder of you after all—just the same—reverence, isn't it? I'll never let you grow up now. You'll have to stay girl—boy—all the rest of your life! I've learned to be fairly sure of myself, but I'm not asking to be sure of you yet. I'd never want to be too sure of you unless all the rest of my whole world had come tumbling down. And then—then I'd need to know always that I could stake my soul on your keeping faith. I'd want to know that I could reach out and find your hand searching for mine in the dark. Your face was the first, girl—it's been the only one. It'll be the last thing I'll see the last moment there is sight in my eyes!"

His slow, infinitely gentle voice stopped. He sat head up before her. Then silently they mounted their horses and rode toward the town.

She rode with wide eyes fastened upon his face; rode with lips parted, all else submerged in that wonder which quickened her breath. Once she leaned toward him as if to speak and then shook her head at the inadequacy of the words. They topped the last rise in the dusty, winding road and raised the river basin and the town itself in that long period of silence. There once more she checked the roan mare.

Quite on a mutual impulse they clasped hands and looked into each other's eyes—quite unnecessarily it may have appeared to the small group on the veranda of the stucco and timber place halfway down the slope between them and town—and there on the crest of the hill, suddenly conscious of those eyes, the girl drew back as swiftly as she had swung toward him.

"What in the world will they think?" she breathed. "I've been gone since daybreak without saying a word that I was going. And it must be noon by now. Come—no, don't hurry! It's too late to hurry now!"

Her chin came up; the line of her lips lost its soft fullness. It was his hot face which made her aware of how surely her imperiously quick orders had stung him. Then she was back, knee to knee, at his side.

"That wasn't fair," she said. "That was most unfair to me. You didn't think, did you, that I"—

His interruption surprised her.

"If I shouldn't inquire," he asked, "will you please tell me and forget I asked the question? May I know when you—you and Mr. Wickersham are to be"—

Barbara's face went slowly crimson, flushed to the nape of her neck.

"It's not a certainty yet, the date," she answered kindly—"just late in the spring, I think."

He nodded. Again she knew how wholly unreadable his eyes could be.

"Late in the spring," he repeated so softly that he might have been talking to himself. "Late in the spring I'll have two time limits run out on me."

Wickersham himself was coming across the lawn to meet them when they drew rein at the head of the driveway.

"Won't you keep Ragtime until you come back to Uncle Cal's tonight?" Barbara asked. "I've kept you loitering for hours and hours on the way. But it will save you a little time."

And this time Steve understood. He nodded in reply.

"Not a chance?" he asked her quietly. "Not a chance?"

She was wheeling the roan.

"Not a chance!" she whispered. "Not a chance in the world! But we—Mr. Elliott promised to show us the works this afternoon," she added in the next breath. "Can you—do you suppose you can come?"

And then as she turned the mare and went skimming up the drive toward the stable she wondered why he laughed.

In his turn Steve set Ragtime's head toward the town in the valley. And therefore he did not see that Archibald Wickersham was left standing alone a moment in the middle of the lawn.

"TWICE I'VE BEEN BITTERLY UNKIND TO YOU," SHE BEGAN SLOWLY.

HIGHEST DAM IN THE WORLD.

Difficulties Overcome In Building the Arrowrock, In Idaho.

The dam is built in a narrow, precipitous canyon, through which the turbulent Boise river races. Its name is gained from a gigantic rock in that canyon, the Arrowrock, which had won its name from the custom of the roving Indians, who shot arrows into the face of it to tell their comrades which way they had traveled. By the angle of the arrow the late comers knew whether those in advance had gone up stream or down or up one of the many tributaries.

The construction of the dam commenced in 1911, although much preliminary and preparatory work had been done before that, the most important being that of diverting the river from the site of the dam while the building was in progress. This was done by cutting a tunnel through the canyon walls for 500 feet and turning the river through that. This tunnel was large enough to carry the river at its highest flood and was lined with cement. When the dam was finished the tunnel was plugged with solid cement.

In order to reach solid rock on which to anchor the dam foundation it was necessary to go down ninety-one feet below the normal bed of the river. No less than 225,000 cubic yards of soil and gravel were removed to lay bare this bedrock.

The dam as finished is 348 feet high, 240 feet thick at the base, tapering to sixteen feet at the top, where there is a fine driveway, lighted at night with artistic electric lamps. The length of the dam is 1,000 feet, curving gracefully upstream with a radius of 662 feet. In its construction 530,000 cubic yards of cement were used, sufficient to make a column ten feet square and twenty-seven miles high.—J. F. Stratton in St. Nicholas.

Japanese Fear Foxes.

The Japanese have many curious superstitions about animals, the chief among which is their belief in the supernatural power of foxes. There are numberless shrines, indeed, dedicated to foxes in Japan.

The badger is another animal feared by the superstitious Japanese mind. It is believed to have power to annoy people and to be able to turn into a priest at will.

The crying of weasels and the baying of dogs are considered evil omens, and such insignificant happenings send a shudder over the believers.

In Japan a light colored mouse in the house is a sign of happiness. If a spider falls from the ceiling in the morning it brings pleasure, but if at night it is thought to be very unlucky. To see a centipede at night means happiness in Japan.

The Eclipse Monster.

The Mohammedans of Macedonia look upon any eclipse of the moon as full of portent indicating bloodshed. It is met with reports of firearms, and from the minarets the imams call the faithful to public prayers in the mosques. This recalls in striking manner the practices of many savage and barbaric nations. The great nations of Asia, such as the Hindus and the Chinese, still cling to the belief in the eclipse monster. The latter meet it with prayers, like the Turks. But even in civilized Europe, both ancient and modern, one finds numerous proofs of this superstition. The Romans came to the succor of the afflicted moon by flinging firebrands into the air, by the blare of trumpets and the clang of brazen pots. The superstition survived through the middle ages into a very late period. France, Wales and Ireland offer many instances as late as the seventeenth century.

CHANCE FOR PRESS ADVERTISERS TO ATTRACT THE ATTENTION OF THE ENTIRE COUNTY.

As the result of an agreement between the Plainfield Daily Press and the Elizabeth Evening Times any advertiser placing a classified ad in the Press may have that same ad inserted in the Elizabeth Evening Times upon the payment of one-half more than is charged for the Daily Press insertion alone. Thus, if an advertisement in the Daily Press costs forty cents, the same advertisement may be placed in the Elizabeth paper for an additional twenty cents.

The Elizabeth Evening Times has a circulation of 9,000 and is widely distributed throughout Union County. Thus if an advertiser places his advertisement in the Plainfield Daily Press and Elizabeth Evening Times he places it before the eyes of thousands of readers at a very small cost.

Most advertisers welcome the opportunity to attract the attention of the whole county to their offerings and with the co-operation of the Elizabeth Evening Times the Plainfield Daily Press is now able to make this possible. The Elizabeth Evening Times has earned a reputation for itself as an advertising medium, especially along the classified line, and it is a well known fact that its influence extends into other counties besides Union.

MISS MORGAN A JUNE BRIDE

Becomes Wife of Frank C. Woodruff in All Saints' Church, Scotch Plains.

LAVISH DECORATIONS

Rev. O. S. Michael, Rector, Officiates, Assisted by Rev. John Rushton, of New York—Reception at Home of Bride's Parents.

An attractive wedding took place in All Saints' Episcopal church, Scotch Plains, at 7 o'clock last night, when Miss Ellen Ridley Morgan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Morgan, of Mountain avenue, that place, became the wife of Frank Carrington Woodruff, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Woodruff, of Rahway.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage, while the Lohengrin wedding march was being played by Mrs. Almeth E. White, of Rahway. The double ring ceremony was used, Rev. Oscar Stuart Michael, rector, officiating, assisted by Rev. John Rushton, of Zion and St. Timothy's Episcopal church, New York city, a personal friend of the bride's family.

The bride wore a gown of ivory satin duchesse and chiffon, with pearl banding and Irish needle-point lace, the latter and an embroidered tulle veil being worn by her mother at her marriage. The veil was caught up with real orange blossoms and her only ornament was a crescent of sapphires and pearls, the gift of the bridegroom. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley and bride roses.

The maid of honor was Miss Florence L. Manning, of this city, and the bridesmaids were Miss Ada Woodruff, sister of the bride, and Miss Anne Mauger, of Plainfield. Virginia Mooney, a little niece of the bridegroom, was flower girl. The maid of honor wore a gown of Nile green taffeta with silver lace and she carried a Colonial bouquet of pink and white roses. The bridesmaids wore gowns of pink taffeta trimmed with white lace and carried Colonial bouquets of sweet peas and pink rosebuds. All wore picture hats. The flower girl was dressed in white embroidered chiffon over pink silk and carried a basket of flowers.

The best man was Herbert F. Mooney, of Rahway, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, and the ushers were John Johnson and William Moffett, of New York; William McKenzie, of Metuchen, and J. E. Campbell, of Brooklyn, all cousins of the bridegroom.

The bride's mother wore a gown of black lace over black silk, trimmed with blue sequins, while the bridegroom's mother wore a silver gray taffeta gown trimmed with duchesse lace. As the bridal party was leaving the church, the flower girl led the way, strewing roses in the path of the bride and bridegroom.

The church was attractively decorated for the wedding by the members of the Altar Guild, pink and white flowers being used in profusion.

The bride gave her attendants gold-mounted wedgewood cameo brooches, while the bridegroom gave his best man and ushers gold scarf pins set with tourmalins.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, there being about one hundred relatives and friends from Cincinnati, O.; Wheeling, W. Va.; Philadelphia, Newark, Jersey City, Orange, Elizabeth, Plainfield and Scotch Plains. The home was attractively decorated with spring flowers. Music for the reception was furnished by Anton Gloekner, violinist, with harp accompaniment. An elaborate supper was served by a Plainfield caterer.

During the reception the bride and bridegroom were showered with congratulations. Mrs. Woodruff was the recipient of a large collection of gifts. Later in the evening the couple left on a two-weeks' wedding trip. Upon their return they will reside on Union avenue, Scotch Plains. Mr. Woodruff is employed in the supply department of the U. S. Navy, with headquarters in New York, and both he and his wife have a large circle of acquaintances with whom they are popular.

APPROACHING WEDDING.

Miss Margaret W. McWilliams, daughter of Mrs. Howard McWilliams, of Hillside avenue, and Kenneth H. Condit, son of Col. and Mrs. Oscar H. Condit, of East Orange, will be married at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, by Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, the pastor. The couple will reside at 95 Library place, Princeton, upon their return from a wedding trip.

GRANTED A DECREE.

Chancellor Walker has granted Mrs. Ella D. Biggs, of this city, an absolute divorce from her husband, Frank S. Biggs. The petitioner alleged desertion and non-support. Robert Newton Crane represented Mrs. Biggs.

APPROVE COUNTY ROAD CONTRACTS

Freeholders Accept Proposals Aggregating $48,118.33 for Highway Improvements.

COMPETITION IS KEEN

C. H. Winans Company and Weldon Contracting Company Successful Bidders—Other Contracts to Be Given Out Later.

The Union County Board of Freeholders, at its meeting yesterday, approved contracts for permanent road improvements in the county aggregating a total expenditure of $48,118.33, following the recommendation of the road committee, of which Freeholder S. P. T. Wilbur, of this city, is the chairman. This is the first step this year toward the complete rebuilding of the county roads and other large contracts are to be given a little later. Freeholder J. F. Buckle, of this city, who was elected to fill out the unexpired term of the late J. Hervey Doane, met with the board for the first time.

C. H. Winans Company was awarded contracts to improve the following roads at the figures named:

Springfield avenue, Summit to Passaic river, $13,422; Edgar road, Elizabeth to Rahway, $16,389.45; West Grand street and First avenue, Elizabeth to Roselle, $5,827.50.

The Weldon Contracting Company received the following contracts at the figures named.

Springfield avenue, Summit, $1,466.50; Springfield road, Summit to Springfield, $1,995; Central avenue, Westfield to Rahway, $4,290.40; Springfield avenue, Mountainside to Cranford township line, $2,560; Seven Bridge road, $972.70; Terrill road, South avenue to county line, $1,194.78, making a total expenditure of $48,188.33.

F. S. LYNN WILL WED ON JUNE 17

Y. M. C. A. Boys Work Director to Marry Miss Ulmstead, of Harrison.

Frederick S. Lynn, the popular boys' work director of the Y. M. C. A., will be married next week to Miss Gertrude Ulmsted, of Harrison. The ceremony is to be performed at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William H. R. Ulmstead. The couple will go away on a three months' honeymoon, after which they will be at home in Plainfield. Mr. Lynn has been engaged in Y. M. C. A. work in Plainfield only a few months but he has made a deep impression upon local people as a fine type of Christian manhood. He is extremely popular with the younger members of the local association, over whom he is in charge, and through his personality and efforts is adding daily to the membership in this department. Mr. Lynn is also active in the Park Avenue Baptist church and Sunday-school.

The wedding ceremony will be quietly celebrated on the afternoon of June 17. There will be no attendants from Plainfield.

MRS. JOHN TEMPLE DIES IN HER SIXTY-NINTH YEAR

Mrs. Martha B. Temple, wife of John Temple, died yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of her daughter, Mrs. P. D. Loizeaux, of 1215 Putnam avenue, where she was taken ill three weeks ago while making a visit. Mrs. Temple was sixty-nine years old and had been a resident of Plainfield since 1910, coming here from Watervliet, N. Y. She was a member of the Christian Brethren. Beside her husband and Mrs. Loizeaux, she is survived by one son, Walter Temple, of Essex street, and two brothers, residing in Massachusetts.

The funeral will be held at Mrs. Loizeaux's home tomorrow night at 8 o'clock, and burial will be at Albany, N. Y.

CHAMBER HEARS PROTESTS ON THE STEVENS BILL

A number of protests from local merchants against the Stevens bill was received at last night's meeting of the Plainfield Chamber of Commerce. This measure is the "price maintenance bill" that has already been condemned by formal vote of the local chamber, but the protests received last night will be forwarded to the National Chamber for presentation to members of Congress. But little other business was transacted at last night's meeting.

The Chamber adjourned until the first Thursday in September, or subject to the call of President Kenny.

AN ANSWER TO DR. BIEDERWOLF

Christian Science Church Denies Statements of Evangelist.

LIFE OF MRS. EDDY

She Did Not Obtain Ideas From P. P. Quimby, Declares Committee on Publication, and Court Decision is Quoted as Proof of Denial.

Declaring that it is impossible to reconcile the wholesome results of Christian Science in the lives of its followers with the representations made by the Rev. William E. Biederwolf in his lecture from the pulpit of the Tabernacle recently, Harry I. Hunt, chairman of the committee on publication, has issued a "correction" of the impression created by the evangelist.

Many of his charges against Mrs. Eddy personally and against the Christian Science faith are flatly contradicted. Mr. Hunt says that Dr. Biederwolf took incidents from the life of Mrs. Eddy and used them against her without a fair knowledge of the whole, or with deliberate intention to misrepresent. He points out that Dr. Biederwolf's reference to Mrs. Eddy's education was unfair. She was a graduate of Sanborn's private school, he says, and her certificate carried academic honors.

In refutation of the charge that Mrs. Eddy obtained her ideas from P. P. Quimby, Mr. Hunt points to a decision of the Massachusetts court in 1883, which upheld Mrs. Eddy's claim to the authorship of her writings. Quimby healed only by magnetic force, he says, and was nothing more than a mesmerist, and Christian Science unqualifiedly exposes and denounces mesmerism in all its forms.

Dr. Biederwolf mistakes or misstates the attitude of Christian Science toward sin, says Mr. Hunt. "The entire activity of the Christian Science movement is devoted to teaching mankind how to overcome and destroy sin. Christian Science churches are well attended, not because their congregations are taught that robbery, murder and other crimes mentioned by the critic may be committed without sinning, as one might gather from your report, but because Christian Science reforms the sinner."

The statement of Mr. Hunt, which swer of the Christian Science church, will be found in full on page nine of today's issue of the Daily Press.

JEWS WILL OBSERVE "THE FEAST OF WEEKS"

Celebration on June 7, Seven Weeks After the Second Day of Passover.

The Jewish Pentecost or Feast of Weeks (Shebuoth) will be celebrated on June 7. Its name is derived from the fact that it is celebrated seven weeks after the second day of Passover. All the Biblical injunctions as to the manner in which the Feast was to be observed indicate that it was originally agricultural in character. It was in reality a season of thanksgiving for the harvests that had been reaped, beginning with the barley harvest during the Passover to the wheat harvest at the beginning of the summer. The ceremonial offerings prescribed were in keeping with the God-given gifts of the soil that had been gathered.

In post-Biblical times this Feast was observed as the anniversary of the birth of Judaism with the promulgation of the Divine Law at Sinai. On this "Day of the Giving of the Law," as it was called by the rabbis, the Ten Commandments constitute part of the Scripture readings in the synagogue. It is this historical aspect of the Feast that has been emphasized in the non-agricultural life which the Jews were compelled to live for centuries.

When the Reform Synagogue introduced the rite of confirmation for the Jewish youth, the Pentecost, by virtue of its traditional association with the ancient revelation, was the day most naturally selected for charging the young boys and girls through an impressive public ceremony with the meaning of the Jewish faith and with the duty of leading a high and religious and moral life.

The agricultural side of the Feast, however, was not lost sight of, in that it was customary to decorate home and synagogue with plants and flowers in season. In addition to a portion from the Pentateuch, the charming story of Ruth was prescribed in the synagogue because the idyllic scene of harvesting which it contains was in keeping with the celebration of the Harvest Feast. Those observing customs that originated in post-Biblical times add a second day to that enjoined in the Bible.

—When discontent reaches a certain point, the furnished room advertisements become very interesting to some people.

GARDEN PARTY ATTRACTS MANY

"Alice in Wonderland" Given at the Home of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Tyler.

RECEIPTS TOTAL $500

Affair Given to Raise Funds to Educate Boys at Berkshire Industrial Home, of Which S. T. Carter, Jr., is President—Tea is Served.

"Alice in Wonderland," presented in motion pictures, together with an impersonation of some of the characters of the play and other pleasing forms of entertainment, attracted a large number of people to the gardens of Mr. and Mrs. William S. Tyler, on West Eighth street, yesterday afternoon. The affair was given by the Plainfield Boys' Chapter of the Berkshire Industrial Home, for the purpose of educating boys at that institution, and the total receipts were $500. Samuel T. Carter, Jr., of this city, is the president of the Home, while Mrs. Tyler is the head of the local chapter.

The pictures were greatly enjoyed, as were also the donkey rides. Mrs. H. M. Stockton kindly loaned her beautiful donkey for the afternoon. The boys of the local chapter appeared in costume, representing characters as follows: Volney Righter, mad hatter; John Charles, mad hare; Sammie Carter, five of hearts; Wadsworth Parker, three of spades; Osborne Halstead, seven of spades; Edward Jewett, tweedledum; William Tyler, tweedledee; Henry Mygatt and Louis Kimball, footmen at the gate; Jack Zelie, inquiring youth; Marjorie Kirkner, Gretchen Wherry and Katherine Jones, three bears; Miss Edith Tyler impersonated the character of "Alice" in Wonderland.

During the afternoon tea was served on the porch of the Tyler home, those in charge being Mrs. Rufus P. Lincoln, Mrs. T. R. Van Boskerck, Mrs. Samuel T. Carter, Jr., Mrs. Leighton Calkins, Mrs. J. M. Charles, Mrs. Ursula Rowland, Mrs. W. M. Wherry, assisted by Mrs. F. E. Mygatt, Mrs. Henry L. DeForest, Mrs. C. B. Tyler. A number of young women also assisted in serving.

Another pleasing attraction of the afternoon was the musical program furnished by Mignon Brothers, of Newark. The beautiful gardens were greatly admired by the large number of people present and the courtesy of Mr. and Mrs. Tyler was greatly appreciated.

MISS HUNTSMAN BRIDE OF DANIEL C. ADAMS, JR.

Attractive Home Ceremony Witnessed by Large Gathering of Relatives.

The wedding of Miss Dorothy Hazel Huntsman to Daniel Cory Adams, Jr., son of Dr. D. C. Adams, was celebrated at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fitz-Randolph Huntsman, 826 East Front street, last evening, at 7 o'clock, in the presence of relatives and friends from Newark, New York, Orange, Connecticut and Providence, R. I. The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, assisted by Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong.

The bride's gown was of white satin, with court train embroidered with pearls and a garniture of princess lace. The veil was of princess lace arranged in cap shape.

The attendants were: Miss Leontine A. Huntsman, as maid of honor; Miss Helen Adams, as honor maiden; Miss Florence Huntsman and Miss Anna Smith, as bridesmaids. They wore white hooped net dresses, two with trimming of yellow and two with green satin, with hood-trimmed hats of lace straw adorned with flowers and ribbons. They carried Colonial bouquets. The bride's shower bouquet was of white roses and lilies of the valley and ferns.

A screen of white flowers and Southern smilax formed a background for the briday party. A latticed arch formed the entrance to the house, which was lavishly decorated with white flowers and greenery, as was also the enclosed veranda, where the McKee orchestra from New York played throughout the evening.

A charming feature of the decorations was the carved pagoda-like standards supporting brilliant Chinese lanterns, which were placed about the grounds and veranda. A reception followed the ceremony, during which the couple received congratulations. Later Mr. and Mrs. Adams left for a wedding journey in the South. They will reside in Plainfield upon their return. The bride was the recipient of a large collection of beautiful gifts.

SAUNDERS NOW AIDS WESTCOTT

Writes Attorney General That He Favors Him for the Senatorial Nomination.

IS AGAINST MARTINE

Boroughite Formerly Came Out for Frelinghuysen, Declaring He Could Not Vote for Plainfielder Because of Wilson Attitude.

Former Mayor William L. Saunders, of North Plainfield, vice chairman of the Naval Consulting Board, recently appointed by President Wilson, has written to Attorney General John W. Wescott that he will support him for United States Senator in the Democratic primaries against Senator James E. Martine.

Saunders and Martine are old friends, but the former has made it known that he could no longer follow the senior Senator from this State because of his frequent opposition to programs advocated by the President. His opposition went so far as a public announcement of a promise to Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, Republican, to support him in November if he won in the Republican primaries and if Martine were his opponent.

It is well known that Saunders is close to the national administration leaders from the President down. His attitude toward Martine is interpreted significantly.

Mr. Saunders is chairman of the board of directors of the Ingersoll-Rand Company. Following is his letter to Mr. Wescott:

"My Dear Judge Wescott:

"I have just returned from a trip to the Pacific Coast, and have learned with much satisfaction that you have announced yourself as a candidate for the United States Senate from New Jersey.

"I want to assure you of my earnest support and my desire to aid you in every way to represent the State.

"Before going West, I announced publicly that I could not support Senator Martine for re-election. I did this notwithstanding the fact that he is an old personal friend of mine.

"Rather than support a Senator who has voted as Senator Martine has voted against the President and the best interests of the country and of the Democratic party, I should have chosen a good Republican like Senator Frelinghuysen. But I am happy in the opportunity to support you, and I am ready to do this out in the middle of the road whenever and wherever you think I may be of service.

"Very truly yours,
"WILLIAM L. SAUNDERS."

APPROVE INCREASE IN CAPITAL STOCK

Plainfield Trust Co. Takes Steps to Broaden Its Field of Usefulness.

The stockholders of The Plainfield Trust Company held a special meeting at the office of the company yesterday afternoon, at which time there was unanimously adopted a resolution providing for the increase of the capital stock from $100,000 to $300,000. With its working capital tripled by this conservative action on the part of the stockholders, the Company will now have combined capital, surplus and profits of over $600,000, and will be enabled to broaden its field of usefulness.

The fact that, with a capital of only $100,000, this progressive institution has been able to build up a deposit line of more than $6,000,000 indicates what a strong hold it has on the confidence of the community, and with $200,000 of new money in the business, its efficiency and helpfulness will be proportionately increased.

Since its organization, the directors have spared neither thought nor effort in building up an organization that would stand for strength and conservatism and the new stock increase is a further confirmation of the same policy. The additional two thousand shares of stock are being offered at par to stockholders of record in the ratio of two shares of new stock to each share of old now held.

LYDIA CHAPTER TO ATTEND CHURCH SERVICE IN A BODY

GERMAN FLEET GIVES BATTLE AND SINKS NINE BRITISH WARSHIPS WITH NUMBER OF SMALLER CRAFT

GREATEST SEA FIGHT OF PRESENT WAR FOUGHT MAY 31 AND JUNE 1 OFF LOWER COAST OF NORWAY AND SWEDEN.

OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENT COMES FROM BERLIN

Kaiser's Navy Lost Only Two Ships, It is Claimed, With a Third Missing—Biggest of Fighting Boats in British Navy Sent to Bottom in Twenty-four Hours Gun Fire—London Makes No Statement.

Berlin, June 2 (Wireless).—The destruction of more than nine British warships by a German fleet in one of the biggest naval battles fought since the war began, was announced today by the German Admiralty. The battle took place between the Skagerack and Horn Riff. Two German men-of-war are known to have been sunk and a third is missing.

The British ships that were sent to the bottom were the battleship Warspite, the battle cruisers Apparent, Queen Mary and Indefatigable; two armored cruisers, apparently of the Achilles type; a small cruiser; the Turbanant, Nestor and Alcaster, unclassed, a number of torpedo-boat destroyers and a submarine. The battle began on the morning of May 31 and raged for twenty-four hours. During the day the German cruiser Wisbaden was sunk by gunfire and during the night the battleship Pommern was torpedoed. The German warship Frau Enlob is missing, and is believed to have been sunk. The remainder of the fleet returned to port. This is the first time the German High Seas Fleet has been engaged. It went forth to give battle as soon as scouts reported the presence of the British fleet. Skagerack, near which body of water the engagement was fought, lies at the southern extremity of Norway and Sweden.

Paris, June 2.—Progress for both the French and the German armies was announced in the official communique issued at noon today by the French War Office. In Caurettes Wood the French drove forward, advancing their line. To the east of the Meuse the Germans continue their attacking operations on the front of Triaumont Vaux and Damloup. They succeeded in occupying part of Gallette Wood as well as part of the shore of Vaux Lake.

Austrians Still Gaining.

Rome, June 2.—Austrian troops, crossing the Posina torrent, have succeeded in partly enveloping Arsiero and are now at the head of the railway leading down to the Venetian plains. At other points they have suffered severe checks at the hands of the Italians, who are making a most stubborn resistance.

In the Lagarina valley the Austrians have been repulsed with the bayonet, and Austrian attacks toward the Upper Forni broke down before the resistance of the Alpine troops.

In the Arsiero zone the Austrians, who had crossed the Posina near Monte Spiri, have had their advance halted on the northern slopes of that mountain, while another column, advancing toward Santo Baldo, was thrown back in disorder across the Posina. On the Seven Communes plateau the Austrians are exerting heavy pressure against the right centre of the Italians, notably at Monte Cegnio and in the Campomulo valley.

British Renew Offensive.

London, June 2.—Renewal of the British efforts to retake Vimy ridge and hold its summit is indicated by the official report on operations along the British front, which announces a great artillery battle in progress there, with the British and Germans employing guns of all calibres. North of the famous ridge there has been considerable artillery activity in the direction of Loos.

Import Ban Extended.

A royal proclamation just issued extends the list of articles the importation of which is prohibited, except under special license.

The new prohibitions will become effective June 8 and include carpet sweepers, cash registers, lawn mowers, sewing machines, stoves and ranges, wringers and manglers, toilet articles containing glycerine, metal bathtubs, beer, hops, matches, aluminum goods and leather goods, except belting, boots, shoes and gloves.

The prohibition which had been imposed on the importation of starch, dextrin, farina and potato flour has been removed.

Russian Advance Halted.

Petrograd, June 2.—Reinforced by German and Austrian troops, the Turks are delivering sharp attacks at various points and have temporarily halted the Russian advance in Armenia. Three strong Turkish attacks near Baiburt were repulsed, but Mamamkhatun, about half way between Erzerum and Baiburt, had to be evacuated to prevent the Russian forces

UNKNOWN MAN KILLS SELF IN DUNELLEN

Body Found Beside the Railroad Tracks—Not Yet Identified.

An unidentified white man was found lying by the side of the Lehigh Valley tracks in West Dunellen about 10:30 this morning, with a bullet hole in his right temple. A revolver with one chamber empty still clutched in the stiffened fingers of the right hand told the story of suicide. The man had been dead since early yesterday afternoon, according to those who examined the body.

The body is at Runyon's undertaking parlors in Dunellen and aid is sought in its identification. An empty envelope found in one of the pockets bore the name "Alyx Olexow, 615 East 11th street, New York." A note book and pocketbook were also found in the clothing but they contained nothing that gave a clue to the identity of the suicide.

The man was about 25 years of age, five feet seven inches tall and weighed 145 pounds. He wore tan shoes and socks, a dark green suit, with light green stripe, and blue and green necktie. The clothing bore the name of A. Goldner, 127 Canal street, New York, as the maker.

KING'S DAUGHTERS PLAN SUMMER WORK

Representatives Hold An Interesting Meeting at Day Nursery.

Plans for the summer work of the City Union of King's Daughters were discussed at a meeting of that body held in the Day Nursery this morning, with Mrs. J. A. Peterkin, the president, presiding. Reports were submitted by the various committees and officers, and tentative preparations were made for the summer clinics and opening of the milk station. Announcement was also made that last month was the banner month in the history of the Day Nursery, between seven and eight hundred children having been taken care of during the time.

Following the routine session, a short time was devoted to a discussion of Plainfield Day, on June 12, at the Allies Bazaar, which is being held in the Grand Central Palace, New York. Last Wednesday a delegation of Plainfield women, representing the King's Daughters, the Belgian Relief, the Mercy League and the Prince of Wales' Relief, met with a committee of nearly 300 women in the Biltmore Hotel to discuss plans for the bazaar and hear instructions from the manager. The local women were the Mesdames F. W. Wallace, F. W. Yates, Rufus Delafield, J. A. Peterkin and J. K. Myers. The local societies interested in the bazaar will have a hat and bag booth on June 12. One of the circles of King's Daughters have their members working on these articles which will be turned in to the respective chairmen as soon as possible for shipment to New York. The aim of the promoters of the Grand Bazaar is to raise one million dollars for the relief of the allies. Thousands of articles have been donated for the affair and announcement was made that no chances would be sold for the many large articles, but subscription books would be out for them. Included in the display are automobiles, pianos, live stock, jewelry, wearing apparel and hundreds of articles too numerous to mention.

CONDITION STILL CRITICAL.

Miss Fannie Sabonavitz, the young woman badly burned in an accident at Smelson's restaurant yesterday afternoon, was reported at Muhlenberg Hospital this afternoon as being in about the same condition as when received. The outcome of her burns is still uncertain. Miss Sabonavitz's home is at 15 Somerset street.

THOSE WHO HAVE BOUGHT WONDER HOW WE DO IT

Four Big Reasons

WE HAVE NO RENT TO PAY

Our finely appointed new store is located in our own building, thus eliminating the monthly outlay to landlords. We have provided every modern facility for the convenience of patrons and the transaction of business on a metropolitan scale.

LOCATION ADVANTAGEOUS

Because when you buy on the main business streets you help pay high rentals and big taxes. You may reach our store without traveling through congested thoroughfares and be given better satisfaction in buying Coats, Skirts and Dresses.

PERSONAL SUPERVISION

Eliminates the salaries of skilled cutters and tailors. We do our own designing, selling and supervising. We are experts in our line and can guarantee you complete satisfaction because we know how each garment is cut and made.

LAST BUT NOT LEAST

We do away with the middlemans profits. We sell direct to the wearer and can provide you with apparel at LESS than it costs the storekeeper. You get the best at the cheapest price.

OUR APPAREL IS DISTINCTIVE—WEAR SURE AND UNAPPROACHABLE IN PRICE.

Fifty high grade suits left on our hands; formerly $20, $25, $30 and $35; now.... $10, $12, $15

Smartest Skirts, Sport Coats and Sport Suits at lowest prices.

DIPLOMAS and GUARANTEES

Some folks believe that a degree from the Sand Hill High School, of Tulsa, Oklahoma, means as much as a degree from Harvard.

They'd probably believe that a guarantee from "any clothier" is as valuable as a ROTHBERG guarantee.

And so it is—until you put it to the test. Then you'll find that there's a difference between apparent security and real security.

CHORUS CHOIR IS ORGANIZED

Enthusiastic Meeting of Singers is Held in Auditorium of Washington School.

OFFICERS ARE ELECTED

Plans for a Concert on July 4 Are Decided Upon—Addresses and Pleasing Program Are Features for the Occasion.

Under the most favorable auspices the Plainfield Community Chorus and Orchestra was organized at an enthusiastic and largely attended meeting in the Washington School last night. The choir is almost entirely composed of those who sang at the Biederwolf revival in the Tabernacle for six weeks, at the close of which it was decided to form a permanent organization under the direction of the Public Recreation Committee and the supervision of Clifford A. Braider.

An organization was effected by electing these officers:

President, F. T. Dickerson; first vice president, Arthur B. Cole; second vice president, John M. Lewis; recording secretary, Miss Florence G. Hawkins; treasurer, Arthur H. Osmun; first attendance secretary, Harold Tomlinson; second attendance secretary, Ralph O. Martin; librarian, W. B. Anderson; assistant, Russell Tomlinson; director, Clifford A. Braider. The following heads of committees were named: Entertainment, Miss S. Etta Raybert, chairman; membership, Fred S. Cutter; associate membership, Miss Aubrey Eaton.

During the evening there were inspiring addresses by Champlain L. Riley, president of the Recreation Committee, and Assemblyman William N. Runyon, who greatly encouraged the members of the organization by their helpful remarks. It was decided to give a concert in the City Park on the morning of Fourth of July, it taking the place of the entertainment usually given in some other form on that day in a "safe and sane" observance of the day.

The organization will hold one more meeting this summer prior to Independence Day, after which there will be an adjournment until September, when weekly rehearsals will be held for a concert to be given in the winter.

The chorus sang several selections last night and Miss Josephine Giglio delighted the audience with recitations, giving "At the Matinee," "My Rival" and "Tit For Tat," and "Supposing" for encores. Edgar A. Cole, bass soloist of the First M. E. church, also entertained with two pleasing solos, "The Skippers of St. Ives," and "Dr. McGinn."

After the program and business session there was a social time in which all participated.

NEWARK COOL ON MILITARY TRAINING

Percy H. Stewart and Roosevelt, Jr., Draw Only Small Crowd.

New Jersey will make a good showing in the various military training camps over the country, according to former Mayor Percy H. Stewart, who, with Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., addressed a meeting in Newark Wednesday night. The Newark audience did not compare at all favorably with the crowd that turned out in Plainfield for the same purpose, and Mr. Stewart frankly commented on this fact. Only about fifty young men heard the son of the former president and other speakers, but they were urged by Mr. Stewart to form themselves into a committee to hunt up recruits for the different camps to be held at Plattsburg, Fort Oglethorpe and other points this summer.

Mr. Stewart, who is the recruiting officer for this State, and, like Mr. Roosevelt, is a director of the national organization forwarding the training movement, emphasized that there is no conflict between the work of the camps and that of the National Guard. The camps reach men who do not have the time to take up the work of the National Guard throughout the year. Results have proven the camps helped the National Guard by attracting to it men who had become interested in military matters at the camp.

Explaining the work of the camps, Mr. Stewart said one of its objects is to generate a supply of men who would be available as reserve officers, if needed. This is the greatest efficiency in the country. An officer of the United States army had told him one of the greatest handicaps under which the Russian troops suffered after the outbreak of the war was the lack of minor officers. Most of the reserve officers were eliminated early in the war and new ones had to be trained.

After explaining practical points in connection with the work of the camps, Mr. Stewart commented upon the meager audience on hand. He compared it with the showing of 450 at Plainfield and of about 1,200 each at Montclair, Elizabeth and South Orange, while 500 are expected to attend a meeting to be held in Summit. New Jersey, Mr. Stewart stated, would make a fairly good showing this year at the camp. Already 850 men have enrolled, whereas there were only ninety in last year's school.

"The camps have shown that we should have universal military training," Mr. Stewart declared. "They have also shown how foolish it is to expect an army to take the field without proper hardening."

On this subject of hardening, Mr. Stewart described his own experiences at the camp last year. After undergoing three weeks of schooling and exercising in the camp the men were taken out on hikes during the fourth week, when he covered seventy miles. Then he found out that, with a weight of about fifty pounds to carry, most of it on his shoulders, an entirely different set of muscles were called into action and the consequence was that most of the men had to be cared for by the surgeon because of foot troubles. They learned tricks which would mitigate the trouble hereafter for themselves and others.

The advice was given by Mr. Stewart that those who enroll should not seek to secure placement in companies with friends, but should accept places as they happened to be assigned. The result would be beneficial in that a greater degree of democracy would obtain and the men would extend their acquaintanceship and probably make friends they would never have had the chance to acquire otherwise. By following this policy they would approach actual service conditions.

Do You Want a "Guest-Tenant?"

When you rent a room of your home to someone, you secure a "guest-tenant." Your "roomer" is a guest of your house, on a business basis—but still a guest, somewhat in touch with your home, and this makes it highly important that the person should be of the right sort.

In advertising a furnished room it is a simple matter to indicate that the tenant-to-be must have reasonably convincing credentials as to character. You will thus have applications from a desirable class of people while a door sign or window card would merely bring to you the chance passer-by.

PLAINFIELD PRESS COMPANY,

Corporation Notice.

ALTERING AND WIDENING OF CENTRAL AVENUE.

The undersigned Commissioners, heretofore appointed by the Common Council of the City of Plainfield to make an estimate and assessment of damages that any owner or owners of land will sustain by the altering and widening of Central avenue from the southeasterly side line of West Front street to the northwesterly line of the right of way of the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey, pursuant to the ordinance entitled "An Ordinance to alter and widen Central avenue from the southeasterly side line of West Front street to the northwesterly line of the right of way of the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey," approved December 5, 1912, and also to ascertain the amount of damages that shall be assessed as aforesaid, and of all necessary expenses incident to such laying out, altering, widening and opening and to make a just and equitable assessment thereof among the owners and occupants of the lands, tenements and real estate benefited thereby, in proportion to the benefits each shall be deemed to acquire, said assessment to be made pursuant to the amended charter of the city as amended or modified by general statutes of the State, and particularly by the act entitled, "An Act respecting assessments in cities," approved April 21, 1876, hereby give notice that they have this day filed their report and assessment in the office of the City Clerk, and that the same is open to inspection of the public, and will be presented to the Common Council at the meeting of that body to be held at the Council Chamber, No. 149 North avenue, in the City of Plainfield, New Jersey, on Monday, the fifth day of June, 1916, at eight o'clock p. m. Parties interested may file with the City Clerk written objections to said report stating the nature and extent of their interest and the grounds of their objection to it. All such objections shall be filed within ten days after the first publication of this notice.

The character of the work and improvement is the altering and widening of Central avenue between the points stated in the above-mentioned title of said ordinance.

The land to be taken and the lines of the above described portion of Central avenue, as the same is hereinabove ordered to be altered and widened, are shown on a map on file with the City Clerk entitled, "Map showing proposed altering and widening of Central avenue, from West Front street to the Central Railroad of New Jersey, City of Plainfield, N. J., September, 1915."

The lands assessed for benefits are the lands fronting on Central avenue, as ordered to be altered and widened by said Ordinance, and other lands fronting on said Central avenue, between the Central Railroad of New Jersey and West Fourth street; also on the northerly side of West Front street between No. 322 and No. 416, and on the southerly side of said West Front street, between No. 319 and No. 327, and between No. 407 and No. 417; and are also shown and designated on said map and schedule, to which reference is hereby made for greater certainty.

TARIFF NEEDED, SAYS COLONEL

Roosevelt Speaks of Problems After War.

RECIPROCITY IS NECESSARY

Declares Entire Community Should Help Farmers and Industrial Men to Increase Production—Scores Unscrupulous Rich and Envious Poor. Great Leaders Must Act, He Says.

Newark, N. J., June 2.—Finishing in this city his stumping tour for the Republican nomination for president, Colonel Theodore Roosevelt addressed a meeting of 5,000 people at the industrial exposition.

Colonel Roosevelt's prepared speech had to do with agriculture and industry, with the encouragement of the captains of industry and with fair play and the just division of rewards for workers and with the necessity of a protective tariff after the war in Europe comes to an end.

It is time for the country to be unified in its Americanism, he said, and one phase is the "Americanization of our industries." Without a protective tariff "we shall face the gravest economic disaster after the war," and the legislation ought to embody reciprocity.

The colonel said that the unscrupulous man of means who exploits the workers and the unscrupulous man of poverty, the agitator, were of the same evil spirit. In the encouragement of industry an attempt should be made, he urged, to "secure the passing around of prosperity."

Colonel Roosevelt spoke in part as follows:

"I am glad to be able to speak at this industrial exposition, which commemorates the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the foundation of Newark. For over a century and a half after that date this country of ours was overwhelmingly agricultural in character. For the last half century its industrial development has grown by leaps and bounds. Newark typifies to a peculiar degree what our country is growing to be. Therefore both the causes of hope and the causes of fear for our national future are at work with full strength in this city.

Two Classes of Workers.

"When all is said and done as to how much other classes contribute to our national welfare it yet remains true that the whole structure rests on the men who do the work of industry and men who do the work of agriculture.

"Of recent years we have grown more and more to realize that as a mere business population, while the welfare of each is primarily his own concern, yet it must also be to a large extent the concern of all of us. As regards farming, for instance, if the soil is exhausted then the people who draw their living from the soil will become impoverished and then the whole social structure will topple. It is the business of the whole community to see that the soil that has been tilled for fifty years is more productive and not less productive at the end of that time. It is our business to help the men who dwell in the open country in such a fashion that not only their work be more productive, but their lives, and especially the lives of their women and children, be led in full and satisfactory fashion.

"The same thing applies here in industry. It is essential that industry shall be in the highest degree productive, that is that there shall be great efficiency and as a necessary corollary the ample rewards for great leadership without which such efficiency cannot be accomplished. It is no less essential that justice shall go hand in hand with the efficiency and that the great rewards paid to the captains shall be paid not at the expense of those who work under them or of the public which they serve, but as a just recognition of the fact that their activities have been to the benefit of the public and that the reward of these activities has been with a measurable approximation to justice shared with and among the people who work for them.

Problems After the War.

"After this war we shall face a Europe which has cast off the shackles of the past and which industrially will be as aggressive as any military power has ever been in a military sense. It is time for this great country of ours to be unified in its Americanism. One phase of that Americanism must be the Americanization of our industries. With this end in view it is an absolute necessity that there shall be protection, that we shall have a protective tariff administered as I have elsewhere described. But while such a tariff is essential to our permanent well being and while if there is not such a tariff we shall face the gravest economic disaster after the close of the war, we cannot afford to forget that it is merely the beginning of securing for our industries the efficiency and the justice which are indispensable. The protective tariff is the barrier behind which our industries can be developed in safety. But it remains for us to see that they are thus developed with the highest efficiency and in nationalized fashion for the good of all of us. This legislation ought to embody the principle of reciprocity which years ago was advocated by Blaine and McKinley, though they were ahead of their time.

"It is not easy even measurably to realize the ideal of industrial justice. It is not easy to realize any ideal in actual life, for, as all men of public affairs grow sadly to know, nothing is easier than to lay down lofty principles in the study or on the platform and nothing harder than successfully to apply them in the stress of the workaday world. Nevertheless, the attempt must be made and must be measurably successful if we wish to avoid grave trouble for ourselves and those who are to come after us.

Must Encourage Industry.

"We must in every way encourage industry. We must recognize in the fullest and frankest manner the great services of those exceptionally able men without whose leadership there is not progress in industry. At the same time we must recognize that together with the exceptional rewards rightly due for exceptional service there must be a sincere and passing around of prosperity, a reasonably just division of the rewards of prosperity. Upon our success in these two lines of endeavor depends the real greatness of our industrial and therefore of our national future. If we fail in one respect there will be no prosperity, no material well being and therefore no real future at all. If we fail in the other respect the future will bring so much evil as in the long run probably to counteract the good.

"It is for the great leaders of industry and for the men of the type who have organized this extraordinary exposition to see that our course in these matters is shaped with such good humored sanity and at the same time such appreciation of high ideals and such perseverance in following them that we shall avoid the twin gulfs of disaster. We must steer between them toward the realization of hope of those who when they made this republic made it with the expectation that its citizens should be prosperous men and women who did justice to others and demanded justice for themselves."

AMERICAN FLAG IS BURNED BY REBELS

Church of Social Revolution Holds Strange Ceremony.

New York, June 2.—An American flag was deliberately burned as part of the exercises connected with a general meeting of the Church of the Social Revolution held on the eve of the trial of its leader, Bouck White, which has been called in special sessions. The ceremony was held in the back yard of the house the organization maintains at 125 West Twenty-third street.

While the flag was being burned hisses and catcalls resounded, and missiles were thrown from the rear windows of neighboring houses, and even some of those at the meeting joined in the hissing.

The flag burning in the back yard followed a long meeting in the rooms of the organization. The question of flags was raised by the prospective trial of White as the result of the publication of a cartoon by him which the complainant considers a desecration of the stars and stripes. The charge is that he violated the penal law by using the United States flag for advertising purposes.

Apparently no one present knew what was coming except those who were to take part in it. White had alluded to the coming ceremony as "possibly dangerous" and "interesting" and had spoken of "our friend, Mr. Henkel, an artist from out Jamaica way," as one who had proved his courage "touchingly" by volunteering for a part in the coming exercises that might have serious results, saying that as he was only about six weeks away from the bread line and had a wife and two children to support he did not see how anything that might happen to him could be regarded as serious

A Want Ad Is Often the First Link in a Chain of Consequences

It initiates something of far-reaching importance to you. You meet someone with whom you will do business for years—or you buy or sell property that changes the currents of your daily affairs. Many a want ad is of but transient importance of course. But others influence your life for ANOTHER BATTLE.

What is that mob doing around the gate?

These are Reacher fans, and they're fighting for their place in the shade.

"Try Plainfield First" was adopted as a slogan some time ago by the members of the Business Men's Association of Plainfield. Then, after the public had begun to realize the full meaning of the statement, the publicity campaign was dropped, and many who had perhaps thought they would "Try Plainfield First" forgot all about it, and never did get into the splendid stores of the members of this organization. This advertisement is the first of a series which will appear from time to time in the Plainfield newspapers. They will be different from most advertisements. They will, of course, point out the many reasons why it is advantageous for Plainfielders to buy in this city, but they will, with equal frankness, point out some of the reasons why Plainfielders do not buy in Plainfield stores. And in doing the latter they will show how YOU, and every other resident of this city and borough, and the surrounding towns, can do your share to remove all criticism about stores of this city.

In these articles the Business Men's Association will not use a lot of big black face, poster type, to try to convince the people by screaming at them, as it were, that Plainfield stores should be patronized because they are Plainfield stores. "Try Plainfield First" will be the text, and if after trying Plainfield first and not getting satisfaction a would-be customer goes elsewhere, the Plainfield Business Men will wish them well. But the merchants feel that the trial should be a fair one. There is no store that will not strive to give the best of service in everything, and to carry a stock of goods, while perhaps not so large, fully as diversified as those in the largest city stores. Honest criticism will be welcome. In fact the Business Men's Association will be glad to have it, as it will be used to form the basis for articles in the series of which this is the first.

Everyone will concede that Plainfield merchants are primarily interested in the welfare of this city. They are the ones who more than all others look to the real upbuilding and growth of the community, for every new family that comes here means more business for them and better stores. The commuter resident, for example, plays an important part, but he is too busy with his personal affairs in New York or Newark to take an active interest in the welfare of the town, except possibly when it comes to a question of politics. He leaves matters which are of interest only to those who do business in Plainfield to the women of the family. This is not as it should be. Every man who owns property here, or expects at some future time to own it, should be interested in the commercial growth of Plainfield, for after all the failure or success of all civic movements depends largely upon the attitude taken by the Business Men toward matters of public interest.

So from time to time, in advertisements like this one, the members of this organization will try to convince those who now do much of their buying out of town that they should "Try Plainfield First."

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, JUNE 2, 1916.

BUT WHAT'S THE USE?

While there is apparently little prospect of the small Board of Freeholder plan carrying at the election on June 13, there are plenty of things to be said in favor of adopting it, and it is too bad that the effort to bring about the change has been started as a partisan move. Some of the arguments being presented against the change are unfair, and could be easily answered. The very figures shown indicate that there have been a lot of things done by the present Board that would take considerable explaining, were explanations demanded. For instance, as an argument against the small Board it is pointed out that last year the present members collected $9,336 in days' pay, at $2 per day, while the small Board would cost $10,500 a year for salaries. There are now twenty-one members, which means that each man has sworn to having worked 222 days for the county, which may be true, but more than one person will be suspicious that such was not the case. These are average figures for the entire Board, and one member was unable to serve for the biggest part of the year because of illness, so that the other twenty men must have divided his proportionate 222 days between them. We have known of cases in another county where a Supreme Court investigation brought out the fact that members of the Board of Freeholders collected for thirty-three and thirty-four days in one month! If anything of that kind is going on here, it should be stopped even if more has to be paid in salaries to the members of the Board.

Passaic county figures, under the small Board, are used in comparison to those of Union county under the large Board. There is no excuse for making such a comparison, without presenting the population of the two counties, and the taxable valuations. The jail there may cost more because more inmates are placed in it by the courts, and not because of any mismanagement by the Freeholders. The different county offices may need more help because they may do a larger business than the Union county offices. There are a hundred and one reasons why it may cost more to actually run Passaic county, and yet possibly it can be shown that it is really more economically managed than is Union county. $23,000 was spent here for extermination of mosquitoes, while in Passaic it is pointed out that $14,500 was used. This certainly is proof of extravagance on the part of the Union officials, for everyone knows what a waste of money this was last year.

But what is the use of arguing on the subject. The Republican organization is against the small Board, and the Democratic organization is for it. It is nothing but a game of politics all the way through and the Republican party machine will undoubtedly succeed in beating what would, we believe, result in much better county government.

THE FOWLER "BOOM."

Former Congressman Charles N. Fowler is one of the latest Presidential aspirants, and has prepared his own platform, instead of depending upon a convention—or a committee—to do the job. As Mr. Fowler served sixteen years in Congress and was for a long time at the head of the Banking and Currency Committee, even his political enemies must admit that he possesses qualifications beyond the average candidate.

But the Republican nomination will not come to New Jersey this year. That is a safe 100 to 1 bet. No one knows where it will go or to whom, but no sane man will claim it for New Jersey, even if "the unexpected happens." Mr. Fowler may as well lay his boom away in moth-balls and wait until the political skies look more promising.—Trenton Times.

While we have no desire to enter into the controversy which may be aroused on the subject, we hope that our readers will all peruse the article in another column prepared by the Christian Scientists in reply to Rev. W. E. Biederwolf's sermon delivered at the Tabernacle on that subject. Readers of the Daily Press are fair minded, and want to know both sides of every question which causes discussion, and no one will dispute that Mr. Biederwolf's sermon caused a discussion. The article is published in keeping with the rule of the Daily Press to give both sides a full and free hearing in all discussions which may be of public moment, and with its publication the columns of this newspaper will be closed to all discussion of the matter unless a reply should come direct from Dr. Biederwolf, as we fear that a series of letters in our columns may result in a lot of unnecessary, and perhaps unpleasant, discussion.

All of Plainfield should encourage and aid the campaign started last night to raise $15,000 for a home for the local Young Men's Hebrew Association. The organization is one that trains young men of Jewish faith physically and religiously and gives them clean minds and clean bodies, and in doing this it works for the good of the entire community. Those in charge of the campaign are very modest in asking Plainfield for $15,000, and they should have no trouble in securing this amount for such a deserving cause.

Her Fate.

A pretty thing attired in filmy lace,
With studious and almost classic face,
So very staid and serious of mien,
That it is very patent to be seen
She's weighted with responsibility;
A message for the anxious world has scroll,

There are some wrongs she feels that she must right,
Upon this one and all important night.
She has it written down upon the scroll,
A message which is written from the soul.
And it is very plain for all to see,
She's going to read the valedictory.

The world's been going wrong since time began.
It's up to her to right her fellow man,
And start him in the way which he should go.
There are some things the slipshod world should know.
The time is ripe to peddle good advice,
And pearls of wisdom far beyond all price.

The night has passed, her paper has been read;
The world wags on and this fair maid is wed;
She then takes the advice all of her life
Of some tall chap of whom she is the wife.
Alas, this is the melancholy fate
Of nearly every sweet girl graduate.

Embarrassing Moments.

When the "collect" telegram comes and there isn't a cent in the house.

When the intended calls suddenly and the fair one's hair is all upstairs on her dresser.

When you take a rich uncle into a thirst garage for a glass of seltzer and the bartender calls you by your first name and asks you how long you have been on the water wagon.

When the groom suddenly remembers that he left the ring at home in his other vest pocket.

When the bride first finds out that the groom has been telling her enlarged stories about his salary.

When a person gets a sudden invitation to attend a theatre party after having garlic salad or boiled onions for dinner.

He says he can't manage to lay up a nickel and anyone who kin git rich is a peach.

We're goin' to git shipwrecked, that much is dead sartin. We'll see before long his prediction is true.

You'd think, if you'd hear 'em, there's no joy in livin'. They're blamed pessimitic down there at the store.

They seem to agree that the millenium's not comin' and that the sun ain't goin' to shine any more.

It's been that way ever since I can remember. Each winter it's just a bit wuss than the last.

It seems like there ain't nothin' left to demolish, they've smashed up this country so oft' in the past.

This year it's a caution. Our end is approaching. That there's no escape every one will allow.

But still, I opine, if we keep on atryin' we're goin' to manage to git on somehow.

GATHER IN CLOSE—GENTLEMEN!!

Plainfield Theatre.

Headed by the jingly musical comedy, "Poppyland," presented by ten capable girls, the new eight-act bill at the Plainfield Theatre gave immense satisfaction yesterday. Every number on the monster program arranged especially for anniversary week registered big hits and encores followed every ending.

Beside "Poppyland," which is filled with songs and comedy, the other numbers on the program are as follows: Latoll, the fascinating trapeez artist; Jack Shepard, comedian; Thomas Haverly and company in the side-splitting sketch, "Who's Who"; Teresa Ward, comedienne; Sheck and DeAwille, singers and dancers; and Lloyd and Gates, comedian—in addition to moving pictures and songs.

The fifteenth and final episode of "The Strange Case of Mary Page" will be the film feature for tonight. This serial has been one of the most interesting the Plainfield Theatre has ever given and the finish will undoubtedly be witnessed by a capacity audience. The Pathe semi-weekly will be included in tomorrow's picture program.

Proctor's Theatre

Theodore Roberts, the famous Broadway actor and a favorite among theatregoers for years past, appears at the head of a distiguished cast of screen stars, including Carlyle Blackwell and Dorothy Davenport, at Proctor's today in an adaptation of E. Phillips Oppenheim's famous story, "Mr. Grex of Monte Carlo." This is a Paramount picture and is supreme in every sense of the word. The comedy part of the program today is taken care of by one of those famous L-KO creations entitled "Elevating Father," which will doubtless succeed in producing hilarious laughter and merriment from the start to the finish. On Saturday a splendid bill has been arranged by the management which includes Julius Steger, one of the last of the famous stage stars to succumb to the lure of the silent drama, who appears in a splendid Metro production entitled "The Blindness of Love," a picture which is bound to elicit an abundance of praise and comment. A big treat is in store for the children tomorrow when Billie Ritchie, the famous rival of Charlie Chaplin for fun-making honors, will appear in a three reel riotous creation entitled "Live Wires and Love Sparks," which the producers claim will fully live up to laugh-provoking situations which its title implies. The children will surely enjoy this hilarious comedy and parents are urged to bring them along. On Monday, Charlotte Greenwood and Sydney Grant, the famous musical comedy stars, will co-star in "Jane," the internationally-famous Charles Frohman comedy, and the fifth episode of "The Mysteries of Myra" will also be shown. On Tuesday, one of the big film triumphs of the season will be seen at Proctor's in the form of "The Good-Bad Man," starring Douglas Fairbanks, the identical photoplay which was selected from a score of others to inaugurate the opening of the new Rialto Theatre, N. Y. Other features, Tuesday, will include a funny Keystone entitled "Her Marble Heart,' and the fourteenth episode of "Mary Page." On Wednesday, Theda Bara will appear in "The Eternal Sapho," her latest picture, which will be shown for one day only.

NEWARK AMUSEMENTS

The many thousands who have visited Vailsburg Amusement Park during the past week have been unanimous in proclaiming the success of the many big free shows which Carpenter and Peterson have been offering. It is the intention of the management to each week add to the bill instead of decreasing it, which is the general method applied in such cases; but as "Nothing succeeds like success," it is their intention to deviate from the unwritten law, and embellish the grounds and add attractions as the season progresses.

All of the rides, as well as the side show, Niblo's talking and singing parrots, the dance hall, the wisteria garden with its big cabaret, and Old Heidelberg, with those beloved Tyrolean Warblers, have been well patronized, which tends to show that there is a heap of prosperity in the city and that the people will spend their money if you give them what they want for it.

By the 10th or 15th of June there will be installed in the park two or three more big attractions, which will employ the services of nearly 100 more performers, which will bring the list of attractions up to the normal standard, thus making the assertion of the management that the park serves more attractions for the money than any other park in the world, a fact beyond a doubt.

N. P. H. S. NOTES

The exhibits shown at Somerville last Saturday are now on display in the front half of the building.

All seniors who have paid their class dues and assesment on lost books received their commencement tickets this noon, each getting thirteen. The invitations have also been distributed among the fourth-year class men.

The commercial department is continuing its dictation to the tune of a victrola. Miss Montague has just received a list of records which are suited for the purpose.

The Literary Club held a short meeting in the junior room at 12:30. Plans were discussed in regard to having an ice cream stand at the big game tomorrow.

Students of the North Plainfield High School are planning a dance and celebration tomorrow evening in the Harrison Avenue School if the school team is successful in its game with Plainfield High School in the afternoon.

In case the game is lost a dance will be held minus the celebration.

Washington Rock was the site of the annual senior picnic, which was given last evening in honor of the North Plainfield High School athletic team. Including the guests and class members, over sixty were present to enjoy the outing, the time being consumed in playing old-fashioned games.

Refreshments were served to appease the vigorous appetites of the strenuous mountain climbers. The committee in charge comprised Amelia Buzzie, Marion Avery, Bertha Keller, Lawrence Robinson and Charles Roll, chairman.

FOODS IN COLD STORAGE.

Trenton, June 2.—Figures recently compiled in the office of the State Department of Health show that the amount of foods in cold storage in New Jersey on April 1, 1916, was about normal for the time of year. The only article in great excess was fresh meat, of which there were 13,135,457 pounds, or approximately double the amount usually in storage on April 1. A still greater excess of fresh meats in storage was noted April 1 of last year, when the total was about 3,000,000 lbs. more than for the present year. This excess for the past 2 years is due to holding meats for shipment to Europe. There were 4,876,431 pounds of poultry in storage as compared to 6,264,841 pounds the same time last year. This slight reduction is apparently due to a shortage in the supply of poultry.

MANY PUPILS WILL TAKE EXAMINATIONS

Competitive Test to Be Given at Rutgers Today and Tomorrow.

A number of local High School boys have signified their intention of taking the competitive examinations for scholarships to Rutgers College, in New Brunswick, which will be held at the County Court House today and tomorrow. Sixty of these scholarships are offered every year, and the boys who are fortunate enough to win them are given free tuition at the State college.

The growth of Rutgers in the past few years has been exceedingly gratifying to the people of the State. Situated in New Brunswick, almost midway between New York and Philadelphia, the college "on the banks of the old Raritan" has a student body of almost five hundred. It offers courses leading to the degrees of Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Letters, and Bachelor of Science. Probably the most popular course is agriculture. A college farm of three hundred acres is situated about one mile from the Queen's campus, and is used exclusively by students taking this course. It contains all the necessary farm stock and buildings to give the boys practical application of the theories of farm management which they learn in the classrooms.

One of the features of the life at Rutgers is the military training, which every student is required to take. This includes instruction in military tactics by an officer of the United States army, battalion drill and other features designed to train the students to take their places as officers in the regular army, should this nation be called to arms.

The competitive examinations for State Scholarships are arousing unusual interest this year.

ELMER FRENCH WINS $25 PRIZE AT RUTGERS

Elmer French, of Plainfield, won second prize in the Freshman oratorical contest held yesterday afternoon in the chapel of Rutgers College. From the 180 Freshmen the best eighteen were selected to compete yesterday for the Barbour prize in public speaking. French receives as a prize a $25 dictionary or its value in cash. Paul Robeson, of Somerville, won the first prize, which was also a dictionary, or its cash value.

BOY HIT CAR BUT FAILED TO STOP

Edgar Kilgers, aged eighteen years, was arraigned in police court this morning on a charge of reckless driving of an automobile. The complaint was that he ran into the rear end of a Ford at the corner of Fifth street and Park avenue, and failed to stop. Judge DeMeza found that he was not familiar with laws governing the handling of automobiles, and warned him to study these, also to practice with his car before driving again. The case was dismissed.

It is to be hoped that every Plainfielder will be wearing a rose pinned on their dress or in the lapel on their coat by some one of the hundreds of women "taggers" who will be scattered all over this city on that day.

These "taggers," dressed as nurses, will cover the city from the Plainfield Country Club on one side to the Park Golf Club on the other—from the Netherwood station at one end to the Clinton Avenue station at the other—and all sections of the city in between these four points of the compass.

That day has been chosen by the Women's Auxiliary Board of Muhlenberg Hospital to ask all men, women and children of Plainfield—whether rich or poor—to contribute as much money as they are able to this most worthy organization which recognizes no creed—except the creed of helping the suffering.

CLEMENCY TO IRISH, ASQUITH'S PROMISE

Says All Possible Leniency Will Be Used.

London, June 2.—Leniency and clemency form the guiding principle of the British government in dealing with the prisoners taken in the recent Irish revolt, Premier Asquith told the house of commons. There was no reason, he added, to depart from that principle, but its exercise was limited by the "vindication of the law and necessity to prevent a recurrence of the outbreak."

The premier said that 800 prisoners already had been released and that the cases still pending would be attended to as speedily as possible. Only those directly or indirectly concerned with the rising and those whose return to Ireland might prove a source of danger were being held, he explained.

These statements were made by Mr. Asquith in response to complaints by John Dillon, the Irish Nationalist, who took advantage of the premier's motion for adjournment until June 20 by raising some questions with regard to the Irish problem. He did so reluctantly, he said, as a discussion of the matter at present might engender an amount of heat which would be injurious to the interests of Ireland.

After expressing skepticism with reference to the negotiations now conducted by Munitions Minister Lloyd George, Mr. Dillon requested a frank governmental statement as to how the authorities proposed to deal with the Irish prisoners. The treatment accorded them thus far, he said, was "barbarous and worse than that accorded German prisoners of war." It was to Dillon's appeal for magnanimity and "decent treatment" of the rebel prisoners that Mr. Asquith replied with a promise of clemency and leniency.

Mr. Dillon complained of the absence of a guiding principle in the course pursued toward the prisoners and of the employment in Dublin of spies of a very objectionable character. He also lamented the continuance of martial law in Ireland.

MACHINE GUNS ON TRUCKS.

Increased Armament Is Expected to Reduce Peril of Snipers.

Columbus, N. M., June 2.—Benet Mercier machine guns, it is stated, are hereafter to be used on the motortruck trains that carry provisions from here to the forces in the field. Heretofore the military guard and armed drivers on each train have proved more than adequate to cope with snipers and the bands that have occasionally attacked the heavily loaded truck trains, but with this greatly increased protection the danger of successful surprise attacks will be reduced to a minimum.

ADD $6,000,000 TO NAVAL BILL

Shipbuilding Yards to Be Provided For.

NEW ENLISTMENT TERMS.

Amendment Proposed by Which Bonuses Could Be Paid to Men Joining Navy—Secretary Daniels Quoted as Saying Recruits Are Easily Obtained.

Washington, June 2. — The house added an amendment to the naval appropriation bill authorizing the expenditure of $6,000,000 to equip various navy yards for the construction of naval vessels.

This amount is not to be expended, however, unless private shipbuilders refuse to make satisfactory contracts with the navy department for the vessels authorized in the pending bill.

Government yards at New Orleans, Puget sound, Philadelphia, Boston, Norfolk, Portsmouth and Charleston are to be equipped for building operations. The yards at Puget sound, Philadelphia, Norfolk and Boston are to be so equipped that they can turn out capital ships—battle cruisers and dreadnaughts.

Soon after voting an additional $6,000,000 to the total of the naval budget the house refused to strike from the bill the Hensley proposal for the creation of an international arbitral court to discuss permanent peace and disarmament.

On motion of Chairman Padgett of the naval affairs committee an amendment was included which is designed to encourage enlisting in the navy. The amendment provides that the term of enlistment hereafter shall be three instead of four years and that the enlisted men shall have the privilege of going into the reserve after one year's active service. Mr. Padgett told the house that the provision would in reality mean active service of from twelve to eighteen months, as releases for the reserve will be made only twice a year, in June and December.

Would Offer Bonus.

Representative Hill of Connecticut, Republican, offered an amendment to give a bonus of $100 to every man who enlists in the navy during the continuance of the European war. This amendment was unnecessary, argued Mr. Padgett, who quoted Secretary Daniels as saying there is no trouble getting enlisted men and that the demands upon the department for places in the navy are as great as can be met.

The New York and Mare Island navy yards are not included in the $6,000,000 lump sum appropriations for improvements at various government institutions. These two yards were similarly provided for in an urgent deficiency bill which recently passed congress.

Speaker Clark made a brief speech in support of the Hensley arbitral court provision. The speaker admitted that wars cannot always be prevented by arbitration, but asserted that such courts served a valuable purpose.

DEMAND ACTION ON SUFFRAGE

Representatives Call on the House Suffrage Committee.

Washington, June 2.—Representatives from suffrage states who appeared before the judiciary committee of the house to demand action on the proposed suffrage amendment to the constitution were told by Chairman Webb that it would meet with defeat if reported now.

Several members of the delegation stated that their constituents are strongly in favor of national woman suffrage and do not view with pleasure attempts to hamper such legislation. Others urged that the measure be brought up in the house for a vote as soon as possible.

German-American Head Quits to Win Bartholdt Place.

St. Louis, June 2.—Henry A. Kersting, president of the St. Louis branch of the German-American alliance, has filed notice of his candidacy for the Republican nomination for congress in the Tenth Missouri district. This is the district formerly represented by Richard Bartholdt.

Mr. Kersting resigned from the presidency of the German-American alliance, saying he did not wish to appear to use his office in the alliance to advance his political interests.

Raking 'Em Over

By "JINKS"

LOCAL TALENT TRYING HARD TO BREAK IN BUT—

Plainfield has a country-wide representation in baseball circles but it is still without a big league performer, at least one who has mounted to the major rank within recent years. "Willie" Keeler, he of bunting fame, and "Rube" Oldring, now recognized as one of the best old fielders in the game, once pastimed on local lots and the former might be classed as a "home-product." Both gleaned some early experience in this environment but it has been so long since they graced Plainfield diamonds that they've become well nigh forgotten. Jack Martin has been looked upon as our most promising youngster, but at present seems to be firmly well planted in the American Association and prospects of his moving up are dubious. In college circles we have Jack Riffert, Harry Jennings and Gerard, all of whom performed here on various occasions, but none of this trio can be classed as a strict localite. Cliff Randolph, Tommy Mullin, "Red" Grimes, and "Nibs" Hand stopped in the "bushers," and among the lot there appears no one ripe for big league plucking. It looks as though Plainfield would remain in the back-ground for a few more years, at least, but while there's life there's hope and we'll stick to the end waiting for this hope to pan out.

• • • • • •

ABOUT THE DESTINIES OF JACK MARTIN.

What will eventually become of Jack Martin? This is the big topic Plainfield fandom is interested in. Not alone because Jack has displayed the "makin's" of a major but because he's a born and bred Queen Cityite. The Phillies had him, the Yankees tried him, and he pastimed in the old International League, but the longest road led him to the Milwaukee Association, where he is now burning things up. Martin is getting well along in years and although he's playing the game of his career just now it's only a vague hope that leads us to believe that he may some day size up as a regular on a big league club. Misfortune overtook Jack and delayed him in gathering enough experience to measure up to major standards and Father Time will overtake him before the "O. B." managers on the big loops decide to take him in tow. Youth is what is sought nowadays and even the most ardent admirers of Jackie will have to admit that he's no longer a blushing schoolboy whose mistakes we can excuse with the time honored sally that "he will learn."

• • • • • •

WHAT WILL BECOME OF CITY LEAGUERS?

If Plainfield had the school for baseball players ten years ago, such as it has today, we'd be watching the daily box scores of big league clubs in eager anticipation of seeing a local name displayed once in a while. The City League should serve as an instructor for the promising talent that lurks hereabouts and it will not be for the lack of organized effort if some stars are not produced. League baseball, even on the minor scale it is staged hereabouts, should deal out experience, and if the present day youngsters know enough to profit by the Saturday afternoon teachings they ought to land on top of the heap one of these days. In Jack Martin's time there wasn't any rock bottom amateur circuit such as we boast of today but if there had been suffice it to say that Martin would have developed further along then he did before being picked up by the Yanks.

PUBLICITY WE GLEAN FROM SPORT EVENTS.

Few Plainfielders who casually observe sport returns realize the amount of advertising a city like this gleans from athletics. No matter what paper you pick up these days you are pretty likely to read about a Plainfielder or Plainfield team doing something in some branch of sport. It may be golf, tennis, baseball, or any other pastime but you are bound to see a localite represented somewhere and opposite his name is the word "Plainfield." Small as it may seem this is publicity and the town is benefitted, even if only by getting its name before the public. Give it a thought sometime when scanning a metropolitan daily and see just how many names of local color you can single out.

Queries--Comment--Answers

Query—Is there a law in New Jersey providing for an eight-hour day for city employes?—N. J.

Answer—Eight hours is the limit of a day's work by any person employed by or on behalf of the State or municipality in New Jersey.

Query—Where can I obtain an accurate list of automobile owners in Plainfield? I want particularly to find out the make of cars.—F. G. T.

Answer—You could probably get what you want from James J. McCann, the local motor vehicles agent, who has an office in the State Trust Company building at Park avenue and East Second street.

Query—A bets that Jess Willard weighs more than Jack Johnson. B says not. Who is right? Which has the longer reach?—P. K.

Answer—We don't know exactly how much each one of them weighs at present but when they fought for the title Johnson weighed 234 pounds and Willard 242 pounds. It would not be a surprise to learn, however, that Johnson is the heavier of the two just at present inasmuch as Willard has kept in good condition since the fight and the "big smoke" has probably en on considerable weight. Johnson taken on considerable weight. Johnson has a reach of 73¼ inches and Willard's measures 83½ inches.

Query—If the Yankees won the American League championship and the Giants won the pennant in the National would all of the world's championship games be staged on the Polo Grounds?—P. K.

Answer—Although both teams use the Polo Grounds this matter would have to be decided by the two organizations. It is likely, however, that the Yankees would use another American League Park so that the games could be divided up between two cities. We hope you are not wagering your money on the Yanks to win the pennant.

Query—Is one minute a creditable record for the 100 yard swim? I did it in this time in the Plainfield High School pool.—T. P.

Answer—This is excellent time for the century. Keep on practicing as you seem to have considerable speed along this line. When Walter Ramme won the metropolitan title for this distance last year he established a mark of 58 3-5 seconds, so you see you are only 1 2-5 seconds behind this mark.

BRUNSWICK OUTING FOR TAB SUPPORTERS

Management Urges Big Representation at Only Out-of-town Game.

As has already been announced, the T. A. B. S. baseball team will journey to New Brunswick, Sunday, to cross bats with St. Peters.

Manager Jim Scott states that this will, in all prabability, be the only out-of-town game this season. This will be the only chance T. A. B. fans will have of going out of town with the team.

Now, a team playing in another town is in no small way judged by the number of rooters it brings from home. Aside from supporting the team the ride itself is well worth the trip, being along the Raritan River for several miles. There are nearly 200 T. A. B. S., and out of these at least 100 should go. In order that the manager can make arrangements for special trolley cars, it will be necessary for him to have an idea of the number going.

All those who decide to go please sign notice in club house or get someone else to do it. Meet at clubhouse at 1 p. m. Sunday.

FRESHIES WHIPPED BY SOPH ATHLETES

Track Meet Between P. H. S. Classes on Parker Field Yesterday.

The Sophomores scored a 48½ to 23½ point victory over the Freshmen yesterday in a Plainfield High School interclass meet on Parker Field. Both classes showed some good material, and several of the events were closely contested, although the individual work of Field made the second-year men sure of their victory.

The results follow:

100-yard dash—Field, Sophomores, first; Hand, Freshmen, second; Dugan, Sophomores, third; time, 11¼ seconds. 220-yard dash—Won by Field, Sophomores.; Hand, Freshmen, second; Roddy, Sophomores, third; time, 25¼ seconds. High jump—Field, Sophomores, first; King, Freshmen, second; O'Donnell, Sophomores, third; height, 5 feet. 440-yard run—Field, Sophomores, first; Hand, Freshmen, second; Roddy, Sophomores, third; time, 59 seconds. Broad jump—Field, Sophomores, first; Johnson, Freshmen, second; Duga, Sophomores, third; distance, 18 feet 1 inch. Discus—Dugan, Sophomores, first; Hand, Freshmen, second, Schieng, Freshmen, third. Shot—Vail, Sophomores, first; Hand, Freshmen, second; Dugan, Saphomores, third.

CITY HIGH DOUBLES SOMERVILLE SCORE

Second Victory Over Visitors Makes Another Notch in Winning Streak.

Plainfield High School's baseball team continued its winning streak yesterday afternoon on Parker Field by downing the Somerville High School clan for the second time this year by a 10 to 5 score. Although outhit, the swatting of the locals was more timely, and when the visitors did get threatening in the eighth, Hutchcroft went on the mound in place of Eder and choked off the rally.

Plainfield got its first run in the initial frame. Semer got on after he had struck out, Kinsley missing the last strike; Dunham's sacrifice advanced him a peg and the fumble of Apgar's roller allowed him to cross the platter. Again in the fourth, P. H. S. got one when Apgar tripled to centre and came home on Linke's single; and in the fifth two came over.

Somerville got its first run in the seventh. Johnson got on when Coudray fumbled his high bounder and went to second on Stryker's sacrifice, coming home on Faulk's hit after Woldin had grounded out.

The eighth inning was when the visitors got started, and before they could be stopped came near tying the score. A piece of luck helped them along when Smith walloped a line drive to right field. The ball hit Dunham's glove and bounced off and over the fence, allowing Smith to get to third.

P. H. S. started a merry-go-round in the last half of the eighth and before they had stopped put the game on ice. Three hits—one of them a two-bagger by Kyle—and a couple of walks did the damage, and Somerville lost their last chance in the ninth when they got only one run more.

The work of the locals showed considerable improvement in nearly every department, and, with a little confidence they should give N. P. H. S. the fight of their lives Saturday afternoon in the second game for the interscholastic championship.

CORIELL WILL OFFICIATE AT N. P. H. S.-P. H. S. GAME

North Plainfield and Plainfield High School baseball forces will clash tomorrow afternoon on Hyde Field for the second interscholastic bout of the season. Having tasted defeat in the initial setto the local lads are entering the fray with the expectation of evening matters up. Little has been heard concerning the activities of the boroughites, but it is needless to say that a strain of optimism runs through their ranks.

Coach Patch has not announced his pitcher.

"Lew" Coriell has been engaged to render decisions from behind the plate, having done this so successfully for the past two years.

PIRATES RELEASE KNABE.

BUT TWO CONTESTS ON LEAGUE SCHEDULE

Baptist-Netherwood Game is Called Off Owing to a Death.

The T. A. B. S. will meet Clinton Avenue for the first time this season in the City League series tomorrow, when they travel to Dunellen to play on the latter's new grounds. McLaughlin and Bergen will be the home team's battery, while the Abstainers have T. Denny, McFadden, Rosenson, Lee, Lawton and J. Denny available for mound duty, with Teeling behind the bat. To reach the diamond it is necessary to get off at Washington avenue in Dunellen and walk three blocks west.

Owing to the cancellation of the Netherwood-Baptist contest, out of respect to the Coughlin boys, whose father died Wednesday, there will be but two City League games tomorrow. The only one staged in Plainfield will take place on the West End avenue field, that lot having been offered for the occasion by the Baptists.

Hope Chapel will meet the Farmer A. C. in the only local game. Dick Schott will be back in uniform for the Chapelites, and he will probably be delegated to the mound.

These two teams have been keen rivals all season, and a good game is bound to result. The West End avenue field may be easily reached via the westbound Union trolley car, stopping at Grant avenue.

"T. R." INTRODUCES FITZSIMMONS AS "MY OLD FRIEND BOB" AT BIG RALLY

During the Roosevelt meeting in Newark last night an attendant appeared in the lobby bearing a card and acting in a manner that made it evident that he was uncertain what to do. A member of the Roosevelt party asked what was troubling him, and he whispered: "Bob Fitzsimmons, the fighter, is here and wants to see the Colonel."

The Colonel was informed of the visit, and asked that Fitzsimmons be shown in. A moment later the ex-prizefighter appeared in the dining room, and the Colonel, with his "Glad to see you, Bob, fine," gave his hand a mighty shake. Then he introduced Fitzsimmons to ex-Governor Murphy, ex-Governor John Franklin Fort, Mayor Thomas L. Raymond and other leading citizens, as "My old friend, Bob." Everybody was as cordial to "Bob" as if he had been an ex-President.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

An Answer to the Recent Statements of the Rev. William E. Biederwolf Made at the Tabernacle.

To the Editor of the Daily Press:

Those who heard or read in your paper the attack on Christian Science, recently delivered by an evangelist in Plainfield, must have found it difficult to reconcile the wholesome results of Christian Science in the lives of its followers with the teaching represented by the speaker to be veritable Christian Science. Until it is possible to gather "grapes from figs," the fruits of this Science can never be gathered from that which our critic conceives Christian Science to be. But that no one may be led astray as to the teachings of Christian Science, this correction is offered for publication.

Mrs. Eddy.

The reverend gentleman stresses the assertion that Mrs. Eddy did not graduate from an institution of learning. As a matter of fact, Mrs. Eddy graduated from a private school taught by Professor Dyer H. Sanborn, in which boys were prepared for college, and girls received a certificate of graduation with academic honors. Professor Sanborn was the author of Sanborn's Grammar, a book familiar to an older generation, and a man of literary tastes.

Mrs. Eddy received as much or more systematic instruction that was usual with children of prosperous parents in New England at that period. Rev. Enoch Corse, of Tilton, N. H., one of Mrs. Eddy's tutors, spoke of her, as a young girl or woman, as "an intellectual and spiritual genius." Another clergyman, Rev. Richard S. Rust, principal of the Methodist Seminary at Northfield, N. H., who knew Mrs. Eddy well, offered her a position as teacher. He was afterward State superintendent of public instruction in New Hampshire, later president of Wesleyan College, Cincinnati, Ohio, and subsequently president of the Union Central Life Insurance Company.

As a girl, Mrs. Eddy wrote poetry of merit, and as a young woman was regularly paid by several periodicals for articles on topics of public interest. Before her discovery of Christian Science she was offered a salary of three thousand dollars a year to become associated with Rev. Albert Case as editor of the Odd Fellows' Magazine.

Our critic would discredit Mrs. Eddy because two dates are given as marking the beginning of her church membership. When Mrs. Eddy's attention was called to the apparent discrepancy, she frankly wrote: "My reply to the statement that the clerk's book shows that I joined the Tilton Congregational church at the age of seventeen is that my religious experience seemed to culminate at twelve years of age. Hence a mistake may have occurred as to the exact date of my first church membership" (First Church of Christ, and Miscellany, p. 311). It is possible that Mrs. Eddy was not formally admitted to membership at the earlier date. This cannot be determined now. It is a well known fact that church records are not always models of accuracy. It may be observed that the record of the Tilton church did not relate to Mrs. Eddy alone but to her and several others who were received into mermbership at the same time.

The fling at Mrs. Eddy's married life was quite gratuitous and unworthy of a clergyman who has any respect for womanhood. Mrs. Eddy's first husband, George W. Glover, was not "a bricklayer," as was alleged, but a contractor and builder, whose business was first in Boston and afterwards in Charleston, S. C. Her second husband, Dr. Daniel Patterson, has been described as "an itinerant dentist." He was, in reality, a regularly graduated D. D. S., and was considered a rarely skillful dentist. He practiced his profession in several towns in New Hampshire.

Mrs. Eddy's Discovery.

Although the discovery of Christian Science is said to have occurred in 1866, in another sense it may be said to have been a progressive discovery for twenty years prior to that time, and for nine years afterwards. Mrs. Eddy writes on page 107 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," "God had been graciously preparing me during many years for the reception of this final revelation of the absolute divine principle of scientific mental healing." There is no inconsistency, therefore, in the dates given by our critic relating to the discovery.

Truth is essentially the message of salvation to man. "'Ye shall know the truth,' declared Jesus, 'and the truth shall make you free.' When truth's reception and application are followed by the results foretold by the Master, the nature of truth's message is established beyond cavil. The success of Christian Science in healing and regenerating mankind furnishes irrefutable proof of its divine source, and vindicates Mrs. Eddy's claim to its discovery.

Opponents of Christian Science have repeatedly said that Mrs. Eddy obtained her ideas from one P. P. Quimby, a mesmerist of Portland, Maine, in spite of the fact that in 1883 a Massachusetts court upheld Mrs. Eddy's claim to the authorship of her writings. No evidence was produced at the time in support of the contention that Quimby was the author of anything contained in Mrs. Eddy's book, nor has unbiased investigation ever discovered any substantial evidence in support of the claim. Quimby said that he healed by magnetic forces. He used manipulation and passes. He was not a religious man. When Mrs. Eddy placed herself under the influence of Quimby and experienced physical relief from her ills, her gratitude led her to endow him with her own ideas of how her healing had been wrought. These ideas, the result of Mrs. Eddy's years of Bible study, Quimby made his own. She first attributed to God the healing power of the man, which later she was to learn was nothing more than mesmerism. The claim that Quimby, the mesmerist, gave Mrs. Eddy the ideas upon which she based her philosophy is completely demolished by the fact that Christian Science unqualifiedly exposes and denounces mesmerism in all its forms.

Portions of incidents in the life of Mrs. Eddy were adroitly introduced by our critic in a way to place her in a false light. Two examples suffice to show the modus of attack. One statement dealt with the indictment of Mrs. Eddy's husband, Asa G. Eddy, for conspiracy to kill D. H. Spofford. To be complete, the statement should have included the information that the indictment was quashed, and that later an affidavit by one Collier disclosed a conspiracy to fasten an alleged crime on an innocent man. The man Spofford, whose disappearance from Boston in October, 1872, was the occasion of Mr. Eddy's arrest, after passing two weeks in seclusion in the home of the man who claimed to have been hired to kill him, returned to his office. The other statement, a reference to Mrs. Eddy's divorce from Dr. Patterson, in all fairness should have included the fact that Mrs. Eddy had Scriptural ground for her action, and that she had played the part of peacemaker for the woman who had desecrated her own home. The facts about Mrs. Eddy's life are as accessible as the calumnies of her enemies. An authentic biography, "The Life of Mary Baker Eddy," by Sybil Wilbur, may be found on the shelves of most public libraries.

There is nothing in the teachings of Mrs. Eddy to warrant the belief that she could or would work mentally or otherwise to injure any one. Christian Science teaches the law of Love. Those who follow its teachings learn to love God supremely and their neighbor as themselves. The knowledge that God is the only power and presence is the rock of the Christian Scientist's defence against evil of every kind.

It is not unchristian to give or to receive instruction in the art of healing one's fellow man, or to publish or sell books which impart this knowledge, although our critic implies that it is. Payment for Mrs. Eddy's instruction or for her books was voluntary on the part of her students and entirely a matter of individual concern. Revisions of Science and Health were made from time to time, "to give a clearer and fuller expression of its original meaning" (Science and Health, p. 361). The writer has never known a Christian Scientist who has not been grateful for these revisions. No student of Mrs. Eddy who put into practice what he or she learned has ever regarded the fee for tuition as excessive or even adequate. It should be said that Mrs. Eddy taught many students without charge, and that many others paid for their instruction as they were able.

The Mrs. Eddy held up to ridicule by our reverend critic and the Mrs. Eddy, beloved by hundreds of thousands of people, cannot be one and the same. The first, as the speaker describes her, did not possess the capacity or the character to found a great religious movement such as Christian Science has proved itself to be. The real Mrs. Eddy, who through toil and self-sacrifice, gave to the world a new-old religion and a fresh hope, is the woman whose fame rests secure in the love and gratitude of those whose lives have been made brighter and cleaner and better by her teachings. This tribute from the Boston Traveler indicates how the world outside of prejudice and intolerance views the work of this wonderful woman:

"Mrs. Eddy has been one of the world's greatest benefactors. Her followers will say more than that, perhaps, but there is no reason why her enemies should say less. Regardless of differences of faith or philosophy, the world must recognize, in her work, a vast contribution to human happiness. Certain it is that Mrs. Eddy found the world full of doubt and despondency, and gave it a larger measure of brightness and hope. She taught the weak that they need not be weak, the sick that they might be well, the suffering that they had it within themselves to end their wretchedness. Those who were ailing, physically or mentally, were enabled, as she herself had been, to become strong in soul and body. . . . It is a great thing to be a teacher when the teaching bears such fruit."

Christian Science.

The critic's assertion that Christian Science is not new is correct. Mrs. Eddy gleaned her knowledge of Christian Science from the Bible. The truth about God and about man's relation to Him is as old as creation. Truth necessarily precedes its expression. But the fact still remains that Christian Science explains the works of the prophets, of Jesus and the apostles, and makes it possible for those who live in this day to heal the sick, reform the sinning and comfort the sorrowing in the way taught by Christ Jesus.

According to your report of the sermon, the clergyman mistakes and mis-states the attitude of Christian Science toward sin. The entire activity of the Christian Science movement is devoted to teaching mankind how to overcome and destroy sin. Christian Science churches are well attended, not because their congregations are taught that robbery, murder and other crimes mentioned by the critic may be committed without sinning, as one might gather from your report, but because Christian Science reforms the sinner.

"That mind has power over the body to heal it" was not the discovery of Mrs. Eddy. Christian Science does not teach that there is any healing power in human mind. St. Paul classified human or carnal mind as "enmity against God." It can be used for evil purposes as well as for good, and is therefore of that "kingdom divided against itself" which Jesus declared could not stand, not being founded upon truth. Hence human mind presents a false sense of existence which needs to be corrected by truth, before the body can be freed from the effects of false beliefs. When the world awakens to the truth of the statement found on page 177 of Science and Health: "Matter, or body, is a false concept of mortal mind," and that "from first to last, the body is a sensuous, human concept," it will learn how the one mind governs the body harmoniously. Christian Science healing is not confined to nervous disorders, as our critic affirms, but includes disease of every description, functional, organic or socalled incurable.

Matter.

The critic's explanation of the apparent dualism of matter and spirit in man supports the belief of life apart from God. Yet St. Paul affirmed: "In Him we live, and move, and have our being." The apostle's declaration is strictly scientific. Christian Science has proved in the experience of many thousands of people that in proportion as this truth is realized, that God is the life of man and that man has no existence apart from his Maker, the fear of disease and disaster has been overcome and life has become worth living.

Speaking of the philosophy of Christian Science, the reverend gentleman insisted that Mrs. Eddy's teaching as to the unreality of matter is "Berkeley's idealism gone mad." The idealism of Berkeley, which led to his making God the cause of earth's ills and calamities, came to grief when the good bishop abandoned his theories about matter and exalted tar water to a place above his Maker. The idealism of Christian Science is the idealism taught by Jesus. It has this advantage over that of Berkeley's in that it is demonstrable. "God is a Spirit," declares St. John. His creation is, therefore, spiritual and eternal. Matter, the opposite of Spirit, is thus placed on a relative plane as that which seems to be, in agreement with the writer of the letter to the Hebrews: "Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that the things which are seen are not made of things which do appear." St. Paul takes similar ground when he writes to the Corinthian church: "For the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal." Christion Science has sound Scriptural authority for defining the creations of God as real in the sense of being eternal, and the things that are cognized by the five physical senses as unreal in the sense of being temporal and destined to decay. Philosophers from Plato to Huxley have taught the nothingness of matter, it is true, but it remained for Mrs. Eddy to demonstrate the practical availability of a hitherto useless doctrine for the alleviation of human distress.

In alleging inconsistency in a Christian Scientist eating or drinking, our critic forgets that Jesus ate food, though he told his disciples: "I have meat to eat that ye know not of," and that Jesus asked for a drink at the well of Sychar, though he said to the Samaritan woman: "Whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life."

If our critic had taken the trouble to read what Mrs. Eddy has to say on marriage in "Science and Health," he would not have misrepresented the teaching of Christian Science on this subject as he did. "Until it is learned," writes Mrs. Eddy on page 64 of "Science and Health," "that God is the Father of all, marriage will continue," and on page 56 she writes: "Marriage is the legal and moral provision for generation among mankind." Christian Science accepts Jesus' statement, "In the resurrection they neither marry nor are given in marriage, but are as the angels in heaven." But until the attainment of this pure spiritual state, Christian Scientists, in common with all other Christians, will feel as Mrs. Eddy did, that "Home is the dearest spot on earth, and it should be the centre, though not the boundary, of the affections" ("Science and Health," p. 58).

Christian Science teaches that God is an infinite Supreme Being, but not a personal being in any human sense. Infinity precludes the possibility of person, for person is a finite concept. Using the word personal as applied to God in its higher or more uncommon meaning, God is infinite person.

No Denial Made.

Our critic is apparently unacquainted with the Christian Science text-book, "Science and Health," for this book does not deny the judgment, as he states, but shows it to be a continual mental or spiritual awakening in human consciousness, whereby human thoughts and acts are judged by the standard of spiritual law. Our critic has no authority for saying that Christian Science denies the Holy Spirit. Reference to "Science and Health" will show that Spirit is used therein as a synonym for God. Nor is there any ground for the statement that Christian Science denies the atonement. The chapter on atonement and eucharist, in "Science and Health," give a very clear explanation of the atonement which our critic should read.

Christian Science teaches that personified evil is just what Jesus said it was, "a liar, and the father of it." As a lie, evil stands for a power opposed to God. No such power exists, for God is all-power. Hence, Satan, the lie, has no real existence.

There is no pretext for asserting that Christian Science denies the creation of man or of the universe. God created man in His image and likeness and gave him dominion over all the earth. Christian Science teaches that, as St. John declares: "All things were made by Him; and without Him was not anything made that was made," sin has no real existence in God's creation. But Christian Scientists recognize their need to be saved from sin as a human experience, and they are able to overcome it in proportion as they rely upon the truth which Jesus said would make free. Sin is forgiven only as it is forsaken and destroyed.

Instead of denying the power and privilege of prayer, Christian Scientists learn to "Pray without ceasing." The Christian Scientist believes more in prayer than most Christians. It is to him as the old hymn has it, "The Christian's vital breath." In the light of its healing work, Christian Scientists should be the last people in the world to be accused of denying the power and privilege of prayer.

It is a mistake to say that Christian Science denies the divinity of Christ. Rather does it affirm the divinity of the Christ. But it follows the gospel teaching and distinguishes between the human Jesus and the Christ. When Jesus said: "Before Abraham was, I am," he taught clearly that the Christ is divine and deathless. When he asked: "Why callest thou me good? There is none good save one, that is, God," he pointed out clearly the humanity of Jesus. Inasmuch as Jesus made this ditinction all through his ministry, Christian Scientists believe they should follow his example.

The only practical test of a religion is the work it does. Christian Science is healing the sick and reforming the sinning. Such is the aim of all true religion. Jesus taught a religion of works. St. Peter tells us: "He went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the devil." As a recent writer well puts it, "Whichever religious teacher or denomination comes nearest to doing likewise is nearest right." Christians who do not practice Christian healing, yet cavil at those who do, try to clothe a failure in the garment of a virtue.

Yours truly,

HARRY I. HUNT,
Committee on Publication.

OHIO SPELLING BEE.

Columbus, O., June 2.—The annual spelling bee for school pupils of the Statae is being held today. The star spellers from each county are competing for prizes of books. The annual contest was originated by the State Board of Agriculture for the boys and girls of the rural schools. The Department of Education has taken charge of the big spelling bee this year, and the interest is keen throughout the State.

This is The Telephone's Birthday

FORTY-ONE years ago today the telephone was born. Its birth cry was only the faint musical sound of a plucked spring carried over a hundred feet of wire, but it was heard by Alexander Graham Bell through a crude little instrument he had invented, and at that moment a new art—the Art of Telephony—came into being.

From this feeble birth cry there has been developed a country-wide system of practically instantaneous communication that comprises 21,000,000 miles of wire and 9,200,000 telephone stations served through 64,000 telephone exchanges that contain 48 miles of telephone switchboards.

Every day in the year 26,000,000 messages are sent and received through this system that is being operated, maintained, and developed by a loyal army of 156,000 Bell workers.

Surely no higher tribute to the greatness of the telephone can be paid than by the universal and constant use that is made of it by those to whom it means a happier, more prosperous existence.

45 Sport Suits, $29.50

Individual suits, made of imported wool jersey cloth; early season prices were $45 to $65. Coats show black or rose stripes on white, with all white skirts. Some suits are in solid colors—hunter's green, gold, cerise. Some collars of white jersey cloth. Some have bands of corduroy on coat.

Second floor, Old Building.

Young Women's Linen Suits---After Lanvin

A $17.50 Sale

These are perhaps the smartest linen suits that young women have ever been offered.

Paris inspiration is in every line of them. And not only are the fashions very French, but the very material is imported and for this reason we cannot take any special orders, nor obtain any more of them at any price.

Three models, made of a very fine cossack linen that does not crumple. The colors are superb, the styles—Lanvin. Sizes 14 to 20 years.

Second floor, Old Building.

He Met the Fox.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

A Gardener's Son Goes to Find A Gold Bird.

[Adapted from Grimm's Fairy Tales.]

"A STORY, daddy; a story!" cried Jack and Evelyn.

So daddy told them a fairy tale. "Once a gold bird tried to steal a king's gold apples. So his gardener's son set out to find the bird. He met a fox that told him not to stop at the pleasant inn in the next village that had two inns. The young man went on his way, and soon he came to a village where people were singing and dancing in a pleasant inn. But the other inn looked poor and dirty. 'I should be a silly fool if I stayed at that shabby inn,' said he. So he went into the charming inn and ate and drank at his ease. But it was so pleasant that he forgot all about his king and his country and the bird he had set out to find.

"Time passed, and as the gardener's eldest son did not come back and no news of him was heard the second son set out. As he was traveling along he met a fox sitting by the roadside. Just as the fox had told his brother, he advised this second son not to stop at the pleasant inn, but to rest all night at the inn that looked mean. But when he got to the village he saw his eldest brother sitting in the window of the pleasant inn making merry with happy people. His brother beckoned to him, and he could not bear the temptation. He went into the pleasant inn and, just as his brother had, forgot all about his duty and his country.

"Time passed, and by and by the gardener's youngest son wanted to set out and hunt the wide world for the gold bird. At first his father, who loved this son very dearly, was afraid to let him go. But as the lad could not rest he at last set out just as his two brothers had. As he came to a wood he met the fox, who gave him the same advice about the two inns in the next village. But this lad was thankful to the fox and did not try to shoot him, as his brothers had done.

"Then the fox said, 'Sit down on my tail and you will travel faster.' So the lad sat down. And the fox began to run, and away they went over rocks and hills. They went so fast that their hair whistled in the wind."

"Just like automobiling!" cried Jack.

"When they came to the village the lad was wise enough to follow the fox's advice. He went straight to the shabby inn and rested there all night. You will see, my dears, it often pays to take the advice of some one who knows much more about the old world than you do," daddy finished.

"If we're good children all day tomorrow, daddy, will you tell us another bedtime story after supper?"

And daddy kissed them and promised.

Marrying a Butterfly

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

Mother-in-Law Takes Her Turn at Making Life Burdensome for Ralph Gordon.

"Ralph, I have been planning to have a good talk with you ever since I came," purred that young man's mother-in-law, drawing her chair up to the fire. Ethel had been sent from the room on some pretext. "I find that you have not bought the house as you expected."

"We not only have not bought it, but there is no chance of our being able to do so." Ralph's tone was almost grating. He resented having his mother-in-law mixing in his private affairs.

"Now, my dear, I hope you will not make the mistake of letting this fine home slip through your fingers. There is really no other house here fit to live in. That is, any other house that could be rented. It would hurt Ethel very much to have to live in any common tenement. You must remember that she never had to face hard conditions." Mrs. Mertage gently swayed back and forth in her easy chair, her delicate hands folded in her lap.

"What had it occurred to you was the solution of our difficulties, seeing that we have no money to buy the house?" Ralph looked steadily at the fire. Mrs. Mertage either ignored or failed to notice the veiled sarcasm of his tone, and placidly continued:

"Of course I know that a young man of your ability can compass anything that he really sets his mind to. It is only a question of his really seeing the necessity. Ethel is so inured to luxury that any other way of life would be impossible to her." There was a silence for a few moments, then Ralph's clear, incisive tones made Mrs. Mertage start as he said:

"I take it you are one of these women who think a man should pay all his wife's bills no matter how extravagant they may be, simply because she is his wife. If he has not money enough to meet the demand made on him, why he must find some means to make more. He must rise to the emergency."

"Exactly." Mrs. Mertage's tone showed relief that he so soon had grasped her meaning.

Ralph suddenly wheeled and faced her.

"Well, I hold other views. I believe that when a woman marries she takes on her self certain obligations. She is in a sense a business partner, and it is as ignoble for her to fail as it would be for him not to provide a decent living. I earn more money than anyone at the plant outside of the partners, and every cent goes. We have nothing to show for it but a bare living. Ethel uses neither her head nor her hands in our home. What she does with her time I fail to see."

Mrs. Mertage pushed her chair back as she spoke and gazed at him in dismay.

"Really, Ralph, you astonish me. You speak of my daughter as if she were an unsatisfactory servant or office girl. You knew perfectly well that Ethel had not been brought up to work and economize. If you were seeking a housekeeper you should have looked elsewhere, and it would have been more fair than to allow her to marry a man who either could not or would not properly support her." The polished society woman was showing a great deal of agitation.

"On the other hand, Ethel knew perfectly well that I had nothing but my salary to live on; that I must save from that salary in order to get ahead. She knew that I planned to save to make payments on this house, yet she will not take the least pains to economize."

"That child to plan and economize and worry over business details! It is absurd, coming from the home she did," protested the mother.

"Yes, I guess you are right there," was Ralph's parting shot as she turned to leave the room.

PUPILS EXHIBIT THEIR HANDIWORK

This Year's Demonstration at P. H. S. Eclipses All Previous Efforts.

MODEL COTTAGE SHOWN

Parents and Friends Throng the Gymnasium and Admire the Clever Work Being Exhibited by the Children.

Scores of parents and friends visited the Plainfield High School gymnasium last night, to view the opening of the large exhibition of the handiwork of the pupils of the High School and grades of the city. The display this year eclipses all previous efforts of the different departments, and a visit during the remaining days of the exhibition is well worth the time, inasmuch as a knowledge of what the local pupils are doing in the way of learning practical household economies can be gained. The exhibit will be open this evening from 7:30 to 9:30, and tomorrow afternoon and night. In the afternoon from 2 to 5 and in the evening from 7:30 to 9:30. Teachers and pupils are on hand to escort visitors around.

Probably the center of admiration in the many articles on show are the model cottage bedroom and the furniture suitable for a library. Every article contained therein had been made by the pupils in the High School manual training department under the direction of Henry F. Oesting. The bedroom set, consisting of five pieces, was made in one school year by a class of sixteen boys, working four periods a week. The covers and window curtains, doilies and dresser scarfs were all made by the young women of the sewing department. Another creditable piece of work is a display of twenty kindergarten chairs made for the new Evergreen Avenue School by a class of twenty-two boys. Other articles in this exhibition included a library table by Maxwell Richard; oak desk, by Harold Zeek; eight-legged library table, by Robert Vail; Morris chair, by Horace Kunzman; music cabinet, by LeRoy Stringham; davenport, by Chester Alpaugh; mission table, by Kenneth Lincoln; rocker, by Colin Millard and a piano lamp by Earl Jinishi. Practically all of this work mentioned was made by pupils of third year High School. Manual training in the grades is taught by Kenneth McCullough and the finished articles are especially meritorious.

Among the many drawings on view, the work of the mechanical drawing classes drew the attention of the men present. Clarence Shubert is the instructor in this department, and under his direction the young men have mastered the rudiments of mechanical and architectural drawing to a remarkable degree, the originals and blue prints being on exhibition.

The freehand drawing, painting and designing of which Miss Anna J. Bennett is the supervisor in the High School and lower grades, occupies a prominent part of the space allotted for the display. Miss Ruth D. Sadler takes care of this line of work in the sixth, seventh and eighth grades. Third year High School work is especially commendable. A new feature in this class added to the work during the past year is fan decorating. Pupils purchase a five-cent fan, make their own design and paint it on the fan. Charcoal drawing, freehand composition, sketching out of doors, brush work, interior decorating, pencil work, study of architectural forms and machine drawing are all parts of this course. In the sixth, seventh and eighth grades, portfolio designing, decorative work and costume designing in two tones are important features, while in the fifth, fourth and third grades, book covers and pencil lettering are additions to the regular pencil and paint work.

The opportunity class of the Whittier school demonstrated the work of that department, and the various articles, such as baskets, bird sticks, flower taborets, etc., received many complimentary glances from the visitors. The pupils in this class are not exactly abnormal, but handicapped more than their school mates.

In the home arts department are included the dressmaking and model cottage upkeep. Miss Lucile Jackson has charge of the cottage adjoining the building where the girls are taught household economics, cooking, laundry and general housekeeping. Miss Margaret Russell has charge of the home arts work of the fifth and sixth grades. The making of fancy laces, followed out by the pupils' own designs, are notable features of this department. Miss Ruth Klein is the cooking instructor in the seventh and eighth grades. Her pupils have had practical experience in preparing and serving lunches. Specimens of each of these classes mentioned are also on exhibition.

The handiwork of the pupils of the arts and crafts department, consisting of rings, lavalieres, brooches, stick pins, baskets, trays and lamps, metal work and pottery show the remarkable skill of the individual pupil along this line and reflect great credit on the instructor, Miss Mary Decker. The sewing classes under the instruction of Miss Alice Lindsley, exhibited various articles of apparel made by individual girls, with a slip of paper attached showing the exact cost of each article. The girls to a large extent do their own cutting and sewing, and the results bespeak great credit to them. House dresses, school dresses and evening dresses are included in the showing.

All of the wiring for the electrical lamps on exhibition was done by Messrs. Harold Spicer and Juan Babcock, under the direction of Roy Lord.

Much of the credit for the successful showing is due to Arthur F. Hopper, the general supervisor of the manual and domestic science departments of the High School. Mr. Hopper has been connected with the local High School but one year, coming from Roselle Park, where he held a similar position. Prior to that he was the educational instructor at the Elizabeth Y. M. C. A. Mr. Hopper is a graduate of the Teachers' College of Columbia University. During his stay here he has had the co-operation of all of the teachers and this in a large measure is responsible for the splendid showing of each department.

CANADIAN UNVEILS INTRIGUES OF COURT

John Murray Gibbon, a quiet but observing Canadian, has just given London something besides the war to think about, in the latest product of his pen, "Hearts & Faces." Full of shrewd, pointed description and biting irony, Gibbon's "Hearts & Faces" has invited the world to gaze upon the intimate life of several persons internationally famous and well-known in the daily life of the British metropolis. The book has been brought to New York to be published.

Gibbon's life reads like a romance. He was born in Ceylon, the son of a titled Scot, educated in Glasgow; given a degree, "Cum Laude," at Christ Church (where King Edward was schooled), Oxford; admitted to classes in German universities and to the art schools of Paris and London, including the famous "Langham"; edited for a time "Black & White," one of London's big magazines; elected an officer of the Circumnavigators' club because of his globe-trotting achievements; author of several historical books, and now on the threshold of new conquests in a field but recently entered.

Gibbon lives in the quaint French-Canadian village of St. Anne de Bellevue, Quebec, and is making a record for himself as an official of the Canadian Pacific railway.

CONSERVATION CONGRESS STANDS FOR DEVELOPMENT

DR G. E. CONDRA, NEW PRESIDENT, NATIONAL CONSERVATION CONGRESS — WATER POWER DAM IN CONSTRUCTION

WASHINGTON—(Special)—Private industrial development of the great water power resources of the United States was emphatically endorsed by the National Conservation Congress, which has just come to a close in this city. After a stormy three hours' debate, the Congress, the great conservation body of the country, recorded its official approval of this principle by a vote of three to one.

The spectacular feature of the fight was the turning down of Gifford Pinchot by the Conservation Congress, of whose executive committee he was a member. Pinchot charged that the Congress was packed and was met with the declaration that his charge was an insult to every governor, mayor and chamber of commerce president, who had been invited to appoint the delegates which made up the meeting. The result of the debate—the endorsement of the Shields and Myers water power bills—is taken by the members to mean that the big conservation body had grown tired of a tying-up of the country's resources and was ready and anxious to put itself on record on these specific legislative measures providing for development of resources.

The development of water power, which conservationists recognize as the greatest natural resource the country has, has been brought almost to stagnation by the failure of legislation looking to its development. Business men with capital have stood ready to start on the hazardous undertaking of harnessing great rivers in order to provide cheaper power and light, as well as cheaper fertilizers for the farmer and a greater supply of explosives for our army and navy, through the new process of taking nitrogen from the air by means of water power. They have been met with the cry of "trust" and "monopoly," until, as business men, they were almost ready to abandon their efforts. The action of the Conservation Congress, however, in placing its stamp of approval on a plan to permit private industry to go ahead and develop water powers, under a limited franchise and carefully governed restrictions, is regarded as the most important step to water power conservation that has been made in recent years.

Such men as Hugh L. Cooper, the engineer of international reputation who built the Keokuk dam as well as big water power plants at Niagara and on the Susquehanna River, have been prominent in the power fight. The President and members of his Cabinet and members of Congress, without regard to political affiliations, have been advocating strongly the necessity of legislative action that will put an end to a stagnation in the development of this wonderful resource. Almost every other nation of any size, it has been pointed out, is ahead of America in the use of water power. This fact, it is said, coupled with the growing demand of the people of the United States that something be done so that the country can utilize, as well as conserve, this vast resource, is regarded as the basis of the decisive action by the Conservation Congress.

The meeting was made up of prominent experts in both federal and state governments, senators and representatives and prominent men from practically every state in the Union. Dr. Henry S. Drinker, president of Lehigh University, was chairman of the committee on resolutions, which included a governor of a state, several senators, and other men of affairs from forty-two states.

ABLE ADDRESSES HEARD AT CONFERENCE OF CHURCHES

The colored churches of the Synod of New Jersey were well represented by ministers and delegates yesterday afternoon and evening at the association meeting held in Bethel chapel, Newark, Jersey City, Hackensack, Princeton, Elizabeth, Englewood and Plainfield were well represented. Affiliating delegations from Hillburn, N. Y.; New York city and Brooklyn were present. A large audience of members and friends of the congregation at Bethel greeted the speakers in the evening. Dr. Horace G. Miller, of New York city, addressed the association upon the theme, "What is a Trained Sunday-School Teacher?" in a splendid and helpful manner. "Women's Work for the Church" was well presented in an address by Mrs. R. C. Wormley, of this city. Splendid delegations of women from the churches at Newark, Jersey City and Englewood received hearty applause.

The association went on record as approving the increase of time to be given to reports of women's work in the churches at its future meetings. A social half-hour with refreshments gave pleasure to the audience and guests at the close of the evening session.

BIBLE CLASS TO MEET.

The Bible study class organized recently by the Public Recreation Committee will commence study next Tuesday night in the Washington School under the leadership of Miss Clyde Burnett. All members are urged to bring their Biederwolf song books. Miss Burnett will teach the 14th chapter of Matthew on that evening. Miss Burnett is one of the ablest Bible students in the city and an experienced teacher.

LIQUOR VENDORS RESTRICTED.

Boston, June 2.—Under a new law, in effect today, the transportation of liquor by licensed dealers from a license community into a no-license city or town is prohibited. The temperance forces have fought for years to secure this legislation.

The celebration of the Lord's supper will be held in the Watchung Presbyterian church Sunday morning at 11 o'clock.

RECREATION NOTES.

The Dunbar Dance will be held tonight in the Washington School. A feature of the evening will be a spot dance, in which all will participate.

The regular weekly municipal dance will be held in the same school tomorrow night.

MEN'S ASSOCIATION MEETING.

The Men's Association of the Watchung Avenue Presbyterian church will meet in the church parlors tonight at 8:15. A special speaker will be present and all men in the borough are cordially invited to be present.

MUSICAL SERVICE.

A special musical service will be held in Watchung Avenue Presbyterian church Sunday night at 7:45. The men's choir will sing and the soloists for the evening will be Mrs. A. J. Stiglitz, Ralph Martin and John Richards.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES.

Tonight will be Tabernacle night at the association, and William D. Murray, president of the Y. M. C. A., will address the meeting. Clifford Braider will be in charge of the music. All young men and women over fifteen years of age are invited to come and bring their Biederwolf song books.

HUGHES BLOCKS OWN SUPPORTER

Secretary Announces He Has Not Authorized Use of Name as Candidate.

ROOSEVELT IS GAINING

Will Include Fairbanks, Root and Burton in State—Michigan to Turn From Ford to Fairbanks—Moore Will Not Be Hasty.

Washington, June 2.—Maintaining his own silence, Associate Justice Hughes today made it known through his secretary, L. H. Green, that no one had been authorized to put forward his name as a Presidential possibility.

This statement throws cold water upon the Hughes boom just at the time when it was strongest. Following a two days' depression, Hughes stock began to rise yesterday, and conditions around headquarters in Chicago last night caused political writers to make the positive statement that the associate justice would be nominated. They wrote without knowledge of today's events, however, and it is believed that the statement printed above is just what Roosevelt leaders have been hoping for.

Even the strongest Hughes' supporters have been working under a serious handicap. When soliciting delegates for the [illegible] they are always embarr[illegible] asked how they know Mr. Hughes will accept if nominated; and while the announcement of Secretary Green does not mean that Hughes is not to be considered, it will make good campaign material for the Roosevelt forces.

Michigan was for Hughes last night. How it will stand today is not known. Charles B. Warren, national committeeman, declared yesterday that, despite instructions to vote for Henry Ford, the Michigan delegates would line up solidly for Hughes.

The tentative Roosevelt slate announced unofficially last night, spiked a strong Hughes support. While the Hughes men from Indiana were insisting that Fairbanks, the native son, might be acceptable to Hughes as a vice-presidential nominee, it is announced from Roosevelt headquarters that he has already been selected there. The Hughes workers can only hope; Roosevelt men are able to promise and they are turning Fairbanks men to the Colonel every hour of the day. The tentative slate of the Roosevelt managers, predicted upon the nomination of the Colonel in the regular Republican convention, follows:

For President — Theodore Roosevelt.

For Vice President—Charles W. Fairbanks.

For Secretary of State—Elihu Root.

For Secretary of the Treasury—Theodore W. Burton.

This takes care of the three strongest "favorite sons" and leaves room in the Cabinet for Progressive leaders who must be recognized. It is the strongest Roosevelt card played.

George W. Perkins has announced that the Progressive Convention will hold off the nomination of Roosevelt until it is ascertained "to a reasonable certainty" what the Republican intend to do.

SPECIAL DELIVERY STAMPS ON PARCELS POST URGED

The advantage of sending parcel post for quick delivery with special delivery stamp attached is probably not appreciated by many people. The special delivery stamp insures the parcel being sent with first-class mail, thus insuring quick dispatch and on arrival at destination, immediate delivery.

However, the special delivery stamp, which is blue in color and oblong and distinctive should be always used, as the large number of stamps usually used on parcels post make it very eay to overlook special delivery if written on the parcel, but the blue distinctive stamp attracts attention and special treatment. It is permissible to use ordinary stamps with special delivery written directly under the stamps, but this is not advisable.

Special delivery letters and parcels are delivered in Plainfield from 7 in the morning until 9 o'clock at night. Don't neglect to cut a slot in your door for the receipt of mail, or erect a letter box, to expedite the quick delivery of your and your neighbor's mail. Every half-minute you delay the carrier is stolen from your neighbors beyond, and this means a whole half-hour at the end of the route, and they have to wait long enough as it is. Especial attention is being given to the early delivery of mail, and co-operation is solicited.

HAROLD W. ACKERMAN.

Harold W. Ackerman, aged eighteen years, died at eleven o'clock last night following an illness of more than a year. He was the son of Mrs. Michael J. Walsh, of 108 Liberty street, and beside his mother is survived by several brothers and sisters. His father was the late Cornelius J. Ackerman, Jr. The funeral will be held at his mother's Sunday afternoon at 2:30 and will be private.

MRS. CHARLES HURTT DIES OF BROKEN HEART

Loss of Husband, Death of Daughter and Illness of Son Hastens End.

Mrs. Mary Hurtt, widow of Chas. Hurtt, formerly of Plainfield, died yesterday afternoon at the home of her father, 447 West Forty-eighth street, New York city, where she had been living for several months. According to the physician who has been attending Mrs. Hurtt, she died of a "broken heart," her critical condition being brought on by a series of afflictions which began when her husband died on September 24 last.

Following the death of her husband, her young daughter, Evelyn, passed away in January last, and a little later her four-year-old son, Charles, was taken to the Children's Hospital in Jersey City, where since that time he has undergone five operations for eye trouble.

Mrs. Hurtt's maiden name was May Stewart, her home being in New York. Her husband died at Asbury Park, where he was widely known as a member of the life-saving corps. He was famed as a long-distance swimmer, having taken part in a number of contests. Mrs. Hurtt's funeral will be held at the late home in New York at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

ENGLAND BUYS TWO U. S. STEAMERS FOR ONE MILLION

Baltimore, June 2.—The Atlantic Fruit Co. has sold its steamers Sarnia and Siberia for $1,000,000 to interests identified with the British Government. A certified check for $557,000 was paid over to the company for the Siberia, and the agreement calls for a sum almost as great for the Sarnia.

PASSED A BAD CHECK; IS GUILTY OF LARCENY

New York, June 2.—Norton D. Sultzer, of Darien, Conn., was today convicted in the criminal part of the Supreme Court on a charge of larceny in the second degree. Sultzer, it is alleged, had been guilty of issuing a check for $275, when he had only $30 in the bank. He was paroled in the custody of his counsel and will be sentenced tomorrow.

FEDERATION OF MISSION SOCIETIES DISCUSS PLANS

Plans for the coming year were discussed at a preliminary meeting of the Federation of Women's Missionary Societies in Vincent chapel of the First M. E. church yesterday afternoon. There was a good representation. Among features suggested were a large mission study class, a conference for methods of work and a luncheon, all of which will be taken up in the fall.

Mrs. Reuben Knox is chairman of the home mission department and Mrs. C. R. Banks the head of the committee on foreign mission work. They will make their report later. Mrs. Edgar Williams, as president of the Federation, was in charge of yesterday's meeting.

EPWORTHIANS OF MONROE AVENUE CHURCH ELECT

The Epworth League of the Monroe Avenue M. E. Church held its annual meeting last night, when these officers were elected for the coming year: President, A. E. Sweetman; first vice-president, Miss Mary Matthews; second vice-president, Miss Alice Lude; third vice-president, Miss E. Y. Lude; fourth vice-president, Miss Mildred Barnes; secretary, Harry Lude; treasurer, Russell Hess; pianist, Miss Clara Lee; assistant, Miss Grace Schmidt.

The devotional ervices of the league will be resumed Sunday evening at 7:15 o'clock, and the officers of the organization will be publicly installed that evening by Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph, pastor of the church.

EDWARD COUGHLAN'S FUNERAL

The funeral of Edward Coughlan, whose death occurred Wednesday morning, was held this morning in St. Mary's church, where a solemn high mass was celebrated by the Rev. Father Hennessey, assisted by Rev. Father Bogan as deacon and Rev. Father McDonald as sub-deacon. The floral offerings were beautiful and numerous, many coming from friends and relatives of the deceased. Interment took place in St. Mary's cemetery, the following acting as pall bearers: Daniel Dugan, John Hurley, James Strapp, Edward Hennessey, Patrick O'Brien, of Plainfield, and Daniel Ganley, of New York.

DECREE OF DIVORCE.

Mrs. Ingeborg A. Stillman, of the borough, has been awarded a decree of absolute divorce by the Court of Chancery from her husband, Floyd W. Stillman. Action was brought on statutory grounds. Mrs. Stillman is also given the custody of her eleven-year-old daughter Majorie. Robert Newton Crane was Mrs. Stillman's lawyer.

EASTERN ASSOCIATION BEGINS CONFERENCE

Many Delegates at Opening Session in Seventh-Day Baptist Church.

The annual conference of the Eastern Association of the Seventh-Day Baptist church during which denominational matters are discussed and a mutual exchange of views brought about, began in the Seventh-Day Baptist church in this city last night. Sessions are to continue according to a scheduled program up to and including Sunday. At the opening gathering last night and meetings this morning and this afternoon the attendances were quite large as in addition to those from Plainfield and nearby cities forty delegates were present from New York State, Rhode Island and other places.

The program was formally opened last night with a praise service in charge of Theodore G. Davis, of the local congregation, after which the president of the Eastern Association, Alexander W. Vars, of Plainfield, made the opening address. He extended a welcome to all the delegates and after outlining the general business to be conducted, spoke briefly on the general theme of the entire gathering, "Courageous Caleb, or 'We are well able to overcome it.'" Optimism was the keynote of Mr. Vars' address, and this was also the paramount thought of Rev. John T. Davis, of Leonardsville, N. Y., who spoke after him. Mr. Davis is president of the Central and Western Associations of the Seventh-Day Baptist church and he brought greetings from his constituency.

Today's sessions began at 10 o'clock this morning with the Rev. Jesse E. Hutchins opening the devotions. The business session was devoted to the executive committee's report, treasurer's report, reports of visiting delegates and reports of the local delegates. A missionary hour began at 10:45, during which two addresses on home and foreign mission topics were given, one by Rev. Herbert L. Cottrell, of Berlin, N. Y., and the other by Rev. Edward B. Saunders, of Providence, R. I., who is the secretary of the Seventh-Day Baptist Missionary Society.

The program this afternoon will be as follows: 2 p. m., devotions, Rev. Jesse E. Hutchins; 2:10 p. m., education society hour; Rev. Edgar D. Van Horn and Rev. Arthur E. Main; 3:15 p. m., sermon, Rev. Erlo E. Sutton.

In addition to the delegates who have already arrived there will be numerous others coming tomorrow. One of these delegations will be a large one coming from New York city. Rev. Edwin B. Shaw, pastor of the local Seventh-Day Baptist church, is chairman of the entertainment committee, and with a corps of assistants is caring for the welfare of the out of town delegates.

"QUEEN ESTHER" IS ENJOYED BY MANY

Successful Affair Given in the First Baptist Church, New Market, Last Evening.

The cantata, "Queen Esther," was given in the First Baptist church, New Market, last night, before a large and appreciative audience. The affair was given under the direction of Mrs. Charles S. Day for the benefit of the organ fund of the church. All the participants acquitted themselves in a finished manner, the cantata being greatly enjoyed. The cast of characters:

BUILDING SITE DEED ACCEPTED

Y. M. H. A. Formally Open Campaign to Raise $15,000.

TWO $500 DONATIONS

Judge Wm. Newcorn Presides at Mass Meeting Held in Columbus Hall—Some Inspiring Addresses Are Heard.

Two contributions of $500 each to the Y. M. H. A. building fund were received by the committee this morning, thus starting the ten-day campaign auspiciously. One was from Benjamin J. Kline and the other from Tepper Brothers. The Plainfield Young Women's Hebrew Association, with only twenty members, last night gave $50, and many other subscriptions have been received.

The campaign was officially launched at a mass meeting held last night in the auditorium of the Columbus Club, when hundreds of Jewish citizens met to lend their support to the cause. Within the ten days the committee hopes to secure $15,000, and there is every indication that the ambition will be realized.

Judge William Newcorn acted as chairman of the meeting last night, and on behalf of the Young Men's Hebrew Association of Plainfield he formally accepted a deed to a building site on Washington street, near Front. This lot was donated by Samuel Schwartz. Mr. Newcorn thanked Mr. Schwartz for his generosity and public spirit.

Max Levy, president of the Y. M. H. A. and Y. W. H. A., of New Jersey, spoke on the subject of preparedness. He told of the wonderful opportunity offered to Jewish people in America and of their duty and their love for this country. Jewish youths have neglected their own religion, he said, but this has been due to the fact that they have had no Jewish centers in which to meet. The building of a Y. M. H. A. in Plainfield and other cities in the country is an important step in preparing the Jewish boys and girls of the country for future work toward the advancement of all things American.

Albert Leon, of Perth Amboy, told of a campaign recently conducted there in which 700 members were secured in four days. The committee started to raise $800 and instead it raised $2,200. He said that a number of Jewish citizens got together and gave $15,000 for a Jewish community center. Such buildings are an economic need, he declared, and he urged that Plainfield shows its patriotism and its wisdom by providing a home for the Y. M. H. A. at once.

The Rev. H. Masliansky talked in the Jewish language.

Falk Younker, field secretary of the National Council of the Y. M. H. A. and Y. W. M. A., told of the national movement for Jewish community centers. The Y. M. H. A. stands for Judaism and for patriotism, he said. It stands for Schmai Yisrail and the Star Spangled Banner. Mr. Younker said he was not here to talk, but to work, and he cheerfully predicted that the $15,000 asked for would be forthcoming.

Louis Brenner, field secretary in charge of activities in Pennsylvania, who recently returned from a visit to California, said that the West was waking up, but that it had come to the East for an answer to the Jewish problem. It found the answer in community centers for Jewish boys and girls, he said, and he recited numerous instances of successful campaigns such as is being undertaken in Plainfield.

Judge Newcorn closed the meeting with a brief statement of the need of such a home in Plainfield and an appeal to all local people to aid in the important work of making its erection possible.

[illegible] $500,000,000 LAST YEAR TO SATISFY AMERICAN SWEET TOOTH

Over eight and one-half billion pounds of sugar were required in 1915 to satisfy the American sweet tooth.

This brought the nation's sugar bill for the past year up to $500,000,000, representing an amount larger by at least a hundred million dollars than the American people ever before paid.

The cause of the increased size of this sugar bill was the European war. From the very beginning of hostilities the cost of sugar has risen to high levels the world over.

Due to war influences, also, the domestic production of sugar which had fallen off after the passage of the Underwood tariff law with its free sugar provision, gained a new lease of life and reached a high record mark in 1915.

Though the American householder had to pay more for sugar last year than under normal conditions, yet he had one compensation. Sugar was cheaper in the United States during 1915 than in any other large sugar-using country in the world.

This favorable price condition was due to the record domestic production of sugar that the war brought about. The fact that sugar grown from American soil was larger in quantity than ever before, was of great service to the American consumer, because the competition afforded between the home-grown product and imported sugar sold by the refiners, resulted in a saving in price that ran into millions of dollars.

Because of this domestic competition and the large volume of sugar home-grown that found its way to market, prices of sugar to the consumer were held down to far lower levels last year than would have been the case if there had been no domestic production and this country had been wholly dependent upon foreign nations for sugar supplies.

For the first time in history sugar grown in the United States last year provided over one-half of all the sugar consumed by the American people, the total production of home-grown sugar reaching 4,596,000,000 pounds.

The longest forward stride in the production of home-grown sugar was made by the beet sugar branch of the industry, which produced in the last campaign, now coming to a close, 1,700,000,000 pounds of sugar. The value of this sugar to the American beet sugar producers was in excess of $90,000,000 and brought to the beet farmers of the West who grew the beets over $40,000,000.

Beet sugar made in this campaign was sold in practically every state in the Union during the fall and winter months, and at wholesale prices averaging about one-half a cent a pound below the prices asked by the refiners for sugar made from imported raws. This price reduction represented a saving to the American consumers of this sugar amounting to over $8,000,000.

The next largest contribution to last year's record output of home-grown sugar was made by the sugar planters of Hawaii, with a production of 1,300,000,000 pounds of sugar, an increase of over 500,000,000 pounds over the preceding year. Porto Rico contributed 716,000,000 pounds. The Philippines shipped 180,000,000 pounds for use here, and Louisiana and Texas produced 298,000,000 pounds.

TAXICAB DRIVER HAS DECIDEDLY NARROW ESCAPE

James Tate, colored, driver employed by the Plainfield Taxi Cab Company, was painfully but not seriously hurt at 1 o'clock this morning when an automobile he was driving turned turtle at the corner of Clinton avenue and West Fourth street. The steering wheel locked as Tate attempted to make a turn, and before the mechanism could be righted the momentum caused the car to go over. Tate was the only occupant and was thrown a considerable distance away, receiving numerous cuts and bruises about the head and body.

The injured driver secured assistance in the neighborhood and was later attended by a physician. The machine was badly damaged.

The Town is Built Into Gibraltar Rock

Gibraltar Rock on Side Leading to Spain

The Capture of This Great Fortified Rock, the Key To England's Naval Power, Would Alter the History of the World Within 24 Hours.

Copyright, 1916, by The International Syndicate.

THERE are three main keys to the sea strength of the British Empire—Gibraltar, Suez and that narrow elbow of deep water, the Straits of Aden, where the Red Sea turns into the vast bosom of the Eastern ocean. Of these the main key is Gibraltar: Gibraltar the Rock, Gibraltar the mined, the countermined—the rock pitted full with great guns, that can shoot clear into Spanish territory in two directions.

The average man knows that Gibraltar is a great towering rock, set up alone and solitary in the Atlantic ocean, right where the continents of Europe and Africa almost come together. As a matter of cold fact, Gibraltar is connected with the Spanish mainland by a very good highroad and a broad strip of land that has been created into a so-called neutral strip of territory.

Gibraltar Not An Island

Gibraltar then is not an island, but a rocky point of land connected with Spain by a narrow neck of ground. Just at present there is buried under that narrow piece of ground, so says the secret rumor, enough gun cotton and other high explosives to throw the whole thing a thousand feet into the air.

Once the electric button would be pressed (sending an electric spark into all this ammunition), a small but intense earthquake would be evident. The waters of the blue Mediterranean would shoot into the smoking hole and make the Rock of Gibraltar really an island.

Few spots on earth can rival in compact interest at this time the real center of British sea-power. The capture of Gibraltar, say war experts, would alter the history of the world in 24 hours. But there is no danger of Gibraltar being captured, declare the British war experts, it would first be blown into small bits.

And (so says the inner gossip of those who ought to know) there are two electric keys to this volcano manufactured from gun cotton and other high explosives. One electric switchboard is hidden deep down under the living rock below the ocean bed. That other (and second key) is far above the smiling waters of the Mediterranean, secreted in an inner shell of stone and guarded night and day by a gray bearded non-commissioned officer and a stern faced young lieutenant.

Natives a Cheerful Lot

Yet nothing of all this can be read in the cheerful faces of the scantily clad, Gibraltan natives, that curious mixture of Spanish and Moorish blood, which makes up the native inhabitants of the rock. The bronzed faces of the British garrison show a certain gravity; but it is not from any thought of Gibraltar being blown up to keep from capture. These men may any day be sent to the war front, where their chances for life are almost zero as compared to any danger on The Rock.

No thought of danger can be seen in the jolly faces of the sturdy British sailors, enjoying brief stay ashore. They throng the crooked narrow main street of Gibraltar—all up-hill until it starts going straight up in the air. The little restaurants—mostly in the open air—shut up at ten o'clock and the average sailor roams the streets until midnight singing.

The sturdy little rock-policemen, with handy looking revolvers, swinging under their right hands, seldom do more than speak a quieting word. The revolvers are caught by a service strap to their right wrists. At midnight the rock-police shoo the sailormen into their lodging houses with no real trouble and little noise.

Tourists Not Wanted

However, shore leave at Gibraltar is very rare nowadays with every able-bodied man needed afloat. And as for tourists, well, in once hospitable Gibraltar, the tourist is an eyesore, and an affront. He comes ashore in a small boat and passes under the watchful eyes of many guards.

He must show his baggage and if he has the smallest known camera he must give it up to the military official, whose tiny wooden shed stands on the right of the stone gateway leading into the main street of Gibraltar. Also he must show his passport every time he is asked, which is often, in many cases.

So that touring Gibraltar is not what it used to be and if you think to spend over 24 hours, you must get a special permit from that watchful individual, the Governor of The Rock, and it takes a mighty good reason for spending two nights in Gibraltar nowadays.

As for the natives, they are numbered and catalogued and known as a shepherd knows his sheep.

Has Three Harbors

For a small place, Gibraltar is at least well supplied with harbors, there being no less than three. The inner one has wonderful water-gates that drop down at night and have great steel chains hanging to the bottom of the harbor, being a protection against submarines. However, only war vessels are allowed inside, which is not too pleasant a thought for passengers on liners anchored outside during the night.

In Gibraltar men say that all day and all night British submarines are crossing and recrossing the narrow space between Europe and Africa, watching for enemy submarines trying to get through from the Atlantic to the Mediterranean.

Gibraltar bristles with gun muzzles. The steel tubes glisten in the sun on many sides, and after the traveller has been passed by the watchful guards, he can climb near them on the outskirts of the town and admire them. Then he goes back into the town and men will tell him that he has not seen any of the real guns, but only the saluting batteries and a few minor guns not counted on for real warfare.

The real guns (men say, with a wave of the hand toward the towering Gibraltar cliffs) are sunk into the rocks, out of sight and that certain sections are pitted with tremendous guns, capable of shooting close to the shores of Africa, which can be seen clearly enough.

The second harbor of Gibraltar is just outside the inner basis. It is mostly used by small boats. The big outer roadstead is where the ocean liners anchor at about a mile from the landing dock, which is in the outer harbor.

Much Depends On Rain

So Gibraltar is impregnable as long as it rains every now and then; for curiously enough the one possibility forseen as dangerous to the rock fortress, is the fact that all drinking water comes from drainage of rain water off the highest part of the rocks. A wonderful system of vast caverns in the heart of the rock has been constructed, whereby the rainwater runs off parts of the upper rocks, which have been cemented smooth.

This water is conducted far down below the surface of the ground into immense rock caverns, where the water is cooled and preserved. Food and powder there is in plenty, but the water must come from rain, which is none too plentiful. It is said that sufficient water for the Gibraltar garrison is hidden inside the heart of the rocks to last the soldiers a whole year. Food for three years is likewise stored in the rockhewn depositories of the military authorities.

Aerial Railway on Cables

So much for Gibraltar, the key to the Mediterranean, under war conditions. The Gibraltar of more pleasant days is a delightful place to stop. Over its mighty rocks, there is climbing sufficient to test the nerves of any Alpine or Rocky Mountain enthusiast.

From the very center of the public park there runs a double steel cable reaching a thousand feet into the air, where the cable ties into enormous cement anchors. This is the aerial railway by which food is sent up to the artillery men, the signal watches and those other more secret guards that hover night and day around the most vital military features.

The cars swing dizzily from side to side and make the soldiers sea-sick, when the guards are changed. Only picked men are allowed up there at all: only the choicest of the chosen go in certain places. In one place, the watch is never changed, and there is no such thing as leave to be had. Curiously enough men are jealous of the honor of serving there; and, if he succeeds his comrades speak of him as of a superior order of human being, watching over the safety of ordinary humanity.

Prices Fixed By Authogities

Men never speak of a full "dinner-pail" in Gibraltar; yet every soul lives on the full "tin-can;" for canned goods (or "tinned" as the Britisher calls it) forms the important part of every dinner table. Prices are fixed by the military authorities, so that there are no "bargains" to be had in food-stuffs. But on the other hand neither do prices go way up out of sight, as would otherwise be the case.

Famous Prison Camp

The most vitally interesting spot on Gibraltar rock is of course the prisoners' camping ground. It's the one place most thought of and least talked about by wise people. The prisoners' camp is high up on top the great rock in a natural gully. In it are all sorts of manners of men. Some are known enemies, some are only suspected and a few, very few, are prisoners captured in open fighting.

There has never been known but one successful attempt to escape from this extraordinary place. Two prisoners with outside help obtained a long rope and climbed down sixty feet of the hundred feet reaching to a sloping bank, from whence escape to a boat would have been possible. The rope broke and the two men fell, both being fatally injured. They rolled down the cliff to the waiting boat, which rowed away with the two dying forms. Nothing would have been known, but for the rope found later and which the escaping men had intended to let down after them. An investigation showed the whole story.

The photographs show the principal features of the fortress, so far as military necessity will permit of. Roaming around with a smuggled camera might easily mean a sudden and violent death.

The clear cut features of the big rock, the Military-Governor's palace, the peaceful and beautiful park, the triple harbor of Gibraltar are featured in the photographs. The real meaning of Gibraltar can only be glimpsed from the beetling, grim cliffs, towering over the tiny town and throwing a commanding shadow over the narrow waters of the furthest west of the Mediterranean sea.

A Glimpse of the "Apache Country"

Scouting Party of Indians on the Trail in Mexico

Apache Scouts One of the Most Valuable Assets of the U. S. Army -- Their Uncanny Skill In Tracking An Enemy -- Most Famous of Indian Warriors -- Hounds of Canyon and Desert.

BY WALDON FAWCETT.

UNCLE SAM has the world's best scouts working for him—"best" that is, if we contemplate the American continent as the scene of military operations. Critics there are who pick flaws in other sections of our military and naval establishments and who declare that the moves in behalf of "preparedness" have come none too soon. Maybe so, but there is consolation in the knowledge that in the possession of one essential of martial sufficiency the republic stands pre-eminent. The Indians' contribution to the cause of preparedness is valuable as it is unique. Trailing, as the redskin is performing it for Uncle Sam, is not merely an accomplishment, it is an art—the priceless heritage of centuries of life in the open.

Apache—that name of dreaded memory has attained a new significance since the Mexican campaign against Villa and his band was undertaken. Pershing's operations among the canyons and on the deserts of our neighbor republic have proven to the public what our army officers have long known, namely, that the bloodthirsty Apache warrior, turned scout in behalf of his former foeman, is one of the most valuable assets that the U. S. Army possesses. The very qualities of craftiness and cunning which will cause the Apaches to go down in history as the one unconquered Indian tribe serve the erstwhile savage in good stead when it comes to trailing, aided by only the faintest of clues.

When the American newspaper audience read at the breakfast table the other morning that a corps of Apache scouts had been rushed southward into Mexico on motor trucks, the item, to the average casual reader, perhaps suggested little. Possibly, at most, the word Apache called to mind something of the exploits of the storied Geronimo, most famous of renegade chieftains. But to everyone man who has a first-hand or even second-hand acquaintance with the Apache that brief dispatch called up visions of the hounds of the desert—Indians not of imposing height, but of restless eye, Indians that do not conform in stature to the ideals of the story books, yet who, as Charles F. Lummis has said, have "the eye of the kite, the ear of the cat, the cunning of the fox and the tirelessness of the gray wolf."

The Tirelessness of the Apache.

The tirelessness of the Apache is not a mere matter of Indian legend. U. S. Army officers had eloquent proof of it long years before the name of Villa was ever heard. The explanation is to be found, of course, in the physical training of the Apache. Born out of doors, this nomad of the Southwest literally spends his entire life in the open.

No small part of the credit for the Apache's almost unbelievable powers belong unquestionably to the land which is "home" to these children of mountain and desert. "No man's land" would seem, in the estimation of the white man, a phrase peculiarly appropriate to the ancestral stronghold of these "Bedouins of the New World" as they have been nicknamed. A more repellant region than it was in the heydey of the Apache tribes would be difficult to imagine, but was the world's rough hand as administered by nature in her severest mood that made for many of the traits that caused the Apache to be feared and dreaded for long fearsome years in a domain larger than all Europe, excepting Russia.

The Wilderness Whence Sprang the Apache

In order to have ability to appreciate what the twentieth century Apache scout is doing for the present-day American army it may be well to look for a moment at the environment whence sprang this superman of the trail. The average citizen knowing that the remnant of the Apaches now occupy three reservations in the Southwest has it in mind that the original realm of the tribe was embraced within the confines of the present States of Arizona and New Mexico. As a matter of fact, however, the great open-air school wherein the Apaches learned the science of scouting was of far vaster dimension. It extended, indeed, from a point midway in Texas to Southern California, and from Colorado on the north far into Old Mexico on the south. It is the familiarity with Mexico's mountain fastnesses acquired during the period when the Apaches were on the warpath that renders the older tribesmen so valuable as scouts to any American force operating in the turbulent land to the south of us.

A Natural Born Scout

His life, his training, his environment, and more than all else the form of warfare which the Apaches in the old days were forced to adopt, combine to make the average tribesman a natural born scout. Secretiveness is not the least essential of the attributes of the successful scout, and secretiveness has become instinctive with the Apache. The ability to melt into the brown earth and to merge with the gray rocks is his to a baffling degree. In the old days when the Apaches on the warpath gave our troops so much trouble it was the first principle of the Indian fighter to fight in what we have come to know as true Indian fashion, skulking from one shelter to another and never exposing the smallest portion of the body. Indeed, these Indian warriors had the present-day trench fighters beaten to a standstill in this branch of military science. This knack of capitalizing the shelter of every rock and tree has been translated into terms of modern trailing with rare efficiency.

On top of the secretiveness of the Apache is that marvelous perception of detail which makes for genius in trailing. On this score no white man, even though fortified by the experience of a lifetime in scouting, has ever proven the peer of the best Apache trailers. The latter are alike at home in following a scent over rocky hillsides and through mazes of sand and dust. Not only have the Apaches demonstrated an ability to detect footprints so faint that none of the white men of the average scouting party had been able to discover their presence, but they have piled miracle upon miracle by figuring how long a time had elapsed since such a faint print was made.

The Apache is emphatically an individualist which makes, of course, for the ideal scout. He needs no leader, he worries not over lack of counsel and advice, he suffers not from loss of companionship. Self-sufficient and self-reliant, keeping his own counsel, he plays a lone hand in a masterly manner. To surmise how inadvisable is the solitary Apache bent on sleuthing, it is but necessary to recall how invisible in the old days were the banded Apaches on the warpath. For instance, during the raid of Ulzana and his band in the autumn of 1885, the Apache warriors were on the rampage for seven weeks, during which time they killed thirty-eight persons. Yet during that entire time the troops and civilians that were constantly in pursuit never caught sight of so much as a single member of the raiding band.

Trailers, Tried and True

When the man on the street read a few weeks since that twenty Apaches after an unbroken ride of sixty miles from Fort Apache to Holbrook, Arizona, had executed a war dance and joined in the pursuit of Villa he may have wondered whether this was not a new idea—this employment of the bloodthirsty Apaches as scouts for the U. S. Army. As a matter of fact, however, the practice constitutes no novelty at all. The Apache has long since won his spurs as a U. S. Army scout even though the present-day citizen has forgotten or overlooked the fact.

Truth to tell, every one of the twenty Apaches who were hurried to Mexico when the advance of the U. S. Regulars was hampered by false information given by Mexicans, fought either with or against Geronimo in the famous campaign against the Indian bandit who made more history than any other one man of his race. Furthermore, it is a safe guess that none of the various U. S. Army campaigns against the Apaches would have proven successful and the renegades of the tribe would never have been brought to respect Uncle Sam's authority, had it not been for the aid rendered the U. S. troopers by friendly Apache scouts.

It has been these friendly scouts, working side by side with the whites, in many a campaign against their own people who have attested the possession of those rare talents which have caused our army officers to have such wholesome respect for Apache trailers and to confidently proclaim them "the best trailers in the world."

As will be noted from the accompanying pictures, the Apache scout in the service of the U. S. Army boasts a costume that may in some cases conform to conventional military standards, but is more often a strange mixture of regulation army raiment with remnants of the habiliments of the savage. A modern rifle is an invariable accompaniment of the scout's sartorial outfit. Long ago the Apache manifested a weakness for firearms of the finest quality. It was said in the days when the renegades were on the warpath in Arizona that the Apaches were better armed than their official pursuers, and that the redmen carried the best field glasses in the Southwest. That policy persists with the average Apache who in the role of a U. S. scout must stand ever ready to play the game single-handed with fate.

CHANCE FOR PRESS ADVERTISERS TO ATTRACT THE ATTENTION OF THE ENTIRE COUNTY.

As the result of an agreement between the Plainfield Daily Press and the Elizabeth Evening Times any advertiser placing a classified ad in the Press may have that same ad inserted in the Elizabeth Evening Times upon the payment of one-half more than is charged for the Daily Press insertion alone. Thus, if an advertisement in the Daily Press costs forty cents, the same advertisement may be placed in the Elizabeth paper for an additional twenty cents.

The Elizabeth Evening Times has a circulation of 9,000 and is widely distributed throughout Union County. Thus if an advertisor places his advertisement in the Plainfield Daily Press and Elizabeth Evening Times he places it before the eyes of thousands of readers at a very small cost.

Most advertisers welcome the opportunity to attract the attention of the whole county to their offerings and with the co-operation of the Elizabeth Evening Times the Plainfield Daily Press is now able to make this possible. The Elizabeth Evening Times has earned a reputation for itself as an advertising medium, especially along the classified line, and it is a well known fact that its influence extends into other counties besides Union.

FIX DAMAGES ON SOMERSET STREET

Report of Special Commissioners is Adopted by Boro Council.

CENT A FRONT FOOT

Few Protests Against Action Are Received—Mayor Calls for Report of Recorder—Traffic Posts Near Harrison Avenue School.

The report of the Somerset street widening commission, fixing the damages at one cent a front foot, was received by members of the Common Council of North Plainfield at the meeting of last night, and was adopted by unanimous vote. A number of protests aaginst the report were received.

Albert and Charles Steiner and John Wolfe protested on the ground that the improvement was not necessary. Mrs. Mary E. Scutt filed a written protest, and John Powlison asked that action be deferred until fall because all trees were in foliage now and they should not be disturbed during the summer months. Councilman Julius J. Stahl expressed his belief in the honesty of purpose behind all the protests, but said that, in his opinion the improvement was badly needed, and therefore he would vote for it. There was no vote in opposition to the adoption of the report.

Expenses of the street department for the month were $1,678.78, those of the police department, $558.58, and of the fire department, $193.98.

Frank Puglia, one of the contractors on the main line sewer, presented a bill for $139.50 for cracked stone taken by the street commissioner for the repair of borough streets.

James T. Church filed a complaint against the reckless driving of trucks on Somerset street. He said that oftentimes they shook his house so that gas mantels were broken and bric-a-brac was knocked from shelves and tables.

Mayor Smalley called attention to the fact that the Council had received no report from the borough recorder for three months and instructed the clerk to notify this official that his report must be made once each month.

An appropriation of $160 for remodeling the stairway and repainting the exterior and interior of the fire house was authorized.

The Mayor and Clerk were authorized to borrow $8,955 and turn it over to the school fund in anticipation of taxes.

Bills amounting to $3,882.86 were audited and ordered paid.

A resolution authorizing the payment of $757.35 to George I. Forgesen; $300 to Arthur E. Smith, and $107 to Allen B. Laing was passed. This is for work done in remodeling the fire house.

The Council authorized the erection of automobile traffic posts in the vicinity of the Harrison Avenue School.

FIRST SERVICES WILL BE HELD IN NEW EDIFICE

The Netherwood Reformed church will hold its first services in the new church tomorrow. All departments of the Sunday school will meet at 9:45 a. m. and march from the old to the new building. The morning service at 11 a. m. will include the reception of new members and the communion service. In the afternoon at 4 o'clock a great Neighborhood and Fellowship meeting will be held. All are asked to bring their campaign hymn books to this service. Everybody is invited to share in all the services of the day.

GEORGE S. BAUGHAN.

George S. Baughan, aged 66 years, died at his home, 341 Watchung avenue, yesterday afternon after an illness of more than a year. He was a painter by trade and had lived in Plainfield for the past fifteen years. He is survived by his wife and one daughter, the latter living at the parental home. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 at the late residence and will be in charge of Rev. Philip B. Strong, pastor of the First Baptist church. Interment will be in Hillside cemetery.

ANNOUNCE ENGAGEMENT.

Mr. and Mrs. Orton G. Dale, of New York, formerly of this city, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Amy Lane Dale, to William Lathrop Hopkins, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hopkins, of Shrort Hills, N. Y., and Savannah, Ga. Mr. Hopkins is a Princeton man of the class of 1915, and is engaged in business in New York.

ARRIVAL OF TWINS.

Dorothy Ethel and Donald Frederick Coffin, weighing respectively five pounds and five pounds, six ounces, arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold P. Coffn, of 950 West Front street, on May 28.

COMMUNION SERVICE.

The celebration of the Lord's Supper will be held in the Watchung Avenue Presbyterian church tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock. There will be a musical service tomorrow night at 7:45.

DELIGHTFUL RECITAL AT THE SEMINARY

Pupils of Miss Jeanie May and Miss Florence Nicholl Give Fine Program.

A delightful recital was given yesterday afternoon at the Seminary by the pupils of Miss Jeanie May and Miss Florence Nicholl. This has come to be a greatly-appreciated event of the year and this audience was in no way disappointed.

Miss May made a few introductory remarks on the advisability of requiring a yearly recital as a part of the regular work of each pupil, not as "a showing-off but as a summing-up" of what she has accomplished

The program follows:

1 Ensemble:
Andante from Surprise Symphony Haydn
Helen Runkle, Marian Cowperthwaite, Frances Abbe, Prudence Hussey, Beatrice Rhoades, Katharyn Herrman.
2 *Lullaby ..... Faelten
*Waltz ..... Gurlitt
Constance Riley, Sue Randall, Brewster Righter.

NEW OFFICERS ELECTED BY MEN'S ASSOCIATION

The following officers were elected at the annual session of the Men's Association of the Watchung Avenue Presbyterian church held last night: President, Rodney S. Louis; vice president, Charles Haring; treasurer, Andrew J. Stiglitz, and secretary, Horace E. Bunker. During the evening addresses were delivered by the pastor of the church, Rev. J. O. McKelvey, and Alfred C. Estes, secretary of the Y. M. C. A. The latter's subject was "Men As Signs," and his theme was the influence that men have over their fellow men. George B. Zimmer, the retiring president, presided during the business session.

A social hour with refreshments followed.

U. S. COMMISSION VISITS HIGH SCHOOL EXHIBITION

The splendid exhibit of fine and manual arts work at the Plainfield High School building has attracted thousands of people during the last two days. All are enthusiastic about the excellent quality of the work. Manual training supervisors from all over the county as well as local mechanics have commented on the practical nature of the work shown.

Last night Dr. A. L. Johnson, county superintendent, and W. G. A. Reather, United States Commissioner of Industrial Education, visited the exhibition and both agreed that the work is of the very highest order. The exhibit will be open from 2 to 5 o'clock this afternoon and from 7:30 to 10:00 o'clock this evening.

RECEPTION OF MEMBERS.

There will be a reception of new members at the First M. E. church tomorrow morning, when Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, the pastor, will preach on "After the Biederwolf Campaign—What?" In the evening, Dr. Anderson will preach on "What Striking the Sawdust Trail Should Mean."

IMPRESSIVE SERVICE HAS BEEN PREPARED

Trinity Commandery, Knights Templar, to Observe Ascension Day.

Impressive Ascension Day services are held every year by Trinity Commandery, No. 17, Knights Templar, of this city. The services this year will be conducted next Sunday evening.

Eminent Commander R. F. R. Huntsman will assemble the commandery at 7:15 p. m. in full templar uniform, and escort to the church edifice the following affiliating Masonic bodies: Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. and A. M.; Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. and A. M.; Jerusalem Chapter, No. 24, R. A. M., and Lydia Chapter, No. 41, O. E. S.

A most impressive service has been prepared under the direction of a special committee comprising Harry W. Marshall, chairman; Charles A. Lee and Albert D. Honeyman. The Ascension Day service of the Knights Templar is always a beautiful service, but next Sunday night's service will be augmented by special vocal and orchestral music, and in addition a memorial oration in commemoration of the sir knights who have passed onward during the past year is to be delivered by Sir Knight Henry W. Egner, Jr., past potentate of Salaam Temple of the Order of the Mystic Shrine.

All the members of the Masonic fraternity in this jurisdiction are cordially invited to attend this service, with the members of their families. Special arrangements have been made for seating the Masonic bodies in reserved space, but the public is also welcome at all Ascension Day services of Trinity Commandery. Therefore, it is quite likely that the seating capacity of Trinity Reformed church will be taxed to the utmost on Sunday night.

The commandery and Blue Lodge Masons will assemble at 7:15, leaving the commandery rooms promptly at 7:30. The church services will begin at 7:45 o'clock.

TRINITY CHURCH WILL RECEIVE 125 NEW MEMBERS

The longest communion service in the history of the church will be held in Trinity Reformed church tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock, when the pastor, Rev. John Y. Broek, will welcome 125 new members into church fellowship, 100 on confession of faith and 25 by letter. Those coming on confession include men and women of all ages, fathers and mothers and entire families. Many will be baptised. All pews will be free at this service, and special arrangements are being made to seat the large congregation expected.

The church auditorium was filled last night with worshippers at the preparatory service. The elders' meeting for the examination of candidates for church membership lasted until nearly 11 o'clock. A deep earnestness was manifested among the new converts which will mean much to the spiritual life of the church.

The Bible school will meet at 9:45. Christian Endeavor Society will resume its meeting at 6:45. At the evening service at 7:45, Trinity Commandery, No. 17, Knights Templar, will attend Ascension Day service. Anchor and Jerusalem Lodges have also been invited. The pastor will preach a sermon on "Knighthood."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS HOLD CONGRESS SESSION

The congress of the Plainfield Christian Endeavor Union held its regular meeting last night in the First Baptist church. Eight societies were represented at the session. Nominations for new officers were received and will be announced at the annual meeting to be held in the Watchung Avenue Presbyterian church on Monday night, June 12.

This meeting will start with a song service at 7:45, to which all attendants are requested to bring their Biederwolf hymnal. Arrangements have been made to have a speaker for the occasion. Arrangements are also under way to have all the town societies visit the Wilson Memorial church and enjoy a lawn festival. The date of this will be announced later.

AWARDED HONORS.

At the commencement exercises of the Mercersburg, Pa., Academy held last Wednesday, Curtis B. Dall, of this city, was awarded honorable mention in the Mrs. Elizabeth McLaughlin prize contest held this year. Mr. Dall was also awarded the privilege of wearing the "MTT" insignia for tennis playing ability.

TO HOLD TENTH ANNIVERSARY.

Plainfield Council, No. 293, Jr. O. U. A. M., will hold its tenth anniversary celebration on Monday evening, June 5. The Good and Welfare Committee of the Council has prepared a special program for the occasion, and the members of Franklin, Somerset and Benevolent Councils, of this city, are invited to attend.

HEIBERG—RUNKLE NUPTIALS TODAY

Brilliant Naval Wedding to Be Solmenized in the Crescent Avenue Church.

DR. ZELIE OFFICIATES

Ceremony Will Be Followed by Reception at Home of Bride-Elects' Parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Runkle.

Miss Mary Gray Runkle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Godley Runkle, of West Eighth street, will become the bride of Lieutenant Walter LeRoy Heiberg, U. S. N., son of Mrs. John P. Heiberg, of La Crosse, Wisconsin, at a ceremony to be performed at 4 o'clock this afternoon in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. Rev. Dr. John Sheridan Zelie, the pastor of the church, will officiate. The edifice has been attractively decorated for the occasion by Wadley & Smyth, of New York, peonies, palms, ferns and other cut flowers being used in wide profusion.

As the bridal party enters the church, the wedding march will be played by C. T. Safford, of St. George's Protestant Episcopal church, of New York city. Miss Runkle, who will be given in marriage by her father, will wear a gown of ivory satin and tulle trimmed with old lace, and a lace and tulle veil. She will carry a bridal bouquet of white orchids, lilies-of-the-valley and orange blossoms.

Mrs. Howard Ogle, of Newark, will be the matron of honor, while the Misses Dorothy Fisk, Hope Ivins, Margaret McCutchen and Louise Booth, of this city; Miss Dorothy Smith, of Germantown, Pa., and Miss Margaret Bell, of Emmorton, Maryland, will be the bridesmaids. Both the matron of honor and the bridesmaids will wear charming creations of hydrangea blue and corn color material and will carry fans of flowers with ribbon handles to match the gowns. Miss Helen Talmadge Runkle, a niece of the bride, will be the flower girl. She will wear a frock of embroidered white net, with a sash of blue and corn-color, with a blue tulle hat. Lieutenant E. E. Wilson, U. S. N., will act as best man, while the ushers will be Daniel Runkle, of this city, and Lieutenant J. C. Jennings, U. S. N.; Lieutenant W. O. Wallace, U. S. N.; Lieutenant H. T. Settle, U. S. N.; Lieutenant E. L. Gunther, U. S. N., and P. A. Surgeon, L. L. Pratt, U. S. N. The bridegroom, best man and ushers will wear the full dress uniform of the United States Navy.

Following the ceremony a reception will be held at the home of the bride's parents, at which between two and three hundred guests will be attendant. These will be from Washington, Philadelphia, New York, Brooklyn, Trenton and this city. Beside the many naval associates of Mr. Heiberg who will be in attendance, included in the gathering will be the following: Mrs. Garret A. Hobart, of Paterson, widow of the late former vice president Garret A. Hobart, who served during the McKinley administration; former Governor and Mrs. John W. Griggs, of Paterson; General and Mrs. E. J. McClellan, U. S. A., and Mrs. E. R. Heiberg, wife of Captain E. R. Heiberg, military attache at Rome, Italy. The decorations at the home were carried out on the same decorative scheme as in the church, being done also by Wadley & Smith.

Lieutenant and Mrs. Heiberg will leave this evening on an extended wedding trip which will probably last three or four months. Their place of residence at the conclusion is unknown at the present time and depends in a large degree on Mr. Heiberg's transfer. Until the present time he has been stationed on the battleship "Alabama."

The bride is one of the most popular of the younger society set in the city and borough and has been prominent in King's Daughters' work as well as other local societies. She is a graduate of Dobbs Ferry and was a student in the Hartridge School in this city. Mr. Heiberg is a graduate of the Naval Academy of Annapolis, class '15. The gifts received by the couple were especially beautiful, many costly articles being included in the number.

PYTHIAN MEMORIAL SERVICE.

At its regular meeting last night, Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, Knights of Pythias, completed arrangements for its annual attendance at divine service in celebration of Bythian Memorial day. The service this year will be held in Trinity Reformed church, Sunday night, June 11. The memorial address will be delivered by Assemblyman Willian N. Runyon, who is a past chancellor of Perseverance Lodge. Members are requested to meet in the Castle hall, Babcock building, at 7 o'clock, to proceed to the church in a body. The families and friends of all Pythians are invited to attend.

FANWOOD GIRL IN N. Y. SUCCESS

After completing a six months' engagement with "Alone at Last," one of the New York theatrical successes of the past winter, Miss Virginia Glover, of Fanwood, commences an engagement Monday night with "Very Good Eddie," a musical comedy that has scored a hit in New York. Miss Glover is well known in Plainfield, having attended the Seminary.

HARTRIDGE SCHOOL PLANS FOR CLOSING

Following Examinations Next Week Commencement Festivties Will Begin.

Preparations for the closing exercises of the Hartridge School are in full swing and after Tuesday of next week examinations will be over for the upper grades and the festivities of commencement time will begin.

Every two years a Shakespeare play is given by the school and for this June Twelfth Night has been chosen. It will be presented on the lawn at Oakwood next Wednesday afternoon and it promises to surpass the standard set in previous years. W. P. MacFarlane, the well known Shakespeare coach, has been training the leading characters, the dances for the interludes have been planned by Miss Cuno, for five years physical director in the school, and taught by Miss Spear, the present physical director. Mrs. Mary Peddle Peckham has been training the singers and Miss Robinson, of the art department, has designed the costumes for the leading characters and for the dancers. Their lines were taught the girls by Miss Mapelsden and Miss Rose, who conducted the preliminary rehearsals. Miss Mapelsden is acting as general director for the performance. The incidental music is under the direction of Miss Seward, who has secured the services of Mrs. Charles Lewis and a string quartet in cae of rain Wednesday, the play will be given Thursday afternoon. Friday morning at 11 o'clock, the commencement exercises will be held in the school auditorium. Dr. Andrew V. V. Raymond, of Buffalo, will deliver the adress; Dr. John S. Zelie will make the opening prayer and pronounce the benediction, and Miss Hartridge will confer the diplomas. In the afternoon there will be a tea for the old girls and the seniors at Oakwood and in the evening a dance at the school auditorium in honor of the Senior Class.

WILL ELECT SUCCESSOR TO CALVIN H. RUGG

The recent death of Calvin H. Rugg makes necessary the holding of a special election for the office of treasurer in Trinity Commandery, No. 17, Knights Templar. This election will occur at the next regular conclave of the commandery on Monday evening, June 5. Mr. Rugg held the office of treasurer of Trinity Commandery continuously since the year of its organization with the exception of one year.

MISS LOIS PECK SURPRISED ON BIRTHDAY

A pleasant birthday party was tendered Miss Lois Peck last evening at her home on Park place, in honor of her eighteenth birthday, when about twenty of her friends called to help her celebrate her natal day.

The guests enjoyed dancing by the strains of a Victorla, and the Virginia reel was enjoyed by all. The evening also was spent in playing games and other music. Miss Mary Bennett presided at the piano.

The home was very prettily decorated. The parlor being in green and white, while the sitting room was in red, and the dining room in pink and green. At a late hour a collation was served, the table being very attractively decorated in pink and white, the centerpiece being white sherringoa. At each place was a pink lighted candle and the cards were hand painted pink roses.

Miss Peck was the recipient of many pretty and useful gifts. The affair was arranged by Mrs. Guy D. Peck, and Guy Peck, Jr. Guests were present from New York, Watchung and this city. At a late hour the guests departed wishing Miss Peck many happy returns of the day.

MISS HOE DROWNED.

Well Known Society Girl Meets Death While Swimming.

New York, June 3.—Miss Margaret Hoe, nineteen years old, daughter of Richard M. Hoe, retired capitalist, of 11 East Seventy-first street, was drowned at Erskine, N. J. Miss Hoe was one of the party of thirty New York young women who formed the Emergency Service corps and went to Erskine Thursday to camp.

With several other girls Miss Hoe was on the bathing beach, which the campers had christened Coney Island. She had hardly ventured into the water when she was seized with cramps and before her companions realized her danger disappeared. A number of the young women went to her aid and drew her body to the beach from the shallow water in which she had gone under.

WILL GIVE A RECEPTION.

Among the many social events scheduled for the month of June is a reception to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Elliot T. Barrows, of West Eighth street, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Barrows, of Ravine road. The affair will be held at the Plainfield Country Club.

7,500 WERE SLAIN IN GREAT SEA BATTLE; MORE THAN 30 BIG SHIPS SUNK; BIG VICTORY FOR GERMANS

Rear Admiral Hood Went Down With Invincible—England Awaits Greatest Blow of War in List of Dead—Germans Retreated When Reinforcements Came up After 24 Hours' Fighting.

Calls War Europe's Suicide.

Rome, June 3.—Cardinal Gasparri, Papal Secretary of State, in an interview today with a representative of the Associated Press, declared that the Pope was influenced in his peace efforts solely by a desire to stop the "suicide of Europe."

"The Holy Father," said the Cardinal, "in his most ardent desire for peace, has no particular interest in view, despite what newspapers that are enemies of the Papacy state to the contrary. If peace is concluded through the friendly intervention of the President of the great American Republic or through his Catholic Majesty, the King of Spain, his Holiness will equally thank the Almighty that an end should at last have been put to the butchery which is the suicide of Europe."

Saxony King Pleased.

London, June 3.—A dispatch to Reuter's Telegram Company from Amsterdam says a message received there from Dresden gives a dispatch sent to Emperor William by King Frederick August of Saxony in connection with the news of the naval battle in the North Sea. The message of the Saxon King follows:

"With great joy and extraordinary enthusiasm I have just learned of the brilliant victory of our fleet over the considerably superior main part of the English battle fleet. This is one of the finest days of this serious time for our Fatherland. Our fleet showed itself quite the equal of our army."

London, June 3.—At least 7,500 British and German sailors and officers, including one English rear-admiral, lost their lives in the great sea battle of the Skagerack on May 31, according to authentic reports that are admitted officially. It is now believed that more than thirty ships were sunk or disabled so as to become useless, with a property loss of $166,000,000.

It was a German victory, but there is much balm for English hearts in the fact that the Germans were forced to retreat when reinforcements came for the English fighting fleet. Today all of England is steeling itself for the greatest blow of the war, which is expected tonight or Sunday in the official casualty list. The estimated British losses are 4,800, while those of the Germans are 2,750. England admits losing fourteen warships of all classes, and a number of smaller craft. She claims that Germany's losses were sixteen ships of all classes, but the comparative statement of value of ships is the debt indication of where victory lay at the end of the almost twenty-four hours of the heaviest fighting the sea has ever seen. The value of British ships lost was $115,000,000, while the value of German ships lost was only $51,000,000, and these are British figures.

The great battle, it is reported here, was the direct outcome of demands made by the German Emperor. It is said that on the occasion of his visit to Wilhelmshaven last week the Emperor made demands on his brother, Admiral Prince Henry of Prussia, Commander-in-Chief of the Navy, and Admiral von Capelle, Minister of the Navy, for immediate action.

The dash into the North Sea by the German fleet and the battle of the Skagerak, with victory claimed by both the British and the Germans, followed.

In all, according to the best information obtainable, 113 fighting sea craft of all kinds, and six Zeppelins took part in the greatest sea battle in the history of the world. The British force consisted of 80 vessels, from battle cruisers to destroyers. Germany had 33 vessels engaged, as well as six Zeppelins.

These Zeppelins, latest reports declared, were of inestimable value to the German vessels. They not only spied out the position of the English ships, but directed the gunfire of the Germans and then dropped bombs that are said to have accounted for several of the British destroyers.

An Exchange Telegraph Company dispatch from Copenhagen states that the retreating German submarines left a trail of mines through the North Sea. A large unidentified cruiser struck one of these mines and sank. A few of the crew were saved.

Rear-Admiral Hood Killed.

London, June 3.—Rear-Admiral Horace Hood probably lost his life when the battle cruiser Invincible was sunk in the Jutland battle, according to the Times. Admiral Hood was flying his flag on board the Invincible as second in command of the battle cruiser squadron.

Admiral Hon. Horace Lambert Alexander Hood was forty-six ears old and was naval secretary to the First Lord of the Admiralty at the start of the war. He was also naval aide-de-camp to the King, and in 1910, then a captain, served as naval attache to the embassy in Washington.

Admiral Hood served in the Soudan and in Somaliland, where he was mentioned in despatches twice and received the distinguished service order.

Survivors Tell Stories.

Amsterdam, June 3.—Reports received here from survivors landed in Holland and from German sources indicate that the naval battle off the coast of Denmark without doubt involved almost the entire German fleet. The battle was divided into two parts, the first lasting until 9 in the evening, the second several hours at night. The chief British losses were incurred during the day, while the night fighting resulted in a German retreat. The Germans lay emphasis on the excellence of their Zeppelins' work and also pay tribute to the courage of the British sailors. A large German cruiser has been towed into Kiel. Others, badly damaged, have arrived at Wilhelmshaven. At the Dutch port of Ymuiden, Captain Madling, of the German cruiser Elbing, has arrived. He says that he was obliged to open the seacocks and sink the vessel. A German torpedo destroyer rescued the majority of his crew. The Elbing was a new cruiser built since the war began. Eleven of the 264 men of the German cruiser Fraunlob have been landed at the Hook of Holland by the Dutch steamer Thames. They say the Fraunlob was torpedoed at midnight. The men rescued were clinging to rafts.

Germans Gain More Ground.

Paris, June 3.—Throughout the night the Germans continued to launch assaults of the most ferocious intensity against the French position at Fort Vaux, the key position to the citidel on the northeast side. These attacks were all repulsed in bloody fighting, the War Office stated in an official communique issued at noon today, but at one point the Teutons were able to occupy a ditch near the fort.

France Threatens Greece.

Paris, June 3.—France has informed Greece that the permitted violation of her territory by the Bulgarians is not in accord with her promises and may lead to serious consequences, says The Matin today. The French Government is said to have decided to take vigorous measures to meet the situation created by events in Greece.

SUICIDE WAS A COOK IN N. Y. RESTAURANT

The young man whose dead body was found near Dunellen yesterday morning was identified today as Paul Olexew, of 615 East 11th street, New York city. Olexew was 22 years of age. He was a cook in a New York restaurant. Two brothers were at Runyon's undertaking parlors in Dunellen this morning and identified the body of the suicide. They said he left home early in the week to go to Belle Meade, where a brother lives. They could give no reason for his act. The body will be buried from Runyon's parlors at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

GRADED UNION MEETING.

The Plainfield Graded Union meets every Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Y. W. C. A.. ASSAULT AND ROBBERY CHARGE PREFERRED

Charles Hill Arrested at Dunellen on Complaint of Frank T. Farrell.

Charles Hill, of this place, was arraigned before Justice von Minden in the borough court last evening to answer to a charge of assault and robbery preferred by Frank T. Farrell, who alleged that Hill attacked him on Grove street, near South avenue at 11 o'clock Monday night, and after knocking him down with his fist, robbed him of a gold watch and chain, a pair of eye glasses, $5 in money and valuable papers. In rebuttal, Hill asked the court how he could have been guilty of the deed when he had left for Three Bridges at 6:30 Monday evening and didn't return until Wednesday morning.

When called to the stand, Marshal Owen Mohan endeavored to upset the alibi. He told the court that John Woods and Fred Miller, bartenders at a local hotel, had told him that Hill had gotten a drink there Tuesday morning, Woods being behind the bar and Miller waiting to go on duty at the time.

Woods and Miller, who were called to the stand to substantiate this, upon being questioned by the court, were not absolutely sure that Hill had a drink in the hotel Tuesday morning, saying that it might have been Wednesday.

William Poland, the hostler at Taylor's, who had told the complainant Farrell that he had also seen Hill drinking at the hotel on Tuesday morning, when called to the stand was also unwilling to swear that it was Tuesday morning.

Hill is being held without bail, while the local police further investigate his story that he was in Three Bridges from Monday night until Wednesday morning.

FANWOOD SCHOOL MATTERS DISCUSSED

Committee Appointed to Start Movement in Favor of a New Building.

Attended by the three borough members of the Board of Education, the second meeting of the residents of Fanwood borough in favor of a new school in that place was held in the firehouse last night and after a lengthy discussion a committee composed of Harry P. Robinson, Joseph E. Rhodes, Ten Eyck R. Beardsley, Offley Brown, Samuel W. McAnneny and Emil Eckhardt was appointed to meet with the Board of Education and six residents from various parts of the township to discuss the question from all sides. As no public meeting has been held in the township as yet Dr. F. W. Wescott, president of the Board of Education, consented to approach six prominent residents of the township with the view of asking them to form the committee, and the joint meeting will probably be held at the June meeting of the School Board.

Speaking in behalf of Dr. F. W. Wescott and Thomas H. Norton as well as himself, Burton P. Hall explained the stand that the three Fanwood members of the Board took on the school question. It seemed to them, he said, that the time for a school in the borough had not yet arrived, but even though that was their opinion it would be subordinated in order to do as the majority of the residents wanted them to. Dr. Wescott also spoke, explaining the position the Board of Education found itself in. The doctor seemed in favor of the joint meeting of the Board and the two committees as the best means of satisfactorily settling the question. At the meeting, he suggested, things might be so far decided that the Board would be sufficiently aware of the general consensus of opinion to call a meeting of the voters of the district to vote on the question. Then would be the time for those wanting the borough school to get out and explain their reasons to the voters all over the district, as it will be only by the general vote securing the necessary appropriation for the building that the idea will be realized.

The committee appointed at the last meeting to canvass the borough for all data that would act in favor of the school made their report last night. It was found that there are one hundred and seventy-seven children that are either of school age at present or will be in the next two years. A petition contaning nearly all the residents' names has been circulated and will be presented at the joint meeting as representative of the views of the Fanwood people.

EPWORTH LEAGUE WILL OBSERVE ANNIVERSARY

Special preparations have been made for the holding of services in the Methodist church tomorrow night to observe the Epworth League anniversary. A talented speaker has been secured to make an address, and a musical program will be rendered. The evening service at the church will be omitted to permit of the anniversary service, and the members of the B. Y. P. U. of the Baptist church will attend.

The Junior League of the Methodist church is holding a picnic today on the mountains in back of Scotch Plains.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Hudson Thompson and daughters, of Martine avenue, have gone to Lake Hopatcong to spend the summer in their cottage.

As the local schools will not close for the summer until June 30, the final examinations will not commence until June 16, slightly later than usual.

The Rev. Oscar S. Michael, pastor of the Episcopal church, will entertain the members of the Plainfield Clericus at the June meeting to be held on Monday.

The June meeting of the Bucket and Engine Fire Company will be held in the firehouse on Bartle avenue Monday night.

Watchung.

The sixth annual portrayal of the Indian Legend of Watchung, which will be given on the mountainside at Watchung next Friday and Saturday evenings, promises to be a greater success than any past portrayals. A number of new features have been added, among them a new song with words by William de La R. Anderson and music by Charles E. Spier. The cast includes over one hundred of Watchung's representative people. The executive committee will have as guests prominent people from all over the State. Rev. and Mrs. William Brewster Humphrey, president and secretary of the American Indian League, will be among the guests coming from Hartford, Conn., to attend the community pageant. The committees in charge are: Executive, William de La R. Anderson, George W. Schmidt, George Mobus, William Pattee, Lewis H. Snoden, Charles C. Wheeler, Edward T. Canning, George A. Schmidt, Harry B. MacDonald, Miss Theresa E. Schmidt, Mrs. Elmer E. Kingman, Mrs. Charles C. Wheeler, Mrs. William Patte, Mrs. MacDonald; dramatic, directors, Dr. M. P. E. Groszmann, Charles C. Wheeler, Edward T. Canning and M. O'Higgins; electrical director, George W. Schmidt; publicity, Miss T. E. Schmidt; costumes, Mrs. Willaim Patte; propery, Mrs. George A. Schmidt; refreshment, Mrs. Hippolyte Texier; grounds and gate, Harry B. MacDonald and George A. Schmidt.

Rev. Mebane Ramsay will conduct all the services in the Wilson Memorial church tomorrow. Sunday-school will begin at 9:45 a. m. and church will begin at 11 o'clock. The evening service will begin at the usual hour at 8 o'clock, preceded by a song service at 7:45. A cordial invitation is extended to all to attend. The sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be observed at the morning service.

"Consecration of Money" was the Christian Endeavor topic for the meeting last evening. Miss Elsie F. Schmidt was the leader of the meeting.

Miss Grace Townley, of Plainfield, was the guest of Miss Emily Pleydell on Thursday.

South Plainfield.

Louis Randolph reported to the local police that his butcher shop was entered on Thursday evening and about ten dollars worth of meat and canned goods were taken. The thieves gained admittance by prying open one of the windows on the north side of the building. Local authorities believe that they were frightened off before they could escape with more goods owing to the barking of dogs. Mrs. Mary McDonough also reported to the police that one of the windows in her home was broken the same evening.

Rudolph Pamula, of Plainfield, was fined ten dollars in the local court for discharging firearms at a Polish chistening last Sunday. Pamula had brought his shotgun with him from Plainfield last Sunday and all afternoon and a greater part of the evening he amused the guests of the christening with the loud reports from the gun.

Nicholas Valicinti, of New York, has purchased the grocery store opposite the Spicer factory. Mr. Valicinti will remodel the building having two stores on the lower floor and two family dwellings on the second floor. Mr. Valicinti will conduct a grocery store in one of the stores nearest the railroad. He has also moved his family into the bungalow on New Market avenue. This bungalow was recently erected by the Central Realty Co.

The Ladies' Aid Society, of the Baptist church will hold its annual strawberry and ice cream festival in the Sunday school room next Tuesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. James Prindeville and family, of Brooklyn, have moved into one of the houses owned by the Merchants and Traders Realty Co. Mr. Prindeville is employed as a drop forger for the Spicer Manufacturing Co.

LARGER NAVY BILL ALMOST PASSES

Minority Report Lacks But Six Votes of Being Accepted.

Washington, June 3.—Beore passing the Naval Appropriation bill yesterday the House came within six votes of adopting the "big navy" program of the Republican members of the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By a vote of 189 to 183 a motion to recommit the bill and include the Republican minority's building plan was defeated. After this final stand by the minority, practically the entire House membership voted for the naval budget on final passage, the vote being 358 to 4. Those voting against it were Browning, New Jersey, and Graham, Pennsylvania, Republicans; Randall, California, Prohibitionist, and London, New York, Socialist.

The following Democrats deserted and voted with the minority: Patten, Bruckner, Caldwell, Carew, Dale, Dooling, Driscoll, Farley, Oglesby, Flynn, Griffin, Hulbert and Loft, of New York; Gallivan, Tague and Phelan, Massachusetts; Eagan and Hamill, New Jersey; Gallagher, McAndrews, McDermott and Stone, of Illinois; O'Shaunessy, Rhode Island, and Steel, Pennsylvania.

Republican members failing to support the plan of the minority were: Cary, Wisconsin; Crampton, Michigan; Dillon, South Dakota; Ellsworth, Minnesota; Good, Haugen and Ramseyer, Iowa; Hollingsworth, Ohio; La Follette, Washington; McCulloch, Ohio; Mondell, Wyoming; Morgan, Oklahoma; Nelson, Wisconsin; Norton, North Dakota; Ricketts, Ohio; Russell, Ohio; Switzer, Ohio; and Young, North Dakota.

COMFORTING WORDS.

Many a Plainfield Household Will Find Them So.

To have the pains and aches of a bad back removed—to be entirely free from annoying, dangerous urinary disorders, is enough to make any kidney sufferer grateful. The following advice of one who has suffered will prove comforting words to hundreds of Plainfield readers.

Mrs. William E. Gardner, 322 East Second street, Plainfield, says: "I suffered a great deal from rheumatic pains across my back. My kidneys were weak and irregular in action, and I was in a miserable condition for months. Nothing I tried seemed to give me any relief until I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Randolph' Drug Store. They seemed to take hold at once, removing the rheumatic pains and regulating the action of my kidneys. They improved my condition so much that I soon felt like a different person.

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Gardner had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

VILLA MAY BE WITH ZAPATA

Mexico City Threatened by Bandit Force.

WILL AFFECT CARRANZA.

Constitutionalist Troops, Now Concentrated In North, Must Be Sent to Quell Rebels—First Chief May Modify Present Arrogant Attitude.

Washington, June 3.—It is expected that the belligerent attitude assumed by General Carranza in his note to the United States may be affected by the serious offensive operations by Zapatistas in the vicinity of Mexico City, which have been reported to the state department.

Taking advantage of the action of the de facto government's moving of large numbers of troops northward toward the border, Zapata, according to the reports, has launched an active campaign which may threaten Mexico City itself. It is expected that as a result of this Carranza will have to draw heavily on his troops in the north.

The chief significance at the present time of the Zapatista activities lies in the fact, disclosed by the capture of certain correspondence of Villa's after the Columbus raid, that Villa had an arrangement with the Morelos bandit chieftain whereby eventually the Zapatistas and Villistas would effect a combination in a supreme effort to overthrow the Carranza government.

For weeks the whereabouts of Villa and the remnants of his followers has been a mystery, and it is regarded as not beyond the bounds of possibility that if he is still living he may either have joined Zapata or have got close enough to be in communication with him.

Zapata Changes Plans.

About a week ago the Mexican embassy here gave out a statement saying that Zapata had instructed his followers to cease their attacks on Carranza's troops and to confine their operations to the wrecking of all trains carrying Americans and other foreigners. Judging from the advices received by the state department, the brigand chieftain has changed his program again.

At present, according to a report received at the war department from General Funston, there are about 20,000 Carranzista troops in the vicinity of Chihuahua City and scattered between that point and the border. The report was sent in response to an inquiry from the general staff, prompted by the threats contained in the Carranza note.

According to officials, the purpose of the inquiry was twofold. For reasons of military precaution, it was said, the department desired to know whether the Mexican forces were in a position to threaten Pershing's base.

In the second place, it was stated, the information was desired in order to enable the administration in considering Carranza's demands to determine whether the Mexican military authorities were in a position to take over the patrol of the Mexican side of the line and safeguard the border against future attacks.

Of the 20,000 men General Funston reported about 4,000 were garrisoned in Chihuahua City, 2,000 encamped to the south of that city, 5,000 are marching toward Madera, which is about fifty miles from General Pershing's base at Namiquipa, 2,000 are en route for Ojinaga, a Mexican town on the border near the tip of the Big Bend district of Texas, and the rest scattered throughout the intervening country.

ITALIAN LINES HOLD FIRM.

Austrian Attacks at Buole Pass and on the Posina Checked.

Rome, June 3.—Recent fighting, according to reports from the front, has centered about Buole pass and the right bank of the Posina torrent. In the first sector the Austrians are making desperate efforts to place themselves in a position to attack the Corni Zugna, where the Italians are now holding back the attempted forward movement between the Adigo and the Arsa valleys. The Posina torrent positions dominate the Astico valley.

The Italians are holding at both points, and no important change in the situation has been reported.

GLYNN TO OPEN CONVENTION

Ex-Governor Is Chosen Temporary Chairman by Democrats.

St. Louis, June 3.—Martin Glynn, former governor of New York, was elected temporary chairman of the Democratic national convention by a subcommittee on arrangements of the national committee here.

J. Bruce Kremer, national committeeman from Montana, was chosen temporary secretary of the convention, and John I. Martin temporary sergeant at arms.

Many Birthday Honors.

London, June 3.—The London Gazette announces that the king has conferred birthday honors on six peers, twelve baronets and thirty-one knights. They will include Lord Rufus D. I. Reading, who becomes a viscount, and Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, British ambassador to the United States, who is made grand commander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George

The power of the press can be applied to any business by using good Printing.

A printer's best work is not obtained on the competitive basis. It cannot be.

The man who asks for competition in price seeks estimates on so much stock, composition and presswork and nothing more. He does not bargain for the skill, originality, time and individuality of the printer, and he does not get them.

We get only what we pay for in this world and nothing else that is worth having.

Press' printing is the result of ceaseless efforts to render the best service.

Sometimes You Don't Give a Straw

But when it's straw time "quality's the best policy."

Cheap straws are like cheap suits

They look great—the first day, but my! Oh, my—well, you know how they look later on.

At Rothberg's the quality's dependable, whether suits or hats—there's always "your money back" if anything ever fails to measure up to your expectations.

Straws $1.50, $2.00, $2.50 and $3.00.

Some are cravenetted.

The 22d Annual Hearn June Sale

Featuring Apparel and Undermuslins for Women, Misses, Boys, Girls and Babies.

The great surprise, however, awaits you in the Hearn June Sale, which extends throughout the whole month. The Hearn Store has long been famous for apparel values—best materials, correct styles, at the very lowest possible prices. Now, more than ever, there is concentration upon style-distinction. Not only the garment offering the greatest money-saving to Hearn patrons is sought, but the coat, suit, skirt, dress or blouse possessing real originality. Even the lowest priced garment has to conform to critical tailoring standards—the most important reason why you cannot afford to miss the June Sale.

MILLINERY

Crowning the apparel, comes Millinery—this year a veritable bower of smart sport hats, as well as becoming, bewitching dress models. Many are copies of imported creations. Materials, whether of shapes or trimmings, cannot be excelled. Spring quotations on summer models were delightfully low. June sale prices of course still lower.

MUSLIN UNDERWEAR

Just now in most women's thoughts—deciding whether to make it or buy it ready-made—comes in the most comprehensive assortment of styles for women, misses and girls.

If you read the Hearn Sale announcements, you come to see the dozens of lingerie delights offered at astounding price-cuts, your summer underwear problem is sure to be solved economically.

Petticoats, Corsets, Shoes, White Goods

Petticoats, Corsets, women's, girls' and boys' shoes are several more items occupying prominent space among June Sale advantages. In yard goods, white fabrics, especially, remarkable reductions in materials for summer dresses—or underwear—are obtainable.

Children and Little Tots' Needs

And, then, don't forget the children. Thirty days of vacation are in part given to them in the form of June Sale opportunities in Boys' Clothing and Furnishings, Girls' Apparel, and Babies' Wear.

HIGHWAY LAWS TOO COMPLEX

Amendment Urged by Commissioner Stevens.

WOULD SIMPLIFY SYSTEM

Modified French Method Is Recommended—Proposed Plan Provides For Organization of State Road Force. Series of Public Hearings to Be Given.

Trenton, June 3.—Introduction of a modification of the French road system so designed as to meet conditions in New Jersey was recommended by State Road Commissioner Edwin A. Stevens at a meeting of Governor Fielder's road commission. Although no definite action was taken respecting the report, which will serve as a basis for future study, it met the individual approval of several members of the commission.

The report of Colonel Stevens in large measure was indorsed by a communication from George C. Diehl of Buffalo, chairman of the legislative committee of the A. A. A. The proposed plan provides for the organization of a state road force, properly graded, subject to civil service and having charge of all road work involving any form of state aid.

The commission decided to hold its next meeting at Beach Haven June 16, which immediately precedes Good Roads day, set apart by the state chamber federation in connection with the annual convention of commercial, agricultural and civic organizations at Beach Haven June 15 to 17, inclusive. Following the meeting at Beach Haven the commission will give a series of public hearings in sections of the state. This probably will include meetings at Newark, Jersey City, Atlantic City and Bridgeton. Joseph H. Wood of Orange and Horace A. Bonnell of East Orange were appointed as a publicity committee to arrange the hearings.

Colonel Stevens in his report to the commission pointed out the complex system, or "mass of laws," under which road work is carried on now in New Jersey. Omitting streets, boulevards and park roads, he said, the work might be divided into three groups. These he designated as laws referring to roads under township or municipal bodies, laws referring to roads under boards of chosen freeholders acting without state aid and laws referring to state aid in road work. He suggested a fourth group, state highways, as existing in name rather than in practice.

HOLDUP MAN BALKED.

Lost Nerve as He Tried to Rob Passengers on Trolley Car.

Jersey City, June 3.—As a turnpike trolley car bound for Newark reached within a block of the Hackensack river a highwayman, armed with two revolvers, boarded it and attempted to hold up the trolley crew and eleven passengers, three of whom were women.

Either by design or accident the trolley pole was pulled from the wire, and the sudden darkness caused the lone bandit's nerve to desert him, and he fled without getting any cash or valuables. Stephen Fries of Newark was the conductor of the car.

AX FOR RIDDLE MEN.

Big Shakeup Takes Place In Atlantic City Police Force.

Atlantic City, June 3.—Chief of Police Malcolm B. Woodruff, who assisted former Mayor William Riddle in the recent commission government election and was credited with swinging the greater part of the department to use its influence in the fight, has received a "leave of absence for sickness" until November, when his resignation will be received.

The shakeup in the police department has been general, resignations being numerous with the change of administration. The fire department is also in a state of uncertainty.

SWAMP LICENSE CLERKS.

Jersey City Couples In Eager Rush to Get Married.

Jersey City, June 3.—June brides and their captives besieged the offices of City Clerk Michael I. Fagen with unprecedented vigor to obtain marriage licenses.

When the rush finally subsided, Mr. Fagen, Assistant City Clerk Nicholas Fuery and Marriage Clerk Harry J. Manchet mopped their perspiring brows and estimated that fifty couples had obtained legal sanction to commit matrimony within twenty-four hours.

BREAKS INTO COP'S HOME.

Alleged Burglar Picked Wrong House to Burglarize.

Newark, June 3.—The crashing of glass in his home at 20 Highland avenue awoke Sergeant Gary of the Sixth precinct, and he found a man in his dining room. The window was broken.

The intruder said he was William Hall of 144 Summer avenue. Arraigned before Judge Mancusi-Ungaro in the Second precinct court charged with breaking and entering, Hall was held in $500 bail for the grand jury.

FOR The Home Builder

CHILDREN THE SPUR FOR RURAL HOMES

Desire for Their Proper Environment Brings Parents to Suburban Towns.

With the real suburban home in mind, and with the child as its centre, one can paint the acme of human ideals. Home anywhere and under any conditions is "home" if the real spirit is there, but it is more especially "home" if those conditions which make for the finest in life are present.

In building one's home it is the same as in all other undertakings, and the motive is the source of inspiration, according to Frank Crowell, in the New York Herald. Behind all that is done lies the motive. The motive in probably seven out of ten cases, where it concerns suburban building or the purchase of an already built home, is the child.

This ideal in the minds of men and women for their children, together with the wonderfully improved rapid transit systems, the electrification of the railways, and the excellent motor roads, is accountable for the present suburban development in all direction surrounding the city of New York.

For the business man, after his day of work and responsibility, there is relaxation, rest and comfort in travelling to nearby suburban points. It is just as easy for him to reach a conveniently located and well served suburban community as it is to travel in the subway, and when he has reached his home he finds healthful surroundings for the bringing up of his children.

Any type of multi-family dwelling is a place where compactness and contraction are virtues, where expansion of any kind is impossible, and where the only playground for the child is the roof, the front stairs, the sidewalks or some public park.

A home for a child involves a number of things which require careful thought commensurate with the fine, delicate problem of the unfolding of the child's nature, and the first requisite for the child is physical health.

This means outdoor freedom, such as the country offers, where the roads and walks are comparatively free from danger and the child is allowed to roam through the hills and dales, among overhanging trees, brooks and wide fields; also where the parents can enjoy the recreation afforded by the lakes, tennis courts, bathing beach, etc.

Compare this outdoor freedom with the recreations afforded by the city, where the child must be always attended, always in the presence of an older companion, because the freedom so necessary to the development of independence of spirit is neither possible nor desirable in town. This outdoor suburban life makes possible for the boy or girl protected freedom in the air and sunshine.

Whether one's means permit the selection of a large landed estate or the purchase of a small cottage, the results to the child are quite the same, and it is hard to estimate the value of such surroundings upon the child's mind.

So much and even more for the physical. Of the psychological value of the influence of the beautiful home in a beautiful place, whose whole atmosphere is choice, there can be no computation.

Every day, every hour, the mind is growing in this genial light both of nature and of art. The child's own home, the best you can make for him, the surrounding homes, each one a careful study in itself, and the setting so remarkably created and cared for, make up for him a whole atmosphere which must refine, educate and elevate.

In such a place it should not be difficult to add to that which makes for health, esthetic and mental development those influences within the home which shall assure to him that perfect development wherein he shall wax strong in favor and grow in grace.

TABERNACLE SOON TO BE BUT A MEMORY

Big Structure on Giraud Avenue Now Being Razed and Materials Sold.

The work of tearing down the Biederwolf Tabernacle, the temporary structure put up for the recent big evangelistic campaign, was commenced Thursday and by the latter part of next week the big structure will only be a memory. J. C. Manning received the contract for the dismantling from J. D. Loizeaux and Company, the local firm which furnished the materials originally and who bought the building from the evangelistic committee. The original cost of erection was between $6,000 and $7,000.

The tabernacle was built mostly of North Carolina pine, spruce and hemlock, and this lumber is now being sold on the premises. The total number of feet used was about 150,000. The timber is all in excellent condition and it is really better than new materials just out of the yard as its two months of exposure has placed it in a thoroughly dry and seasoned condition.

Local people who contemplate putting up buildings of various sorts have already placed orders with Mr. Loizeaux and something like 50,000 feet is contracted for. The remaining 100,000 feet will undoubtedly be sold almost as soon as it is taken down and piled up on the Geraud avenue lot. There was some talk in local circles of keeping the tabernacle standing, but owing to the fact that it stood on a portion of Sachar place, opened up by Jacob Sachar, the permanency of the building would interfere with the development of Mr. Sachar's property. The sale of the building, although the price was not made known, will materially reduce the original cost mentioned above.

CONTRACTOR ADVOCATES FIREPROOF MATERIAL

When deciding to build, if your house is to be a frame structure, says a local contractor, it is important to spend $25 extra for building paper, which will go a long way toward making the walls warm. If the air spaces between inside and outside walls are sealed up tight the frame house will be as warm under ordinary conditions as other houses.

There is much to be said in favor of the fireproof materials. The manufacturers of hollow tile give strong reasons for its use. It is fireproof, moistureproof and costs little. The expense for fuel is low; it is sound-proof; the cost of construction is low; there is no expense for painting, and time may be saved in building. The brick manufacturer has a product which will last longer than a lifetime. He and the advocates of stone and concrete construction are favored by the fire insurance people, and their posterity may comfortably live in the "same old place" for many generations.

REALTY TRANSFERS

A SUBSTANTIAL FRAME HOUSE

DESIGNED BY CHAS S. SEDGWICK, ARCHITECT.

THIS two-story frame house is 30 ft. in width and 41 ft. in depth, exclusive of the front piazza and the rear porch. It is built on plain lines with a hipped roof and the exterior is either to be stuccoed or finished with siding. If finished in the latter way it will save about $200 on the cost. The plan is suited to an east or south front. The entrance is at the right side and opens through a vestibule into hall and thence through a wide columned opening into the large living room. This room opens on the left into the dining room and on the right into a library. It is 22 ft. 6 in. by 15 ft. 6 in., making a fine proportioned room. At the left end is a wide fireplace with window on either side. The dining room connects with the library with wide sliding doors, opening up the three rooms very pleasantly together. The kitchen and pantry arrangements in the rear and the rear staircase leading from basement to attic are very conveniently arranged. This first floor is finished in oak with oak floor, the second story has five good chambers with large closets and in the rear is a sleeping porch. The finish of second story is of birch with natural finish and birch floor; a portion can be finished in enamel at the same cost.

There is ample space in the attic for several rooms if desired. The full basement is finished with a good laundry, drying room, toilet room, room for heating plant and fuel, the outside walls and ceilings plastered and the floor cemented.

The first story is 9 ft. and the second story 8 ft. 6 in. The estimated cost, exclusive of heating and plumbing, is $4,500 to $5,500. The roof is shingled and stained and all of the outside trimmings, cornices, casings, etc., painted to suit the taste.

GARAGES LEAD IN WEEK'S PERMITS

Total of Five Granted, Represent Expenditure of $4,300.

Five permits, representing a total estimated valuation of $4,300, were granted by Building Inspector T. O. Doane during the past week. Three of the permits were for garages, one for a gymnasium at the new Wardlaw School on Park avenue, and the other was for a storage building. The sum total is slightly above last week, but is below that of a similar period last year, but indications still point to a healthy activity in the near future. May closed with a total of about $40,000 worth of building permits. The total for the year to date is $363,144. The permits granted the past week were as follows:

Wardlaw School, 1038 Park avenue, erection of frame building, 30x30x60, same to be used as gymnasium, estimated cost, $2,500.

Wadley and Goodenough, 208 Madison avenue, erection at that address of terra cotta building for storage purposes; Howard Huff, general contractor; estimated cost, $1,100.

W. R. Causbrook, 60 Netherwood avenue, erection at that address of frame garage; cost $150.

Walter L. Hetfield, 552 East Second street, erection at that address, frame garage, cost $150.

William H. Pope, 125 Sandford avenue, erection frame garage at that address, cost $400. Ira W. West, contractor.

HOUSE PASSES THE NAVAL BILL

Armor Plant Provision Is Retained.

Washington, June 3.—Soon after news of the great battle between the German and English fleets in the North sea spread through the capitol the house passed the naval appropriation bill, carrying more than $250,000,000 for construction and maintenance of the navy for the next fiscal year.

By a narrow margin of six votes the house refused to recommit the bill and instruct the naval committee to include the "bigger building" program of the Republican minority. The motion to recommit was lost, 189 to 183. A recapitulation of the vote was demanded before the vote was finally announced, and the result was in such doubt that Speaker Clark asked that his name be called. He voted against the motion to recommit.

After the final effort to include a big building program had failed the house passed the naval budget by a vote of 538 to 4.

The provision for the construction of a government armor plate factory at a cost of $11,000,000 remained in the bill. Republican efforts to eliminate this appropriation were defeated by a vote of 235 to 136. Although the amendment to strike it out was supported by the majority of the Republicans, forty-eight of the minority members approved the armor plant provision. Eight Democrats voted against it.

When reports of the North sea battle spread quickly through the house as the members prepared to vote on the naval budget it was apparent that the news had virtually no effect upon the vote.

WAGE INCREASE TO BE DISCUSSED AGAIN

Business Agent Lunger Will Hold Second Conference Tonight.

Business Agent William H. Lunger, of the local Trades Council, and the Master Carpenters' Association, will hold another conference tonight to discuss the question of an increase in pay for journeymen carpenters. At the conference held last week, the Masters outlined terms for the employes which were submitted to them but which they have refused to accept. The journeymen feel that they have not been treated fairly after the agreements of last year and it is hoped that the talk between the Masters and Business Agent Lunger tonight will result in some satisfactory measures.

Another matter which has been receiving attention from Business Agent Lunger is the unfairness of the new Postoffice job on Watchung avenue. In respect to this he had a conversation recently with United States Senator James E. Martine and finds that the latter is friendly to organized labor, a feeling that does not exist in the minds of many other public officials. Mr. Lunger proposes holding a conference in the near future with the general secretary of the Building Department of the American Federation of Labor relative to unfair federal building.

Speaking of the attitude of Senator Martine today, Mr. Lunger expressed himself to union workmen as follows: "Union men should not forget when voting for public officials they should prepare their ballot for men who do not oppose them when they seek a fair wage for their labor. What is fair for one side is fair for two sides."

PASS KERN RESOLUTION.

Was Introduced Shortly After Rebellion of Dublin.

Washington, June 3. — The senate passed the Kern resolution asking the state department to take the steps necessary to protect and safeguard Americans in the disturbed portions of Ireland.

The resolution was introduced shortly after the Dublin riots. There are a number of naturalized American citizens in Ireland, and fears for their safety were entertained.

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, JUNE 3, 1916.

On Saturdays the editorial column of the Daily Press is conducted, at our request, by citizens who are free to express their own views. The contributing editor for today is Arthur F. Hopper, Superintendent Manual Training Department, Plainfield H. S.

THE NEED OF PRACTICAL COURSES IN MANUAL TRAINING.

At the present time much comment is being made in educational circles regarding the practicability of manual training. The claim is made that vocational education is very much more important and that it should replace manual training as now taught in our public schools. Undoubtedly there is room for much improvement in our manual training. In the first place it must be made more practical. The making of a series of joints, in the woodworking department, useless samples in the sewing department, the drawing of ones and cylinders in the mechanical drawing room and the hollow square kitchen type of domestic science are things we must break away from if we are to keep manual training in our schools.

Manual training can be made of real practical value if organized in the right way. An attempt to do this is now being made in the Plainfield public schools. Instead of mking a score of useless joints, practical pieces of furniture are made. These pieces are designed in the drawing room, working drawings made and everything carried through just the same as it would be done in an industrial plant. An opportunity is given every student to develop his initiative, it is not a case of mere hand work. The boy is bought in close contact with actual industrial conditions. This is also true of the mechanical drawing. In the past we have been satisfied with the copying of plates, comprising sections of cones, cylinders, etc. At the end of a four-year course the boy might perhaps be given an actual working drawing to make. The foolishness of a course of this kind is evident. The very first year the student is now brought in contact with actual drafting room conditions by making shop drawings. Many of the students who complete the four year-course will be able to enter the drafting profession.

Manual training today must consist of something more than woodwork and drawing. We are now planning to include pottery, concrete work, electricity, machine shop work, pattern making, foundry work, etc. Short unit courses will be given which will enable the boy to go through the various activities, thus enabling him to choose more intelligently his life work.

At the present time thousands of children are taking up commercial work who would be far more successful in some mechanical activity. Others are engaged in mechanical work who would do far better in the commercial world. It is absolutely necessary that we give the boy an opportunity to find himself while he is still in school and not wait until he leaves school and then have to spend several years of the most valuable time of his life trying to find out what pursuit he is best adapted to follow. The vocational schools are working along these lines and training boys for some specific occupation but unfortunately in doing this much of the rich content of the academic side of the work is sacrificed.

The manual training departments of our High Schools if properly organized will be able to give the boy this insight into the industrial world and while doing so can still carry on the academic side of the work. This is a distinct advantage inasmuch as the boy will have a sound foundation to build on and he does not necessarily have to remain a mechanic all his life.

Many places the size of Plainfield are now building vocational schools. This means duplicating equipment and teachers and the cost is altogether out of proportion to the advantages gained. The county vocational school is the best answer to the problem.

What is true of the boys in the manual art work is also true of the girls. An home arts course that simply consists of a hollow square kitchen with instruction in making cookies, pastry, etc., is not a home arts course and no stretch of the imagination can make it one. A great deal of our work is now done in a practice cottage adjoining the High School. Here the students are at once thrown into a home environment which is altogether different from lining up round twenty-four gas stoves such as we find in most High Schools.

Cooking is done not only with the use of gas, but with electricity, oil, fireless cooking, and the kitchen range. Practical meals are prepared and served to the faculty, thus doing away with such things as dummy table service, etc. Landry work is also carried on in this cottage under practical conditions.

A splendid corrallation can be made between the various departments. For instance the art department designs the interior decorations and furniture. All the furniture is being made by the manual arts department. At the present time an exhibit is being held in the High School, a bedroom is shown made entirely by the manual training department. All the sewing being done by the girls and the furniture made by the boys. Anyone who feels that manual training cannot be made practical and that the vocational school is the only answer to our present problem would soon be convinced that they are wrong if they will take the time to examine this work.

The very best and most approved methods are used. Nothing of a flimsy or impractical nature is tolerated. The artistic side of the work is also given consideration, as is also the cost which is another very important feature.

All the students are very enthusiastic about the various courses given and evidently appreciate the advantage of being able to take an industrial arts course without being robbed of the academic side of the work. There is not any doubt that if our High School all over the country are to continue with their manual training activities. The work must be made more practical and must connect up with actual industrial conditions.

A visit to the local High School exhibit today will show just how much we have already accomplished along these lines.

ARTHUR F. HOPPER.

On the Spur of the Moment

by Roy K. Moulton

An Infernal Contraption.

I've been down to the city, boys, to call upon my son;
If any feller's got ahead, I'll tell you
he is one.
He's got a bran' new tourin' car, a
fireless cooker, too,
A hired gal to do the work the
wimmen folks here do.
He's got a bathtub in his house with water hot and cold;
His parlor furniture, by gosh, is made of solid gold.
He's got the new improvements, but
I don't mind if it's said,
I'm not so ravin' crazy 'bout that doggone foldin' bed.

He took me into my room, and I took off my shoes
Before I noticed that there was no place for me to snooze.
There wasn't nothin' like a bed that
I could see, by jing,
And when I asked him 'bout it, he just nodded toward a thing
That looked like a pianner and he left me to my fate.
Before I got it figgered out the hour was somewhat late.
At last I pried the thing apart and thought I'd go ahead
And try to snatch some sleep in that new-fangled foldin' bed.

I let the thing down to the floor and then I hustled in.
I took me just about an hour to get it shet again.
You see, I stayed right in the bed and shet her up once more,
And when I woke next mornin' I was cramped and lame and sore.
It's hard to sleep all doubled up, but then I reckon that They've got to save the space somehow when livin' in a flat.
It made me dizzy all next day from sleepin' on my head.
I took the first train right back home, to sleep in a reg'lar bed.

There's Always a Way.

How to clean out a flue that was stopped up by soot was a vexing problem to W. S. Thompson, of the City Hotel at Tipton, Mo., until a well meaning friend supplied the information. The instructions were to get a half pint bottle, fill it with water, place it in the fire in the stove and await results. Mr. Thompson delegated the actual performance to the negro porter, who stayed until the explosion, which wrecked the stove and threw him some ten feet away, scared white enough to vote the Democratic ticket at the next general election. The condition of the fire was unchanged. And we always mean so well.

Luck.

Ah nevah cotched a train on time,
Ah nevah won a single dime.
Ef diamonds fell out ob de sky,
Ah'd sho'ly be in jail.
Nobody hands no flowahs to me,
An' et am very plain to see
De only word what fits mah case, am jes' dis yere one, "Fail."
Ah've nevah had no chance fo' ease,
Ah has to wo'k six days a week or stahve to deff, dat's all.

No easy graft comes 'long mah way;
Fo' what Ah gits, Ah has to pay.
Ah nevah has a cent laid up when et comes 'long tow'd fall.
Dere ain't no luck fo' dis yere coon.
Ah might as well call fo' de moon;
But still, dere am one happy thought what makes me feel less blue:
While Ah am mournin' of mah lot
An' thinking what Ah hasn't got,
De same applies to jes' about mo's everybody too.

- Proctor's Theatre -

Julius Steger, the well-known and well-liked "legitimate" star, clearly demonstrates his ability as an excellent screen actor in his first picture, "The Blindness of Love," which is being shown at Proctor's today. He has a difficult part, but he handles it in a finished and masterly manner all through. In his pathos he is especially effective and his careful work results in a convincing characterization. "The Blindness of Love" is a strong dramatic offering released by the Metro studios and will elicit an abundance of favorable comment and praise from patrons of Proctor's. In addition, today, Billie Ritchie, Charlie Chaplin's closest rival, appears in a three-reel L-KO comedy entitled "Live Wires and Love Sparks," a comedy which is bound to delight the children and the old folks as well. On Monday, Charlotte Greenwood and Sydney Grant, the well-known musical comedy stars, are featured in a Paramount picture entitled "Jane," which was adapted to the screen from Charles Frohman's famous comedy of the same name. "The Mysteries of Myra" will also appear on Monday, while on Tuesday one of the big film sensations of the season will be presented at Proctor's. It is Douglas Fairbanks in "The Good Bad Man," the photoplay selected to inaugurate the opening of the Rialto Theatre, N. Y. Never for a moment does Douglas Fairbanks allow his audience to tire. His pictures are always so chock full of tingling action, rare thrills and genuine comedy—every moment so full of energy—that the five reels seem like one. Stirring scenes so swift that you have to hold your breath are followed in quick succession by real comedy truly funny. In addition to "The Good Bad Ban" on Tuesday, Mack Swain will be seen in a Keystone comedy, entitled "Her Marble Heart," and the fourteenth episode of "Mary Page" will also be shown. On Wednesday, Theda Bara, the most popular of all emotional stars, will appear in her latest Fox production entitled "The Eternal Sapho," and it is needless to say that Proctor's will be taxed to its utmost capacity throughout the entire day.

The association members will hold an outdoor vesper service tomorrow afternoon at four o'clock. This service will be in the interest of the Camp and Conference club and Miss Pauline L. Sage from National headquarters will be the speaker. The Marie F. Brake Bible class will sing and there will be selections by a trio consisting of Mrs. Guy Bender, Mrs. S. H. Tugwell and Mrs. W. A. Burnett. All young women and girls are cordially invited.

SUMMER CONFERENCES.

East Northfield, Mass., June 3.—The thirty-fourth annual season of summer conferences at Northfield opened today. The Northfield Seminary commencement is the first of many events arranged by W. R. Moody, president of the Northfield Schools, and son of the late Dwight L. Moody, the evangelist.

POLITICAL NOTES.

The fate of Claude Kitchin will be decided at the primaries in North Carolina today. As chairman of the ways and means committee in the House, he has opposed administration policies, and a rival has been put in the field with the backing of Wilson adherents.

Raymond Robins, former Democrat, and booster of land value taxation, will sound the keynote for the Progressives at Chicago. He made the run for the Senate in Illinois on the Moose ticket two years ago, and polled 114,000 votes.

The rush to Chicago is now under way. Political camps for the favorites are now open in the Windy City, and delegates will begin to pour into town on Monday.

Suffrage for women gets before the voters of Iowa on Monday. Some of the liveliest campaigners from East and West have stumped the State during the past few months.

Congress will recess over the national convention days. Three-day adjournments will be taken up to June 20.

Senator Henry A. Du Pont, of Delaware, seventy-eight years old, will again make the run for the Senate, he announces, throwing defiance to his cousin, Alfred I. Du Pont, who defeated him for delegate to the National Republican Convention.

Charles A. Otto, Jr., who was said to be one of the signers of the small Board of Freeholders petition, declares that he did not sign the petition, and that he is opposed to the measure. If his name appears on the list, he declares, it was put there by someone else without his knowledge or consent.

Rumors that Abram P. Morris would run for the county clerkship on an independent ticket and refuse to go into the Democratic primaries have been set at rest by the following statement from the county clerk himself: "I am going to go into the Democratic primaries and I am going to be game if I lose. But I am not going to lose."

120 PATIENTS AT BONNIE BURN DURING MAY

On May 1 there were present 112 patients—76 men and 35 women. During the month 23 patients have been admitted, 15 men and 8 women. These are classified as to the stage of disease as follows:

THE FORUM

Charles L. Lewis, who is supervisor of music in the Plainfield Public Schools, makes the following tribute to the late Captain William Hand:

Captain Hand.

With every recurring Memorial Day the vanishing ranks of the old soldier becomes more painfully apparent, and it is safe to say that no one was more generally missed this year than Captain Hand.

If I might presume to speak for the public school children I would say that he represented to them the spirit of the Civil War periods more, perhaps, than any of his comrades, and his coming with the other veterans was the event of the year with the children. The uniform represented the heroic, loyal, militant and triumphant Americanism and stirred them to unusual enthusiasm. As Commander of the Post or as soldier in the ranks he was an eager, interested listener to as many of the Memorial Day exercises in the various schools as the school day would permit, and it was with tear-dimmed eyes that he heard the patriotic songs sung by the children with wonderful spirit and enthusiasm to the uniformed veterans as audiences. The children were never satisfied till he told them of some of his personal experiences, which he did with simplicity and modesty, vividly and often brokenly, as the pictures of those dark days came to his mind. I have never seen children more eager in their interest than in the stories of these real experiences of a real man and soldier and they could scarcely be satisfied as long as he would talk to them. His passionate love of country, his self-sacrificing spirit, his kindliness of heart and unfailing good nature have left their mark on his day and generation and he was beloved by all. There were fewer soldiers this year than ever before that were able to be present, and the time is not far off when they will be but a gracious memory. We will not fail to honor and revere these brave men in their lives, and a grateful nation will not let their memory die.

Westfield.

The claim of Louis Sutterline, of Plainfield, against W. H. Taverner, of this town, for $3,900 damages for injuries sustained by Sutterline when Taverner's automobile hit his wagon, has been settled out of court, the plaintiff giving a release for $200.

The exercises of laying the cornerstone of Holy Trinity Parochial school will be held Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. S. F. McHugh will be the principal speaker. A parade will be given by the local and visiting societies prior to the ceremony.

Arrangements have been completed for the annual Sunday-school parade here this afternoon. The schools will assemble at the Mountain avenue park at 2:15. The parade will be led by the Westfield band and town officials. There will be several floats in the parade. Mayor Harry W. Evans will review the parade from a grandstand on North avenue at the depot park. The line of march will be from Mountain avenue to Broad street, Broad to North avenue and thence to Euclid, Lennox and back to Broad street, to the Presbyterian church.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

How a Lad Tried to Get a Gold Horse.

She Agreed to Go Away With Him.

[Adapted from Grimm's Fairy Tales.]

RIGHT after supper daddy told the children this story: "A fox once told a lad how to find a gold horse for a king, who was to give the lad a gold bird for the horse. Soon as the lad understood he sat down on the fox's broad tail, and away they went whizzing over rocks and hills till the wind whistled through their hair. Soon the lad came to a castle where the gold horse stood in his stall. Alongside slept a groom, with his hand on a gold saddle. The lad looked at the beautiful horse. 'What a pity,' he cried, 'to take him away without his gold saddle instead of this old one!'

"But as he touched the gold saddle the groom awoke and called so loudly that soldiers came and took the lad prisoner. In the morning the king's court judged the lad and doomed him to death. But finally it was agreed that if the lad could bring a beautiful princess he might have the gold horse.

"So he set out very sorrowful, but on his way he met his old friend, the fox. 'Heyday, young gentleman!' said the fox. 'Why didn't you listen to me? If you had you might have owned both the gold bird and the horse. Now I am going to help you again. Go straight ahead, and by evening you will come to a big castle. At 12 o'clock every night the princess goes to her bath. As she passes go up to her and give her a kiss. Then she will let you lead her away. But take care that you do not let her go to say goodby to her parents.'

"Then the fox spread out his bushy tail, the lad sat down on it, and away they flew over rocks and hills till their hair whistled in the wind.

"All happened as the fox said. The lad came to the castle and at 12 o'clock met the princess going to her bath. He kissed her, and she agreed to go away with him, but with tears in her lovely eyes begged him to let her go bid her father and mother goodby. At first he said 'No.' But she wept some more and fell at his feet, begging. At last he let her go, but the moment she came to her parents' door the guards awoke and made him prisoner again. So he was taken to the king, who lived in this castle, and the king said, 'You shall never have my daughter unless in eight days you can dig away the hill that stops the view from my window.'

"Now, this hill was so big that all the men in the world could not have taken it away. When the lad had dug seven days and done hardly a cartload his friend, the fox, came to him and said: 'Lie down and go to sleep. I'll dig for you.' In the morning the lad awoke, and the hill was gone. So he ran merrily to the king and said, 'Now the hill is gone, and you must give me your daughter.'"

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

Ralph Thinks That Guests as Well as Hosts Should Observe the Rules of Common Courtesy.

"You offended mother very much last evening," said Ethel Gordon when she and her husband were alone in their room.

"And she offended me, so we are quits as far as that is concerned," retored Ralph in an acrid tone.

"I should think you could remember that she is our guest and not treat her in a way to give offense." Ethel cast a resentful glance at her husband.

"When she observes the etiquette of a guest, I will try to be a gracious host. No guest is privileged to tell me what I should do in my private affairs." Ethel decided from the belligerent tone to take another tack.

"Of course she is very much interested, Ralph, and you ought not to resent having her give a little advice."

"Interested!" repeated Ralph, "about as you are. You are interested in getting your own way. If your ends are served, it matters very little how. Direct or indirect ways are equally satisfactory. When I think that it is her teaching that makes you so indifferent and irresponsible, I lose all patience."

"You shan't talk about my mother that way. I will not stand it." There were angry tears in Ethel's eyes. Ralph drew her down to his side on the bed.

"Listen, Ethel, I mean that she believes fully and has taught you to believe that to be lovely is your mission in life. No one objects to the loveliness," Ralph squeezed the slender waist that his arm encircled, "but it is a disappointment to find that there is nothing there but loveliness. No ability to face a difficult situation or rise to an emergency." Slow tears gathered in the lovely blue eyes and the breast heaved.

"Can't you be satisfied with me as I am? I do not reproach you for not being rich. Why should you find fault with me for not being able to manage better in money matters? I never could learn to save." She was a very appealing little thing as she nestled against him, dewey-eyed and tremulous. A great wave of tenderness swept over him. How could he expect the real helpmate qualities from such a child; expect economy, perseverance, ability to grasp facts. He turned the provocative mouth up to kiss it and wondered if she really had brains and did not use them or—he did not finish the sentence in his mind.

"If you would try, dear," he ventured at last. "If you would go over the bills and be sure that we are not paying for things we are not getting, and above all, if you would not let the maid do the ordering, things might come out better. Don't you think so? Your part should be the spending of our money so as to get the most out of it."

Ethel promised to try. It was habitual with her to seem to accede to all his requests, and then do exactly as she pleased.

"I can bring him to my way of thinking every time," she thought, glowing with her power over him, "and while I can do that I need not fear for the future. Anyway, it is everyone for himself in marriage as in everything else."

Appetizing Fish Dishes

The problem of the high cost of living is partly solved by the frequent serving of fish. A fish that lives in home waters can always be obtained fresh and very cheap. It is quite possible for the skillful cook to serve the plainest and cheapest fish into many appetizing dishes.

It must be understood that unless fish is fresh it should never be served, in fact, there is great danger to the health of the family if fresh fish is not served.

A few simple fish recipes that can be utilized for several kinds will be appreciated by the housewife:

Fish Fritters.

For fritters any sort of cold boiled or broiled fish can be used.

Free the fish from bone and skin and flake it or break it into small pieces with two forks. Chop a small onion and add, with seasoning of pepper and salt. Add an equal quantity of mashed potatoes and mix thoroughly, beating all until it is light. Then add a well-beaten egg and mix again, and then form the mixture into little cakes or fritters. Drop into deep fat and fry until brown. Serve with tomato sauce.

Fish Pie.

Fish pie, too, utilizes many sorts of fish.

To make it, use a pound and a half of any sort of cooked white fish—this includes cod, haddock, halibut, whitefish and others. Remove bones and skin and break the fish apart. Add a tablespoonful of chopped parsley, two of melted butter and a little anchovy sauce. Put in a pudding dish and cover with an inch-thick layer of mashed potatoes, which are very creamy. Bake half an hour, covered in the oven, then uncover and brown.

Fish Au Gratin

Any cooked fish can be used for this dish, which makes an admirable rich course or entree at dinner. Flake the fish into bits and mix with an equal amount of very rich white sauce, well seasoned with pepper, celery salt and salt. Put the fish into ramekins or into a baking dish which has been well buttered. Sprinkle thickly with grated Parmesan cheese and brown lightly in the oven. It is a good place to heat the fish and white sauce in a double boiler before putting it into the ramakins, as this insures thorough heating.

Broiled Bluefish or Mackerel.

Bluefish and mackerel are never better than when broiled. To do this as it should be done, grease a wire broiler. If there is a coal fire, use one of the double sort. The same sort of a broiler can be slipped on the regular gas broiler and makes it far easier to handle fish, in a gas stove. Grease the fish, after it has been cleaned and dried. Olive oil is good to grease both fish and broiler. Place it, open, on the broiler, and first cook the skin side—for about two minutes. Turn and cook the side without skin until the fish is done.

Loosen the fish from the broiler carefully with a sharp knife, and slip it to a hot platter. Spread with maitre d'hotel butter or plain butter, and garnish with parsley and pieces of lemon. If the fish is broiled over a coal fire, turn it several times to begin with, but do most of the cooking on the side without the skin.

BUDDHA'S TOOTH.

At all times of the year in Kandy, Ceylon, may be seen followers of Buddha making their way to the great Mihigawa Temple, the "Palace of the Sacred Tooth," in order to lay offerings and flowers at the shrine of the founder of their religion.

Entering the temple, they pass into a small room, some 12 feet square in which is kept the famous tooth of Buddha. The chamber is lighted by two lamps, which have not been allowed to go out for years.

The walls are splendidly decorated, and the vessel—called the Karundua—containing the tooth, stands on a massive silver table amidst a gorgeous array of jewels and other valuable gifts. The Karundua is draped with muslin, beneath which is a silver dome, studded with gems, and under this is a dome of gold, beautifully carved and literally encrusted with precious stones. Two similar coverings lie below them, and beneath these is a small case of gold, on which, on leaves of a gold lotus, reposes the tooth itself. This relic, carefully guarded, is seldom seen by others than priests.

So much in reverence is the tooth held that to lay an offering to Buddha on the table bearing it is an ambition which every Buddhist would not fail to gratify if circumstances permitted.

INDIAN METHOD OF RECKONING TIME.

Certain of the reservation Indians still cling to the calendar of their ancestors. The Indian method was to compute time by sleeps and moons. A sleep is twenty-four hours, and a moon is a month. There is also a midmoon, where the sun is at twelve o'clock meridian. This hour is indicated by pointing overhead.

When an Indian pointed quarter way up the sky, he meant 9 o'clock; when he pointed quarter way down, he meant 3 o'clock. Sunrise was the eastern horizon and sunset the western. Night was indicated by holding the hands together, palms downward, stretching out the arms and holding the body and head bent forward.

When there was a moon, the time was indicated in the same way as by the sun. Were an Indian asked the distance to a certain place, or how far he had come, he would say so many sleeps or days' travel.

A sleep, as describing distance, was about thirty-five miles when walking deliberately, or from fifty to seventy-five miles if going in haste with a message.

for the $7.50 device

This electric toaster and grill in combination for $5, is a 4-slice toaster (entirely new) and it also cooks in almost every manner. The toast rack turns to a horizontal position and the pans fit over or under it for frying, broiling, grilling, boiling, etc.

for the $7.50 device

An electric coffee percolator or may be used for heating water or milk.

$6.75

for the $10 device

An electric coffee glass percolating urn which shows the coffee in the making.

Ideal for Summer Use

Practically no heat, no smell, no dirt, no delay. Plug in the wire and a whole meal may be cooked in a short time.

One of the devices alone (costs $5 only) toasts, grills, broils, frys, boils, steams, bakes—does everything except roast.

The chafing dish serves also as a hot plate, which has a multitude of uses.

All, except the chafing dish, which does not need it, are fitted with fuse plugs which prevent the destruction of the utensil by over heating.

Everything is of the best grade, this year's models, in perfect condition, beautifully nickeled, fully guaranteed by Sternau and by us to give satisfaction.

Use Direct or Alternating Current

Costs about a cent for each cooking.

For useful wedding gifts, these utensils will be especially welcome, and also for personal gifts, prizes and trophies; for bachelor dens, small apartments, summer cottages; for general or special use (like Sunday evening supper) in any home they are economical, handy and saving of time, worry, temper, nerves, energy.

Mail Orders Will Be Filled

We have sufficient quantities, we believe—more than 900 pieces in all—the electrical stock on hand of S. Sternau & Co., the makers, when they decided to concentrate on their other products.

DAAB DECLARES WE'RE DOWN AND OUT BASEBALLICALLY.

When Phil Daab declared yesterday that Plainfield was baseballically "dead" he voiced the opinion of a hundred and one other localites who think they know a thing or two about the national nuisance. Daab was never a pessimist, on the contrary he has been noted for his optimism, but he couldn't for the life of him see how the baseball bubble in Plainfield was ever going to be gathered together again after the "big burst." When he was informed that we had amateur baseball he replied: "Fine, keep it, that's the only kind you'll ever be able to support around here." This man, who is probably one of the most experienced baseball promoters in the State or metropolitan district, one who has weathered Plainfield sport conditions, declares we're down and out baseballically and we're half inclined to cast our vote with his.

BASEBALL NO LONGER THE MAJOR SATURDAY AFTERNOON SPORT.

The reason? What is it? Golf, tennis motoring, bathing, fishing and a myriad of other Saturday afternoon attractions have been mounting to the zenith of the ladder of popularity while baseball has been on the descent. Yes, we had them all ten years ago when you couldn't keep a red blooded American away from a ball park Saturday afternoons, but we took better care of them than we did of baseball and when they got the chance they just shot into the public limelight and stole rooters, managers and players. They are now recognized as the major Saturday afternoon attractions, baseball has taken a back seat. But why worry? If these other sports suit the average American just as well or better than baseball why should we waste energy in trying to awaken interest in a dead issue.

When college diplomas are handed around this month Plainfield will probably have but one athlete represented in the big outgoing throngs. And this gent belongs to the borough of North Plainfield. Herbert Stine will be given his sheepskin on the rostrum of the International Y. M. C. A. Training School. During his college career he has been a prominent factor wherever Springfield College sport was staged. Well it is known among his fellow graduates from N. P. H. S. and his host of local friends that Stine has developed remarkable qualities as a leader and may be looked upon to establish a creditable record for himself no matter in what part of the country he makes his first stand. The school or institution getting his services will be a fortunate one for he is one of those individuals who can always be looked upon to produce the goods.

North Plainfield High School students have made tentative plans for a monster demonstration to celebrate the winning of the interscholastic league title by the borough baseball forces this afternoon. This will be held, of course, providing that North Plainfield wins, but we'd like to know just what the committee will resort to if Jupiter Pluvius comes out in the van.

PLAINFIELD TEAM DEFEATS FOREST HILL PLAYERS

Yesterday was a red letter day in the team competition of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association among the New Jersey clubs. For the first time in many months every team that was scheduled to play fulfilled its duty, and to add to the astonishment the hitherto invincible Englewood team went down to defeat before the Hackensack women at Hackensack.

MANY STARS ENTER.

A large array of entries has been received for the national tennis championships in women's singles, doubles, and mixed doubles, which will be decided on the courts of the Philadelphia Cricket Club, beginning Monday. Miss Molla Bjurstedt, the title holder, has not yet sent in her entry, and the same is true of a number of other prominent players who are expected to compete.

Miss Jessie Mebane, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., is spending the week-end with Mrs. George T. Hughes, of Watchung.

MEET POSTPONED.

An eleventh-hour postponement by Bayonne High School forced the P. H. S. track team to remain idle today. The next meet will be an interclass affair and will be held on Parker Field next Thursday.

PHILLIP DAAB, FORMER LOCAL MANAGER, DECLARES CITY IS BASEBALLICALLY DEAD

Who is there in this big wide-world possessed of enough sporting blood and managerial ability to revive baseball interest in Plainfield to a pitch such as was awakened by Phillip Daab when he took hold of the Plainfield Baseball Association in March, 1905? The city itself has been raked from one corner to another and the invitation has been general enough to attract any outsider who might feel inclined to "take a chance" but none have applied. We've secured amateur baseball in the form of a city circuit but the good old professional pastiming, where each run was worth a gold nugget, has gone to stay, as far as Plainfield is concerned.

At least that's what Phillip himself decreed during a short stay in Plainfield yesterday. Phillip Daab, erstwhile player, manager and financier, the life saver of Central New Jersey baseball interest in that memorable March of 1905, came back to Plainfield yesterday to renew a few of the host of acquaintances he made during his three years' connection with local sportdom. Many there are here today who remember him on the sidelines in 1905, 1906 and 1907 reading the riot act to "Rube" Oldring or telling Ernie Lindeman and Dave Fultz a thing or two about the pitching game.

In March, 1915, those interested in the national nuisance locally found it in much the same predicament as surrounds it today. Baseball managers were thoroughly disgusted, no way out of the trouble presenting itself. Finally a group of prominent citizens met and formed an association on the subscription basis, electing "Charlie" Woolston the manager of a representative ball club. "Charlie" induced Phillip Daab, then guiding the Hoboken club, to come to Plainfield and book the attractions. "Phil" had previously played ball with the famous Jersey "Blues" in Hoboken in 1883, and was one of the best known men in New Jersey baseball circles.

Coming to Plainfield he assumed responsibility for the promotion of the sport and one of his first moves was to offer the Jersey City Eastern League Club Crescent Oval for its training work. The oval was then in fine condition and of course the invitation was snapped up.

With Jersey City practicing here it was no more than right to expect Daab to open the local season against the "Skeeters." So he did and with 1,200 fans squatted in the Crescent Oval stands to witness what they deemed the death of baseball here, Daab's team put it over the leaguers by a 17 to 7 count. "Ernie" Lindeman, who is now pitching in the metropolitan district and who has since appeared here on many different occasions, turned the trick, and behind him he had Captain "Dave" Driscoll, the same gent who piloted "Ernie" Dorflinger's forces in 1911, 1912 and part of 1913; Wally Cosgrove, another ex-Pet, "Rube" Oldring, now of the Athletics, and Harry McCormick, later of Pittsburgh.

Included in the scalps collected that season were those of the New York Giants, Chicago Nationals, Cincinnati, and various other big league clubs beside a Westfield and Elizabeth series. Westfield in those days was the big attraction in these parts for the Mt. Ararat team always towed the line "Red" Waller, the eccentric mound artist, along.

"Charlie" Dixon was the official scorer in those days, "Bill" Runyon did the cartooning, and "Wally" Dobbins and Dixon held the score card privilege, getting out a neat edition each Saturday afternoon.

Prosperity continued until the spring of 1907 when Plainfield fans decided that they had had too much of the same old stuff and the club went to the wall, Daab losing about $400. Since then the game has been on the wane locally and this year marked the turning point, strict amateur competition being substituted for the so-called "semi-pro" sport.

While in Plainfield yesterday Daab was called upon to relate many incidents of the "good old days," being met by his one-time supporters at every turn. He declared among other things that baseball could never again be made a paying proposition here and that amateur sport or none would be the rule in the future.

Daab is the man who induced "Eddie" Collins to stray from the Columbia College campus one Saturday afternoon and pastime for the Hoboken team under the name of "Sullivan." This was "Eddie's" first attempt at "paid" baseball and every ball fan knows that he has since made good.

"Phil" Smith, the South Plainfield boatman, was invited from a Plainfield High School class room to do mound duty for the Plainfield club by Daab. He twirled sensational baseball and was offered a contract by "Johnny" McGraw, to whom he was recommended by the local manager. Parental objection forbade him taking up the "pro" game, however, and he had to content himself with playing Saturday afternoon ball. In 1909 he injured his arm and has since been of little use as a hurler.

Jimmy Clinton, who won the Central New Jersey League pennant for Plainfield in 1912, was a protege of Daab's and was taken to Red Bank with the latter when citizens of that place offered him a tempting inducement to bring the club there as a Shore League representative in 1907. The Red Bank delegate offered Daab a big lump of coin providing he would guarantee to win the first six games. The Plainfield manager refused to consider such an offer and the shore man finally relented. The local team was taken to Red Bank and won the first eleven, creating a sensation and sewing up the pennant.

One of his questions yesterday concerned "Warry" McLaughlin. Daab has nothing but words of praise for the present City Leaguer and his one regret was that he did not have him with his team instead of against it several times in 1906. Summarized Daab has had a hand in the making of such stars as Oldring, Keeler, Fultz, Collins, Clinton, Lindeman and a horde of others. He is through as a manager but his one wish is to maintain the friendship he created in his diamond days.

STINE'S BRILLIANT COLLEGE CAREER WILL COME TO A CLOSE NEXT WEEK

Herbert A. Stine, winner of the Yale cup in the North Plainfield High School, class of 1912, will be graduated from the International Y. M. C. A. College at Springfield, Mass., next Friday night. During his three-year course the borough boy has established an enviable record for himself, both in scholarship and athletics.

When a student in N. P. H. S. Stine was the star of every athletic team, taking part in baseball, basketball, hockey, tennis, track and football, the last-named sport having since been dropped at that institution. He also played football with the Holy Cross eleven.

Although he pursued a course particularly adapted to Association endeavor, Stine will probably cast his lot with some New Jersey High School next fall. He has had several tempting offers from scholastic institutions in New England, but it is his desire to locate nearer home, and during the coming summer he will assume temporarily the position of mosquito inspector for the Union County Extermination Commission, which he has held for three previous summers.

While in college, Stine played on the varsity baseball and football teams. He was the first string catcher on the ball nine during his second and third years and was the college eleven's best guard during the same period. Last season he played one game with Springfield in New Jersey against Rutgers College, that contest being staged on the old Federal League baseball grounds in Harrison. Many Plainfielders made the trip to Harrison on that occasion principally to see Stine play, and he made good in every sense of the word.

He has paid particular attention to the designing of a modern course in gymnastic and athletic work while at Springfield, one that will be adaptable to High School work. It is his desire to affiliate with some institution of this kind and systematize the work.

P. H. S. SWIMMING MEET WON BY GIRLS OF '18

The class of 1918 again won first honors in the annual interclass girls' swimming meet held at the Plainfield High School yesterday afternoon and now have the second leg on the silver loving cup. If they win one more year the cup will become the permanent property of the class. Practically all of the events were closely contested, but the individual work of Miss Minnie Tyler made the victory pretty easy for the Sophomores. Miss Emily White, the mainstay of the Freshman team, was unable to compete or the second year girls might have been harded pressed.

INTERSCHOLASTIC TENNIS.

The tennis meet scheduled between the teams of Plainfield and North Plainfield High Schools to decide the interscholastic championship of the city was postponed from this week by the latter cohorts until a later period. The P. H. S. team has been going at a great clip this season, having four victories without a defeat, and the boys from over the brook want more chance to round into shape.

WINS TITLE FOR EAST.

One Eastern New York State tennis championship was decided yesterday on the courts of the County Tennis Club of Hartsdale, when Mrs. Homer Green and Miss Katherine Browning defeated Mrs. Robert A. Pope and Miss White in the final of the women's doubles event at 6-3, 6-2.

GRIDIRON SCHEDULE FOR P. H. S. ELEVEN

Manager Crone Has Union County League Games on the List.

Plainfield High School's entrance into the Union County Athletic League has enabled Manager Crone to complete the football schedule for next fall already, with the exception of one game. Out of the nine games to be played, four are in the league and another will be with Morris H. S. of New York on Parker Field. It is the first time a game has been played with a team from the metropolis in several years.

The schedule (asterisk denotes league games):

Sept. 30.—Orange H. S. (pending) at Plainfield.
*Oct. 6.—South Side of Newark at Plainfield.
Oct. 12.—Westfield at Westfield.
Oct. 21.—Morris of New York at Plainfield.
*Oct. 28.—New Brunswick at New Brunswick.
*Nov. 3.—Battin of Elizabeth at Plainfield.
Nov. 7.—Westfield at Plainfield.
Nov. 11.—Pennington School at Pennington.
Nov. 17.—Open.
Nov. 21.—St. Benedict's Prep. at Plainfield.
*Nov. 30.—Rahway at Rahway.

SHAMROCKS PUT ONE OVER ON ALL STARS

Snappy Amateur Game Won by Good Sized Margin of Runs.

The Shamrock A. C., a team composed of a fast bunch of juvenile players about the city, took the measure of the All-Stars yesterday afternoon by a score of 8 to 2. McNally held the losers safe most of the way and only allowed three safe hits. The Shamrocks are looking for games with other teams under fourteen years in this vicinity, and those wishing a game may communicate with Joe Guine, 412 Liberty street.

PLEASURE PROMOTERS WILL GO TO CONEY TOMORROW

The Plainfield Pleasure Promoters will make their first trip of the season to Coney Island on Sunday, auto bus to leave the Astor Theatre at 9 a. m. Chas. P. Freligh, president of the club, has made all arrangements for a gala day. He will be remembered by a great many for his wonderful undertaking last September, when, with auto bus decorated, with a goodly supply of horns, confetti and streamers, the bus left the Astor Theatre at 4 p. m., with a great send-off to represent Plainfield at the Coney Island Mardi Gras. The slogan for the day was "Boost Plainfield."

On Sunday the trip will be made from in front of the Astor Theatre, leaving 9 a. m.; arriving at Coney Island about noon. Will leave Coney Island on or about 9 p. m. If it rains the trip will take place on the Sunday following.

COMMUNION SERVICE.

The Sunday-school of Grace M. E. church meet tomorrow morning at 9:45 o'clock, followed at 11 o'clock by preaching service, communion and reception of members. The evening service will be held at 7:45, when Rev. C. S. Gillespie, the pastor, will preach on "How to Work." Tuesday evening there will be a men's meeting to be addressed by W. D. Murray. A social hour will follow.

SPORT NOTES

The Kentucky racing commission will take action today on the sensational disclosures of "plugging" the Derby Consolation race, which was called off on Thursday, May 18, at the Churchill Downs track.

The University of Wisconsin, which nosed out in the western track championship meet, is sending a likely bunch of athletes into the meet at Evanston today, with the hope of repeating. University of Illinois and University of Chicago are the other favorites.

Jim Savage is due to fly to southern climes today, leading a general flight of boxers, lured on by contracts at fat prices in Buenos Aires.

The fifteen-thousand-dollar Kentucky Handicap will be run this afternoon at Douglas Park. Harry Payne Whitney's Borrow, which won the event last season, is a favorite.

Game old Matt Wells is to try to turn the tables on Johnny Dundee in an eight-round bout at Chattanooga on the 15th.

Jim Jeffries is broadening out. A friend from Los Angeles says he weighs 375 pounds. When he was champion his fighting weight was about 225.

Lovers of baseball hand it to McGraw and his Giants. Although they clouted to good averages, they had a bad start. Instead of yelling about luck and breaks, they kept plugging, and the results surely showed during the past few weeks.

Seventeen college rifle teams are competing for the rifle championship. The match closes June 15. Six men from each college are competing.

"MUSIC-A-NECESSITY-FOR-MOVING-PICTURES"

Frieda Hempel, Star of the Metropolitan Opera, Declares That the Highest Art of Motion Pictures Will Not Be Attained Until All Companies Synchronize Their Musical Accompaniment of a Play With Its Action—In an Interview the Great German Soprano Chooses Music For the Screen.

Frieda Hempel, Star of the Metropolitan Opera.

Illuminated on the white screen of a moving picture house, the man whose motive was revenge pushed open the French windows and entered from the balcony approaching the beautiful sleeping girl, he was seen to uncork a bottle of vitriol. The audience, thrilled with the situation, breathlessly waited, until—

"Rum-tum-tiddle!" The house piano player had chosen a musical selection for the scene.

When Frieda Hempel, the popular and beautiful prima donna of the Metropolitan Opera, was told that the Paramount Pictures Corporation, realizing the enormous importance of having proper musical selections played with every scene of their releases, were sending out complete scores with every new play released, she said in her positive way:

"Music is a prime necessity for the future success of moving pictures. In these stories of silence music must take the place of the spoken word. It plays the feelings of the drama straight to the heart. What we miss in the moving picture theatre is the voices of the actors, but now you tell me these are supplied by the great literature of music. In Richard Wagner's music there is everything adaptable to any drama ever conceived. And I can imagine nothing so suitable for a scene in a Pullman Sleeper than some of Bach's music. Take the music of 'Die Walkure;' it applies itself wonderfully to the interpretation of cowboy pictures. And if you want music for love scenes, why don't you take the love motif from Tristan and Isolde? I think that eventually you will develop certain chief motifs taken from great composers that will become recognizable in course of time by motion picture audiences."

Frieda Hempel, star of the Metropolitan Opera House, had spared enough time from her favorite game, Mouschel, to tell the interviewer what she thought of the very latest step forward in the motion picture industry. The Fraulein's fuzzy little dog yelping around suggested an ideal musical syncopation for "The Call of the Wild," but a few pats from the diva and his majesty ceased growling.

"You see, Fraulein Hempel," explained the interviewer, "The Paramount Pictures Corporation has taken one of the most important steps forward in the industry. They have arranged with Schirmer, the music publisher, to select scores for their pictures, each film on their program to be accompanied by a complete bound book. In other words, in more than 2,000 moving picture theatres of America the audiences are going to hear night after night selections from Mendelssohn, Strauss, Wagner, Delibes, Saint Saens, Victor Herbert—all the great composers, dead and living. These selections will absolutely match the mood of the screen. Not only is the artistic taste of an audience now been given the chance to gratify itself, but the coupling up of the best music with motion picture plays opens a field for a better understanding of the drama.

"These scores will be so arranged that they can be used for any size orchestra from a single pianist to the largest symphony orchestra.

"These scores will be furnished to the exhibitors by the exchanges upon a rental basis. They will mean the saving of the effect of the film from ruination through the inappropriateness of its musical accompaniment."

Fraulein Hempel, who had been attentively listening, clapped her hands.

"That is good," she exclaimed. "By the proper adaptation of music the photoplay house will be raised to a much higher artistic plane. But what an interesting problem it must be for a musician to select from the musical history of the world, themes that will adapt themselves to some of the intense dramatic situations one sees in the better pictures! But how difficult it would be to find suitable music to describe the 'Mysterious Hand' or 'The Perils of Polly!' I am mentioning titles that I have never seen, but which may sufficiently interpret my idea.

"I can't understand why this important question of the appropriate music for the more pretentious motion productions has not before been seriously considered. All the sentiment and duty of feeling in human nature is most perfectly expressed in music. In fact, it is only imperfectly expressed in stories and in drama. No, I do not even exempt such a master playwright as Sardou, the great French author. His play 'Diplomacy,' which I have just seen put into motion pictures, is, of course, a classic, but much of the deeper undercurrent of the play was brought out for me in the phrasing of the incidental music chosen especially for that purpose. Undoubtedly, music takes the place in these stories of silence of the spoken word. It plays the feeling of the drama straight to the heart."

NOBODY PLAYED THE LOVE MOTIF FROM "TRISTAN AND ISOLDE" WHEN THE FAMOUS PLAYERS' DIRECTOR TOLD MARIE DORO TO SMILE LIKE AN ENGAGED GIRL IN "DIPLOMACY." PLAY OVER THE FOLLOWING BARS FROM THE MOTIF AND SEE IF YOU AGREE WITH FRIEDA HEMPEL. SHE CHOSE THEM AS THE IDEAL MUSICAL ACCOMPANIMENT FOR EVERY PARAMOUNT LOVE SCENE.

"Miss Hempel, what composer do you think has written the most adaptable music for the motion picture plays?"

"I suppose that Richard Wagner is the only master who has applied literature to music," replied Miss Hempel. "It seems to me that in Wagner's music there is everything adaptable to any drama ever conceived. Of course the 'Wedding March' of Lohengrin has become the recognized symbol, the world over, of every joyous scene, or unjoyous for that matter, at the altar. That in itself is a new testimony of the universal appeal which Wagner has made to the sentiment of the world, upon its most vital subject—marriage.

"What emotion of the most popular kind, has not Wagner interpreted to the improvement of any other composer in the world? I should like to suggest to motion picture producers that there is no greater love theme ever written in music than the love motif of 'Tristan and Isolde.' It should become as universally inspiring and popular as his 'Wedding March.' It is quite remarkable to realize how easily most of the music in Wagnerian opera can be applied to the most thrilling of modern photoplays.

"For instance, the 'Ho, Yo, Hoi,' music of the 'Walkure' with its stirring vitality of open air and god-like courage, applies itself wonderfully to the interpretation of cow-boy pictures of those beautiful out-door scenes taken in your western country, in the hills of California. Wagner never saw them. He gained no inspiration from the great stretches of prairie and sky and valley, which your western country so amply provides, but he had the universal imagination of great genius. He felt all things that were possible to human feeling.

"You remember the wonderful music written for 'Hans Sach' in Wagner's Opera 'The Meistersingers.' I have always thought that that music would apply itself to some of those home scenes I have witnessed in photoplays, where the masterful philosophy of heart is often shown in the character of the father. Of course, in those modern stories that are put before us in the motion picture houses there is perhaps a purpose beyond the mere suspense of story writing, but I was particularly impressed with the fact that in this production of 'Diplomacy' I enjoyed the poetic feeling in the play because of the ideal music selected, which I had not felt when I saw the play produced abroad. You see, music will always idealize, and that is something we can never get too much of.

"Of course, when the ball-room scene came I instinctively expected to hear the 'Blue Danube Waltz' by Strauss, and when the wedding scene came of course I also expected to hear Wagner's Wedding March. But I had never considered Mendelssohn as an inspiration to intrigue. Yet I found the music selected for that big scene in the play in Dora's apartment from 'Hebriden' by this composer was marvelously appropriate. So also was the serenade by Moszkovski for another moment of intrigue in the scene between 'Baron Stein,' the villain, and 'Countess Zizka.' The selection from 'Musetta' by C. Saint-Saens was ideal for the symbolic vision of Dora. As I watched the progress of the play, with its many opportunities for improvement over the mere theatrical production on the stage, I couldn't help wondering what the great Sardou would have thought of it himself. Sardou, by the way, would have made a wonderful scenario writer for moving pictures, wouldn't he?"

"But, Miss Hempel, are there no other composers whom you think adaptable to motion pictures?"

"Sardou, Author of 'Diplomacy,' Would Have Made a Wonderful Scenario Writer."

"Why not? Take Bach's music, for instance. I can imagine nothing so suitable for a scene in a Pullman sleeping car than some of his fugues. The music of 'The Barber of Seville' would be excellent for thrilling situations. The music of Verdi's operas is perhaps too lyrical for the purposes of interpretation of moving picture dramas. There must be substance and thought to the music selected for a big dramatic story, not only tunefulness and emotion.

"How Easily Wagnerian Opera Can Be Applied to Thrilling Photoplays."

"The trouble in this country has been, I am told, that it is almost impossible to get pianists and organists to play good music in the average motion picture house. In Berlin and other European cities, so I understand, it is the custom for advanced pupils studying in the musical conservatories to take orchestral positions in moving picture houses. In Berlin, it is essentially important that the music must be good, and that it be well played. The public taste demands that. It seems to me, that there must be a great opening in this country for the large number of musical students to help out their musical education by playing in these moving picture houses in the evenings. And with carefully chosen scores, like Paramount's how charming—what an appeal to people who like music, as well as pictures it would be!

"I firmly believe that music is a prime necessity for the future success of motion pictures, and that the more beautiful the music the deeper will be the under current of feeling stirred, and the more sincere will the audience believe the screen story they are watching, to be. I think eventually you will develop certain motifs taken from the great composers that will become recognizable at once by motion picture audiences. For instance, my suggestion is to make love motif of all love scenes to be the one I have chosen from 'Tristan and Isolde.' Of course, I am a singer and my profession is music, but I do not believe that any human beings are fully nourished with the savor of identity that is necessary to perfect happiness, unless they hear and appreciate the finest music written."

ADVANCE STEPS IN ENDEAVOR WORK

Union County Society Will Develop the Intermediate Dept. of Organizations.

Intermediate Christian Endeavor has taken an advance step in New Jersey, particularly in Union county. Since the visit of Paul C. Brown, National Intermediate Superintendent, the Union county C. E. Union has appointed a special department to develop this important branch of Christian Endeavor work. Pastors and other workers of the county are being appealed to by way of letters and personal visits, and the results, in the brief period thus far, are very satisfactory and prove conclusively that there is a big opportunity for the older Endeavorers and pastors in our State to co-operate in this movement to line up the boys and girls of the High School age for definite service.

The annual May rally of the Paterson local C. E. Union, held in the Park Avenue Baptist church, was perhaps the best in the history of this organization. The address of Ivan P. Flood, of Newark, on "Mobilization for a Great War" was the principal feature. The Junior rally in the afternoon, which was the first held for a number of years, was largely attended and very much enjoyed.

Success marked the Junior C. E. rally, held in the Central Baptist church, of Elizabeth, under the leadership of the Union county Junior superintendent, Miss Mary C. Hoagland. The Greystone Junior C. E. Society, of Elizabeth, was awarded the attendance banner, having all of the seventy-four members present—a most remarkable representation. Miss Louise G. Paulsen, the New York Junior superintendent, was the chief speaker.

The efficient press superintendent of the Morris county C. E. Union, Cyrus T. Loree, of Morristown, reports that there were more than two hundred delegates present at the twenty-ninth annual convention of that union, which was held in the Presbyterian church of Hanover. There were splendid addresses, a relay presentation of the "Campaign of Millions," and many other helpful features at both the afternoon and evening sessions.

The annual convention of the Union county C. E. Union, held at Westfield, brought together large delegations from almost every society in the county. The Second Presbyterian Society, of Rahway, made the trip in a special auto bus, taking every active member and thereby captured the beautiful county banner. The Rev. Robert F. Y. Pierce, D. D., of New York City, delighted the Endeavorers with a powerful sermon on "Saved to Serve," illustrating his remarks with crayon sketches. State President John T. Sproull, of Arlington, called attention to the many recent C. E. conventions. Within the past few weeks Mr. Sproull has attended rallies in many sections of the State, and he reports that the conventions this spring were never surpassed in numbers and enthusiasm.

There have been many other conventions throughout the State, including those of Hudson, Essex, Mercer, Gloucester and Ocean counties, but owing to their failure to submit prompt reports of same, the State Press Department is prevented from mentioning details.

SOME JUNE BRIDES.

Annapolis, Md., June 3.—Miss Lula Radcliffe Adams, a society belle of Atlanta, will be married at the Naval Academy tomorrow to Midshipman Julius Ward Simms, of the United States Navy, who was graduated from the naval academy today. The groom is a native of Laurel, Miss., and comes from a distinguished family.

Berryville, Va., June 3.—Miss Ellen Lane Williams, of Berryville, is the bride today of Lieut. George Bamford Aslie, U. S. Navy. The wedding takes place in Grace Episcopal church, this town.

Boston, June 3.—An out-of-door reception will follow the wedding in Brookline today of Miss Frances Marie Clausen and Joseph Shattuck Ely, of Hayedale, N. Y. The wedding is at 4 in First Parish church, and the reception will be on the estate of Gardner Washburn, near the Brookline Country Club.

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 3—Miss Irene Wurzburg, of this city, will be the bride of Sidney Gardiner, of Chicago, in a society wedding today at Grace Episcopal church. Washington, New York and Chicago society people are attending.

Chicago, June 3.—Miss Lyle Comstock, of Chicago, and Curry Stimson Prescott, of Menominee, Mich., will be married here at four this afternoon.

WHAT IS AILING MODERN COLLEGE BOY

Student Editors Now Believe It is "Sublime Indifference for the Future."

Princeton, June 3.—Student editors on the Princeton University campus have discovered what is ailing the modern college youth. They have named it "a sublime indifference for the future" and have announced that the ailment is about to be cured.

Two-thirds of the men who make a failure of their college work and "flunk out" of Princeton are, according to the Daily Princetonian, those who have failed to profit by their failures of other years and these failures having piled up, the student finally is let out into "the wide, wide world."

To solve this problem of accumulated failures the university authorities will next fall introduce a system designed to do away with student thoughtlessness and sublime indifference and, judging by first impressions, the new system will meet with great favor.

The plan divides conditions into two classes. Class F includes failures removable by examination and Class R includes those so serious that they cannot be removed by examination. In this latter case the conditioned student must repeat entirely the course in which he has failed and pass it satisfactorily. In repeating a course, however, a student must set aside some one of his regular courses till a latter term and can only carry more than the regular number of courses per term when he is entirely free of conditions. In this way a man is literally one-fifth conditioned and four-fifths unconditioned, two-fifths conditioned and three-fifths unconditioned, etc., as the figures may show. The condition is not a thing to be overlooked on the Princeton campus these days.

NATIONAL GUARD NOTES

Commissioned officers of the First Battalion, Second Infantry, N. G. N. J., are looking forward to the annual school of instruction for the officers of the infantry and quartermaster corps, which will open at Sea Girt on June 19. It will last for a week, closing on June 24.

This camp is for officers and enlisted men, who are authorized to attend, including general officers, infantry officers, officers of the several staff departments and corps who have followed a prescribed course of instruction, and candidates for commissions. According to the report of Adjutant-General Sadler, of 247 officers qualified to attend last year, 198 and twelve candidates for commissions were present.

Although no program of the instruction to be given has been definitely announced as yet, it will likely be prepared with a view to meeting the needs of the officers in attendance, covering field operations of companies, battalions and regiments, transportation of troops and material, supply of a regiment in the field, convoy problems, money and property accountability and preparation of papers.

The most instructive feature of the camp last year was the formation of the company officers and candidates for commission into two provisional companies, under the command of regular army officers who conducted a course of instruction in interior economy of the company, and every phase of the activities of an infantry company in the armory and in the field. Particular attention was given to details for the purpose of overcoming the deficiencies of line officers noted by the inspector-instructors at the annual inspection the year previous.

This will no doubt be carried out during the coming camp. There will also likely be lectures by the inspector-instructors on the subjects of field orders, modern intrenchments, designation of infantry targets, military hygiene, military occupation in hostile territory, service of communication for line troops, field artillery in co-operation with the infantry and use of the machine guns.

The smoker held at the armory last Saturday night for the members of the First Battalion was a success in every way. A program of athletic events had been prepared for the soldiers and it gave them plenty of entertainment. It is likely that this will be made an annual event, as it is felt that it will stimplate recruiting. Little trouble has been experienced along this line during the past season, but it is believed that an entertainment such as was held last Saturday night will tend to bring the men together and will stir up more interest in the work of the guard.

Lieutenant Colonel William B. Martin paid a high compliment to the officers of the First Battalion for the appearance of their respective companies at the regimental review held recently in Trenton.

The men of the First Battalion who are selected to attend the school of musketry at Sea Girt in July will be given an opportunity to improve their work previous to this camp of instruction. Colonel Martin has announced that he will hold special schools for those who are selected and they will receive special instructions at the armory so that they will be well prepared for the school at the State ranges. Announcement will be made in the near future regarding the time for the meeting of the special class.

Corporal Angus Beyer, of Company I, was elected to the rank of a sergeant last Thursday night to fill the vacancy caused by the promotion of Sergeant Thomas Hall to the second lieutenancy. This left a vacancy among the corporals to which Private E. A. Scheckler was promoted.

THE WOMAN'S COLUMN

Fort Worth, Tex.—Mrs. Mary Jane Skidmore, of Fort Worth, said to be one of the three living real daughters of the American Revolution, is celebrated her eighty-seventh birthday yesterday. Fort Worth Chapter of the D. A. R. will hold a reception in her honor. Her father was Jonas Frazee, of Cincinnati, who served three years under George Washington and who heard the liberty bell ring in Philadelphia.

St. Louis.—Among the graduates from St. Louis College of Pharmacy who received the Ph. D. degree last week was a little Syrian girl who came to America only four years ago. Grace Steingardt and her mother could speak no word of English when they landed in America from Beyreuth, Syria. The young girl enrolled in the public schools and worked in a drug store.

Philadelphia.—Society women of Philadelphia are taking up aviation. Mrs. Paul Drenckla Mills, of Radnor, made her initial flight recently. Mrs. George C. Thomas, Jr., has also enrolled. They are planning ambitious flights and will have special machines built for their use.

New York.—Miss Margaret Carnegie, only child of Andrew Carnegie, the philanthropist, was graduated from a private school last week. Although only 19 years old, Miss Carnegie has already taken an active interest in civic and philanthropic movements and has for two years held the position of president of the Armstrong League, which disseminates information regarding the Indians and negroes.

Minneapolis.—Eighteen years ago in Minneapolis a girl of 13 began to give dancing lessons. Last week the woman who was the little girl and who is still giving dancing lessons, bought the Plaza hotel, one of the largest family hotels in the city. Miss Ethel Malcolm is the woman who danced her way into fortune. She will manage the hotel herself, between dancing classes.

San Francisco. Women from many States along the Pacific Coast are enlisted in the military encampment of 250 society women which opened today at the Presidio. Clad in khaki, and wearing elk-skin boots, they look real soldierlike. Barracks are to be used. In addition to the hospital course, there will be instruction in wig-wagging, heliographing and wireless telegraphy. The literary women of the State will teach history through the lives of the national heroes.

LOYALTY DEMONSTRATION.

New York, June 3.—A demonstration of their loyalty to America will be given at Sheepshead Bay tomorrow under the auspices of the United German Societies and the Austrian-Hungarian Societies of the Eastern cities. The day is designated as "American Liberty Day." A troop of German veterans of the Civil War will head the parade and a living American flag of 600 girls in uniform will be a feature. There will be floats of historic scenes in which famous Americans of German extraction took part. Molly Pitcher, Von Steuben, De Kalb, Pastorius, Muehlenberg, Carl Schurz and others will be shown in historic settings.

LEHIGH VALLEY CO. PLACES LARGE ORDER

Seventy New Locomotives Will Be Added to the Road's Equipment.

The Lehigh Valley Railroad placed an order yesterday for seventy new locomotives, forty of which will be of the "2-10-2" or Santa Fe type. These will be big powerful locomotives with ten driving wheels apiece. The other thirty locomotives will be of the "2-6-4" or Pacific type, with six drivers. These Pacific type locomotives will be the most powerful of this type of locomotive ever built. They are designed to haul sixty loaded freight cars up a fifteen-foot grade forty-three miles long in one hour. The Santa Fe type locomotives will be used exclusively for slow freight. The Pacific type locomotives are designed for fast freight service. They will, however, be equipped with steam heat apparatus and air signal so that they may be used in passenger service if desired.

Both types of engines will be equipped with Schmidt firetube superheaters, Walschaert valve gear, automatic stokers and all other modern devices for locomotives.

All of these locomotives will be built by the Baldwin Locomotive Works, delivery beginning Oct. 1, 1916.

The Santa Fe type locomotives will be eighty-four feet, seven and one-fourth inches long over all, including tender; and, when carrying their full capacity of coal and water, will weigh 542,700 pounds each. The Pacific type locomotives will be seventy-six feet, ten inches long over all; and, when carrying their full capacity of coal and water, will weigh 452,700 pounds each. In other words, all the locomotives just ordered for the Lehigh Valley Railroad after coupled together will cover a mile of track and about four hundred feet additional. The total weight will be 35,289,000 pounds, or 17,644½ tons.

Including this last seventy, the Lehigh Valley Railroad has ordered 125 new locomotives in the last eight months.

June a Gala Month At College and Summery Raiment Must Be Provided - Fetching Sport Togs for Campus and Athletic Field - The Class Day Frock, Hat and Parasol - Accessories.

OVER Decoration Day week-end the college girl is in town for a brief visit with the home people and a day of shopping for June wearables. So many of the prettiest summer things appear in the shops during May that it is usually a mistake to stock up too generously at Easter vacation time, and for the June weeks quite a complete summer wardrobe will be required by the college maid. June is a busy month at college. Some of the most important social affairs occur then; and the Commencement and Class-day festivities demand their share of alluring raiment. There are the June athletic events, too—sport toggery must be ready for that. Indeed for these few weeks in June the college girl must have a complete little summer outfit of her own—and after college has closed and she is home with leisure for shopping and fittings it will be too late to provide what she should have had, to take her place with distinction among her college mates.

The Natty Go-Between Tailleur.

First of all, the college girl must have something smart and correct to travel in. Perhaps she purchased this during the Easter vacation, perhaps not. At any rate it will take the form, either of a smart and simple tailored suit, or a very good-looking separate coat to be worn with skirt and blouse or a pretty frock, and in buying it, one looks ahead to summer when it will serve as a traveling costume and prove useful during early autumn days.

If the choice is a separate coat, the college girl cannot do better than to select one of black and white checked worsted with a hat of black milan in one of the new wide-brim sailor shapes, trimmed with black and white grosgrain ribbon. The checked coat will look best over a rather dark skirt, or a frock of navy blue taffeta, crepe de chine or mohair and worsted mixture which is light in weight, very durable and possessed of a charming, silky sheen. Add pretty boots of fawn-colored glazed kid, irreproachable gloves and a small handbag of pleated silk, and our college maid will be an attractive and correct little exponent of youthful style when she steps aboard the train.

If, on the other hand, the go-between costume is a tailored suit, care should be taken to select a youthful and not too "fussy" model.

The blue serge tailored suit pictured is smart as well as youthful and correct for a college maid. The serge is in a very dark navy shade, called crows-wing blue and skirt and coat though cut with snappy style have no tendency toward exaggeration. The foot of the closely pleated skirt and the edge of the coat are faced with a lightweight resilient lining which keeps the edge crisp and prevents the material from falling too limply. The pleating of the coat is set below a raised belt and the slanting patch pockets are applied over the pleats which are thus held down flatly at the sides of the garment.

The picturesque collar and tie could only be worn by a young woman, so this style adds to the youthful dash of the costume. Collar and cuffs are of white glazed kid; the tie of navy blue silk polka dotted in white.

Campus and Class Wear.

Whatever would thousands and thousands of school and college maids have done, had not one unforgettable Peter Thompson created the middy dress? So comfy it is, so neat, so youthful and so altogether desirable a costume—if one is anywhere between the ages of ten and twenty-five. After the quarter century milestone one must regretfully let the Peter Thompson go, for while adding youthfulness to youth, it accentuates age. The campus and classroom frock pictured is a typical Peter Thompson model, made of hard-twisted navy blue serge, with baggy sailor blouse opening at the neck below a wide sailor collar. There is no front closing; the blouse slips on over the head and a "shield" of the serge buttons across the deep V of the neck opening. There are special touches of smartness that distinguish the true Peter Thompson middy. One of these is the overlapping yoke section of the blouse which, with its curved outline and machine stitching, makes a graceful trimming on the blouse front. Another feature is the chevron ornament on the sleeve; and the sleeve, you will note, is smoothly pleated into the cuff, giving an especially neat effect. This year's middy dresses have the graceful pleated skirt, attached to a smoothly fitting hip-yoke, and of course this yoke laces up the back in imitation of the sailorman's breeches—an unfailing feature of the smart middy costume for pretty maids.

For the Athletic Field.

The college girl secretly hopes that she will cut a dash when she appears for the first time in her brand new sports outfit. With the exception, perhaps, of the wonderful new dancing frock folded away in tissue wrappings and awaiting the night of the Prom., the sports outfit is most dearly cherished of all the new clothes. A comfortable new sports waist for tennis, golf and canoeing is pictured; and also a new silk sports coat with hat to match. The pictures give no idea, really, of these garments for color is the prime interest in both cases and the black and white newspaper print of course shows none of this charm of hue. For instance, the sports waist is of biscuit-colored crash with collar, belt, cuffs and edge-pipings of rich yellow linen. The model comes also with green linen trimming. This blouse slips on over the head and is, as you see, slashed almost to the waistline from the yellow collar, the edges of the slash having yellow pipings. Pearl buttons linked with cord hold the slash together. This attractive waist may be worn with a sport skirt of tan crash or, as in the picture, with a skirt of tan and brown striped panama cloth. The silk sweater—or as one should say, nowadays, "country-coat"—is green with white trimmings. The skirt is of white and green striped tussah, the stripes arranged obliquely in alternate gores. The hat is of cream milan with coarse embroidery in green yarn and a cockade of pleated white ribbon.

One or two tub frocks in simple sport lines will not come amiss, for there will be warm days in June when something cooler than the serge Peter Thompson will be agreeable—and the faculty does not look kindly upon too informal athletic raiment in the classroom. This is a year of separate skirts and blouses but the blouse and separate skirt effect can easily be achieved in a one-piece costume, and this is altogether the best for a college girl who is apt to be careless about adjusting blouse-belt-and-skirt, as the trio should be adjusted to look just right. A sports-dress of the sort suggested, is of white linen with loose, long-sleeved waist, gathered to a deep yoke. The skirt is gathered at the belt and has two oblique pockets. At the ankle is a very deep hem. Buttons run down the front of the blouse from the turn-over collar, and skirt is attached to blouse under a broad belt of the linen lapped under two buttons. Another neat sports dress is of tan and white linen with collar and cuffs of white [illegible]andie. Buttons run all the way down waist and skirt and a brown silk necktie is knotted under the wide, turned down organdie collar.

June Accessories.

In the business and play of the final college weeks there will be simply no time at all to repair ravages of the wardrobe, so the college girl must be amply supplied with the little things of dress; with fresh collars and cuffs ready to baste in; with stockings to accompany sport shoes, dancing slippers, and the buttoned boots of formal type; with dozens of handkerchiefs; with parasols for those campus occasions when fluffy feminine garb looks pleasing against the green; with neckties, belts, gay pugarrees for sport headgear and with—above all—an indispensable wrist-watch th[illegible] not a minute may be lost in the crowded days by miscalculations of time!

A few paragraphs back [illegible]on was made of the cherished evening frock ready to burst forth in all its dainty prettiness on the great occasion of the college Prom. What could be more enchanting in the way of a June dance frock than the girlish costume of white taffeta and embroidered filet [illegible] with little touches of narrow [illegible]elvet, each sporting a fluttering [illegible] bow? Soft as June moonlight itself, this little frock, and fresh and young as a June morning. The upper part of the skirt is of white taffeta, joined with a cording to two flounces of embroidered filet net. Featherbone tubular boning is run through the cord, distending the skirt smartly below the hip. Plain filet net was used for the long sleeves and this net is draped over a gathered bodice of white tulle. Black velvet ribbons, tied across the soft tulle, show through the outer net.

The Porch Inviting

FROM May until October the porch is the living room of the family, and there seems no go d reason why just as much thought and care should not be given to its attractive quality as is ordinarily gi[illegible] to making an indoor living room attractive. The porch, indeed, if one is influenced by such things, is a much more conspicuous evidence of taste and culture than the indoor living room hidden away behind four walls and only on parade when visitors come inside the home. The porch on the other hand is always on parade. If it is charming and harmonious in furnishing, it suggests an indoor environment where charm and harmony reign; if the porch is unattractive and uninviting—with cast-off furniture and uncomfortable chairs—every passerby will understand that there are limits to the requirements of beauty and good taste, in that particular household.

Porch furniture should be selected with the dimensions of the porch in mind. Sleepy-hollow chairs—with no space to move about between them—will not make a luxurious porch; vistas of green, a suggestion of space and roominess must be obtained at all costs for these are the things that make the out-of-door room most pleasing. There are long, narrow wicker porch tables which are excellent for porches that are not very wide. These tables have shelves underneath and wicker pockets at the ends for magazines, fancy-work and the like. They take up much less room than a round table and look well on a long, narrow porch. A swinging settee across the end of a long porch, breaks the length and helps to give the cosy, roomy look that is so desirable. If you have a very long porch across the front or side of the house, shorten it at one end by a cushioned wicker settee and at the other by a swinging settee. One of the long, narrow tables just described, may be pushed back against the house wall and two or three low chairs will occupy the space between the settees. Do not make a narrow porch still narrower with flower boxes or even potted plants along the edge. A low railing around such a porch makes it seem wider and more roomy, and on the ground, below the railing, bright colored flowers may be planted. Above all, never run a long, narrow strip of carpet or matting down the center of a narrow porch. This only emphasizes the lack of width. Break the floor space with two or three square or oblong porch rugs, and remember that deep awnings will increase the apparent width of your porch materially. Even when a house faces north and there is no danger of the sun being troublesome on summer days, an awning adds tenfold to the attractiveness of the out-of-door living room, lending a suggestion of luxury, coolness and privacy—besides the valuable suggestion of space.

It is the fad now to furnish the porch in bright, soft colors; and these harmonize artistically with the color of the house walls and with the flowers planted around the porch. Having once chosen the porch color scheme, abide by it—until the house is repainted or the garden replanted—and let not turkey red cushions stray into a blue and orange environment; or brown wicker rockers spoil the harmony of a blue and white arrangement.

Blue and orange is especially suitable for a porch having a southern exposure. A delightful porch of this type has its floor tinted a soft gray; its ceiling a warm, deep orange. On the gray floor are spread blue rugs and in the blue wicker chairs are cushions of orange sunfast material. There is a round porch table of blue wicker on which is a circular cover of orange linen and in the center of the table stands a deep blue pottery jug for flowers. White wicker furniture dashed with scarlet, and scarlet cushions give cheery brightness to a very shady porch on the north side. In front of this porch on a bit of lawn which the sun reaches in the morning is a great bed of scarlet geraniums, and the color scheme is charming, and is added to appreciably by red and white striped awnings, not needed for shade but very effective withal.

A porch furnished in green is particularly cool and inviting on a warm day and green is a favorite color scheme for deep verandas on the sunny side of the house. Porch furniture in green wicker or green-painted wood may be had at moderate price; and green porch rugs of fibre or rush weave may also be had quite inexpensively in green. Awnings of white and green-striped canvas and one or two green or deep yellow pottery flower receptacles will add their quota of restful charm to such a porch.

Growing plants and flowers add greatly to the rustic charm of a porch looking out into a country landscape. With very little trouble vines may be trained to cover that end of the porch which does not command a pleasing view and long flower boxes on the porch railing may have more vines to trail over the rail. A wicker flower stand for growing plants may be moved about to catch the sun or to make a background for the teatable. A galvanized iron pan fits into the wicker stand and may be lifted out when it is desirable to change the plants or to give them a good wetting.

The cozy wing chair is well placed beside another graceful plant stand whose circular receptacle holds a growing palm. A cool and delightful corner this, with the great palm whispering in the breeze and the big chair ready to sink into for a few moment's chat or an hour's reading.

Growing plants and flowers add greatly to the rustic charm of a porch looking out into a country landscape.

A restful wing chair of wicker, sheltered behind a big palm whose leaves rustle invitingly in the breeze.

SUMMER SUNHATS ARE BLACK.

OF course one does not say "sunhat" any more; the modern word is "Sport hat." And this summer the exceedingly smart, exclusive sport hat is to be black; of supple straw and very wide-brimmed, with a band and tailored bow of two-tone ribbon. Some of these hats of black milan have bands of white and black grosgrain ribbon; other models, of black basket straw are trimmed with blue and green, blue and white, or scarlet and white ribbon in fetching effect

CHANCE FOR PRESS ADVERTISERS TO ATTRACT THE ATTENTION OF THE ENTIRE COUNTY.

As the result of an agreement between the Plainfield Daily Press and the Elizabeth Evening Times any advertiser placing a classified ad in the Press may have that same ad inserted in the Elizabeth Evening Times upon the payment of one-half more than is charged for the Daily Press insertion alone. Thus, if an advertisement in the Daily Press costs forty cents, the same advertisement may be placed in the Elizabeth paper for an additional twenty cents.

The Elizabeth Evening Times has a circulation of 9,000 and is widely distributed throughout Union County. Thus if an advertiser places his advertisement in the Plainfield Daily Press and Elizabeth Evening Times he places it before the eyes of thousands of readers at a very small cost.

Most advertisers welcome the opportunity to attract the attention of the whole county to their offerings and with the co-operation of the Elizabeth Evening Times the Plainfield Daily Press is now able to make this possible. The Elizabeth Evening Times has earned a reputation for itself as an advertising medium, especially along the classified line, and it is a well known fact that its influence extends into other counties besides Union.

It is to be hoped that every Plainfielder will be wearing a rose pinned on their dress or in the lapel on their coat by some one of the hundreds of women "taggers" who will be scattered all over this city on that day.

These "taggers," dressed as nurses, will cover the city from the Plainfield Country Club on one side to the Park Golf Club on the other—from the Netherwood station at one end to the Clinton Avenue station at the other—and all sections of the city in between these four points of the compass.

That day has been chosen by the Women's Auxiliary Board of Muhlenberg Hospital to ask all men, women and children of Plainfield—whether rich or poor—to contribute as much money as they are able to this most worthy organization which recognizes no creed—except the creed of helping the suffering.

TROOPER'S HORSE LOST IN SKIRMISH

Sergeant Brown Rolston's Valuable Mare Becomes Frightened and Runs Away.

ANIMAL STILL MISSING

Watchung Troop, Accompanied by Captain Rockwell and Colonel Hill Enjoy Hike in Preparation for Encampment June 24.

The Watchung Troop, accompanied by Captain Rockwell, of the regular army and Colonel Hill, of the New Jersey National Guard, went out on a practice hike over Saturday afternoon and yesterday, partly by way of preparing for their annual week of camp, which is to begin on June 24.

The troop camped at Drake's farm, adjoining Glenside Park, and in spite of the heavy rain of Saturday night, which made the little "dog" tents in which the troopers slept rather damp, the expedition was a great success. There was only one unfortunate incident—the loss of First Sergeant Brown Rolston's horse, a large light-chestnut thoroughbred mare, five years old, which he bought only a few weeks ago and had largely trained himself. To her, the picket line, with thirty or forty other horses, was totally strange; she broke two halters in succession and stayed loose about camp through the night, but in the morning, somebody trying to catch her so frightened her that she cantered off across the fields and disappeared, and nothing has yet been heard of her.

While the troop rode out Saturday afternoon the sky was clearing. Captain Borden broke the "A" section of troopers into squads, the leader of each being given written orders to find certain spots, and there to form "Cossack posts"—self-sustaining outposts used in advance of an advance guard in hostile country. Each of these Captain Borden visited and criticized according to the skill with which each post was organized. It was, therefore, not till 6 that the last detachment, under Corporal Cox, rode into camp. So settled did the weather then appear that the site chosen was a hollow, an ideal site for a small body of troops wishing to be concealed, but not one to be chosen when rain could be foreseen.

The rain came with a burst of wind while many of the troopers were still detaching from their saddles the half of a "dog" tent which each one carries. They were put up with all haste just as the first big drops fell to the peals of thunder, and the saddles and rifles were got inside just in time. But the troopers had to stay outside to dig trenches, water and feed the horses, and unload the wagon, and many were pretty wet before the wind passed by and the rain settled into a melancholy drizzle. But an excellent supper, prepared by the troop cooks, Kirby and Eugene Johnstone, and a big camp fire that the rain could not quench made this as nothing. There was singing by the quartet, and between that and a talk by Capt. Borden on the function of the "Cossack Post," taps were not sounded till nearly 11 o'clock. Then all the men but the stable guard crawled into their tiny tents, in each of which two men sleep—if the horses don't make too much noise. Several slipped off the picket line Saturday night and many kicked and bit, and the stable guards, relieved every two hours, had their hands full.

But the weather was perfect when the day's work began on Sunday at 4:45. The first event was a skirmish drill in the open fields, dismounted, in which an attack upon a hill ending with a most exhausting charge, was simulated. A close order mounted drill followed this. Then written orders were given Lieutenant Runkle and Lieutenant Charles. These stated that a war had begun, that cavalry patrols had been seen in the vicinity and that each lieutenant was to take his platoon to a certain point and reconnoitre. Each platoon represented one of the hostile armies, and the route assigned to each entailed hard and cautious riding, the main force in each case protecting itself with advance "points" of several men and with flankers. There were several clashes: Lieutenant Runkle's outposts, for instance, bagged Percy A. Ransome as he was riding at a gallop back to Lieutenant Charles to inform him of his discovery of the enemy, and Robert H. Cox, acting as a flanker. And Lieutenant Charles drove off one of Lieutenant Runkle's patrols and captured their horses. But neither force succeeded in surprising the other, which was to the credit of both.

The troop rode in for "mess" at 2 o'clock. At 3:30 their horses were fed, watered and cleaned, their full equipment packed upon the saddles, their rifles immaculate and the ride home began. It was made in record time at a fast trot for the most part, and troop quarters was reached a little after 4.

The troop's week in the open will not be that of formal camp. With the other troops of the squadron they will march for two days to a point in Northern New Jersey, where they will stay in camp for three days and then march back again.

$5,600 GIVEN FOR Y. M. H. A. BUILDING

Goodly Sum Contributed in First Few Days of the Campaign.

A total of almost $5,600 has been subscribed to the building fund of the Plainfield Young Men's Hebrew Association and the ten days' campaign is but well started. Yesterday alone $1,300 was given to the fund. A number of checks have come in unsolicited and while the amounts are not exceedingly large this spirit is very pleasing to those in charge of the movement to secure a home for the association. Those who have sent in checks without solicitation include Mayor Leighton Calkins, Dr. Henry M. Maxson, J. B. E. Vanderhoef and others. The largest contribution of yesterday was from Jacob A. Fass and was for $200. The campaign will close after this week, and the committee desires to raise $15,000.

DEATH ENDS ILLNESS OF DAVID BOWDEN

Expert Road Builder and Contractor Passes Away in Muhlenberg Hospital.

David Bowden, at one time street supervisor under City Engineer Gavett, and known throughout this section as an expert on road building matters, died Saturday afternoon in Muhlenberg Hospital, where he had been under treatment for the past three weeks. He had been ailing for nearly a year with a stomach trouble which developed complications. It was only recently that he was compelled to give up his business as a contractor but after entering Muhlenberg failed rapidly.

David Bowden was born near Belfast, Ireland, fifty eight years ago and after spending his boyhood in Scotland came to this country in 1886. He was brought to Plainfield three years later by F. A. Dunham, the local civil engineer. Mr. Bowden remained in Mr. Dunham's employ for many years acting as foreman on the largest of his road jobs. One of these was at Olean, N. Y., where the Plainfielder installed many blocks of brick pavement and another was the opening up of Watchung avenue from East Front street into North Plainfield as far as Manning avenue. The deceased made a study of all kinds of road building and after leaving the city's employ as street supervisor did general road contracting himself.

He was prominent for many years in Perseverance Lodge, Knights of Pythias, and was a member of the Masonic fraternities. He was also a member of Hope chapel where for a long time he took a prominent part in the work of the Men's Bible class to which he belonged at the time of his death. Mr. Bowden's wife died ten years ago and his only near surviving relatives are nephews and nieces, several of whom live in Plainfield. These include Mrs. Thomas Brown, of Bergen street, Walter Bowden, of West Third street, and Samuel Bowden, of West Fourth street. The deceased last resided at 110 West Second street.

The funeral will be held at 402 Park avenue tomorrow afternoon at two o'clock and will be in charge of Rev. E. W. Skellenger, pastor of Hope chapel. Burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

CHIEF KIELY TO AID IN RECEIVING POLICE CHIEFS

Chief Kiely, of the Plainfield police department, will be active in the entertainment of the annual convention of Police Chiefs of America to be held in Newark this week. He will attend all meetings of the convention, which is to be called to order tomorrow and will be in session four days. Chief Kiely goes to Newark this afternoon to assist in making arrangements for the reception and entertainment of the distinguished guests. He has been a regular attendant at these conventions for years and numbers among his personal friends many of the police chiefs in all parts of the country. This morning a California delegate to the convention called him over the long distance telephone to say hello. The Californian had already arrived in Newark.

PAY TRIBUTE TO DEPARTED ONES

Beautiful Ascension Service of Local Knights Templar.

FIVE ON DEATH ROLL

William McIntosh, James S. Pray, Thomas H. Keller, J. Hervey Doane and Calvin H. Rugg Honored in Impressive Service.

An impressive Ascension Day service in memory of five departed members of Trinity Commandery, No. 17, Knights Templar, was held in Trinity Reformed church last night, in which members of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. & A. M.; Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. & A. M.; Jerusalem Chapter, No. 24, R. A. M., and Lydia Chapter, No. 41, O. E. S., participated.

The departed Knights were William McIntosh, James S. Pray, Thomas H. Keller, J. Hervey Doane and Calvin H. Rugg. Their names were read from the pulpit of the church and when no response was heard a light for each one went out until a cross on which the lights were placed hung in darkness.

The memorial oration was delivered by Sir Knight Henry W. Egner, Jr., past potentate of the Salaam Temple, of the Order of the Mystic Shrine. He called attention to the manly Christian qualities of the departed Knights and told of the love and esteem in which they were held by all who knew them, especially their fraternal brothers. This love and friendship is not ended, he said in consolation to grieved ones. Death can only sever these relations, it cannot destroy them, for they are to be renewed again in another and better life.

In his address to the Knights and others present at the services the Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor, said that true manhood is Knighthood and that the essence of manhood is self-control. He told of the origin of the term Knighthood and what its members sacrificed their lives for in the medieval ages. He said:

"Your organization has had a splendid history. In ancient times the object of your organization was to protect the sacred places and the pilgrims on their way to Jerusalem. You became one of the most powerful organizations in the world. Many of the ancient knights did not fear to die for Christ.

Glorious as have been the victories of the past, there are moral and spiritual battles to be fought today, and it is for the Christian manhood to solve them. What is the hope for the future? The answer is found in your motto, 'By this sign conquered.'

"We have a mighty, all powerful, all conquering Christ. The religion of Christ through His Cross and the application of His teachings to the every day need are the only solutions. The hope of the world, the hope of every age, the hope of every man is in Christ, wounded for our transgressions, bruised for our iniquities, but raised from the dead to be a prince and a Savior."

Special music by the choir and the organist added to the beauty and the seriousness of the service.

MISS HOPE MILLER WEDS AT BINGHAMTON

Former Plainfield Girl Becomes the Wife of Malcolm John Wilson.

Miss Hope Irene Miller, a former Plainfielder and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson A. Miller, of Washington avenue, this city, became the bride of Falcolmn John Wilson, son of John M. Wilson, of Binghamton, N. Y., on Saturday evening. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Clara A. White, 119 East Henry street, Elmira, N. Y. Rev. Dr. Samuel E. Eastman, pastor of the Park church of that city, officiated, in the presence of near relatives and a few intimate friends, the ring service being used.

The bride was given away by her father, and the groom was attended by Eldon Davidson Miller, of Buffalo, a brother of the bride. Mrs. Theo White Jacobi and Miss Georgianna Palmer furnished appropriate wedding music. The bride wore a gown of princess lace, with tulle veil caught with orange blossoms, and a girdle of cloth of silver and carried a bouquet of bride roses.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Wilson are accomplished musicians, and the latter is well known to Plainfield people, having sung in the First M. E. and Trinity church choirs. After a short wedding trip they will make their home in Binghamton, where Mr. Wilson has a position with the Ansco Camera Company.

PARENTS OF A DAUGHTER.

Mr. and Mrs. William Jaeger, of East Second street, are the parents of a nine-pound baby girl born to them yesterday.

MANY WORSHIPPERS GREET NEW PASTOR

Rev. Howard E. Clark's Ministry Here Marked by Large Accession to Church.

The Rev. Howard E. Clark, M. A., was greeted with the largest audience that has attended the Congregational church for a year past when he preached for the first time yesterday in his new charge.

Thirty-four were received into membership, twenty-one on confession of faith and thirty by letter from other churches. The sacrament of baptism was observed at the midweek service on Wednesday evening last.

Mr. Clark delivered a short sermon taking as his text, Dent. 5:2: "The Lord our God made a covenant with us in Horeb," pointed out that a covenant was binding on both parties and implied both rights and obligations.

Mr. Clark urged the congregation to come to the Lord's table and seal this covenant with God in the sacrament of its Lord's Supper.

The sermon was most favorably received and great enthusiasm prevailed among the large congregation. Mr. Clark later addressed the men's Bible class showing how God had denied Paul his ambition to go into the province of Bethynia, but He had given him the whole continent of Europe, of which our western Christianity was a product.

The Christian Endeavor service was conducted in the evening by James McClymont and was well attended.

WILL REPORT ON PLANS FOR NEW AUTO PLANT

The Business Men's Association will hold its monthly meeting in Coward's Hall tonight, when Morris C. Van Arsdale, chairman of a committee named to interest and bring to this city the plant of the "Fergus Motors of America" will make a report. A representative of the company will be present. W. B. Holland, of New York, representing the "American Fair Trade League," will speak on the merits of the "Stephens-Ashurt Price Maintenance Bill," now before Congress.

LOOK FOR YOUR NAME.

Each night in the classified columns of the Plainfield Daily Press the name of some Plainfielder will be published. Watch for yours, and when it appears cut out the column in which you find it and bring it to this office. In return, you will receive a book containing twelve admission tickets to the Airdome ($1.20 worth) good at any performance.

There are absolutely no "strings" attached to this offer and no favoritism will be shown. The names will be picked from the local directory, at random, and you will be given the same privileges at the Airdome as those who pay the regular admission prices. The offer begins tonight; scan the classified columns and see if your name is the first.

The Airdome last summer proved to be a big feature in Plainfield, and Manager Shannon, together with his assistant, David Rogers, have laid plans that will make it an even greater amusement center during the coming summer months. It is located at Watchung avenue and East Front street, and the pictures shown there daily are the best that can be obtained.

WATCH FOR YOUR NAME.

GRADUATES HEAR STIRRING SERMON

Commencement Week Exercises Begun at Mt. St. Mary College.

ATTRACTIVE PROGRAM

Baccalaureate Discourse Delivered at the Rev. James J. Powers—Urges Young Women to Make Charity the Rule of Their Lives.

Many visitors from New York and various parts of New Jersey were present at the College of Mt. St. Mary yesterday for the commencement week exercises. The baccalaureate sermon was delivered by the Rev. James T. Powers, of Lokewood.

The candidates for the degrees were attired in the usual academic black robes while the high school graduates appeared in the attractive white robes.

The academic profession formed in Gabriel Hall and marched to the main building, where they were conducted to the chapel by the grand marshal, Vera X. Ringwood.

Seated in the sanctuary were the Rev. Fathers Peter J. Hart, of St. Joseph's; Rev. J. J. McGrath, of Stirling; Rev. John F. Baldwin, and the Rev. Father Sterns, St. Alphonsus church, New York city.

The following program was rendered in the college chapel:

Processional
Magnificat ..... Weigand
Hymna ..... "Peace Be Still"
Ave Maria ..... San-Saens
Veni Creator ..... Verdi
Baccalaureate sermon
Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament
a Ave Verum ..... Mercadante
b Tantum Ergo ..... Cabra
Holy God, We Praise Thy Name
Recessional.

The baccalaureate sermon was delivered in a clear and forcible manner by Rev. James J. Powers, pastor of St. Mary's church, Lakewood, and Chancellor of Trenton Diocese.

After congratulating the young women on their good fortune of being graduates of Mt. St. Mary's and reaping the benefits of the good work of the Sisters of Mercy, Father Powers answered the oft-repeated question, "Of what use is higher education?" Statistics, history and the demand in all walks of life for those who have been trained in the higher branches were deftly used to show that higher education is a rare possession and the bulwark of our country when coupled with religion and morality as advocated by Washington, the Father of our country, and exemplified in a pre-eminent manner in the work and training of Mt. St. Mary's College.

Launching out into his address, the reverend speaker, made charity, the queen of virtues, the keynote, and closed with an eloquent plea to the graduates to make the two great commandments of Christ, "Love of God and love of neighbor," the rule and guide of their future lives. As a parting word, he wished them every success and God-speed on their journey through life.

SUDDEN DEATH OF THOMAS H. NORTON

Prominent Resident of Fanwood Passed Away at His Home Today.

Thomas H. Norton, aged 47 years, a prominent resident of Fanwood, was found dead in bed at his home on Martine avenue that place this morning, heart trouble being the cause. His death was a great shock to the community for he attended church yesterday morning and enjoyed an automobile ride in the afternoon.

Mr. Norton had resided in Fanwood ten years, serving two terms as a member of the Borough Council and at the time of his death was a member of the Board of Education. He was also a member and trustee of the Baptist church, Scotch Plains. For many years he was engaged in the wholesale paper business in New York. He leaves a wife, two daughters, Mrs. Charles Norton and Miss Christine Norton and a brother, Charles Norton. The notice of funeral will be announced later.

FANWOOD IS OPPOSED TO THE FREEHOLDER CHANGE

At a meeting of citizens in Fanwood, Friday night, strong resolutions against the small Board of Freeholders for Union county were passed. The resolution declared that the proposed change in the Board would be "against the best interests" of the county. At a meeting of the township committee of New Providence held the same night, similar action was taken.

JOHN PHILLIP SOUSA WILL APPEAR HERE

But Only for An Overnight Stay at Hotel Kensington on Horseback Trip.

John Philip Sousa, who, during the past season has been appearing at the New York Hippodrome as music director, will arrive in Plainfield early this evening in accordance with the routine mapped out for his itinerary on his horseback trip from New York to Washington, D. C. Harry Askin, one of the managers of the Hippodrome, communicated with John J. Sullivan, proprietor of Hotel Kensington, this morning, requesting the best accommodations the hotel to offer for the noted musician tonight.

He started from New York this morning on horseback for the capital, accompanied only by his valet and favorite horse. Mr. Askin has also requested Mr. Sullivan to make arrangements for the keep of the animal here over night. The trip will be resumed early tomorrow morning.

KILLS HIMSELF IN FIT OF DESPONDENCY

John Reick, Well Known Locally, a Suicide at Bound Brook by Shooting.

In a fit of despondency brought about by worry over family and financial matters, John Reick, a former resident of Scotch Plains and well-known in this city, committed suicide in Bound Brook, Saturday evening, by shooting himself in the left temple. His lifeless body was found shortly after 7 o'clock on Mountain avenue near the Shepherd farm by H. B. Opdyke as the latter was on his way home. The police were notified and the body was removed to Taggart's undertaking rooms, where County Physician Long viewed it later and granted a burial permit. The funeral will be private and burial will be in Hillside cemetery, this city.

Reick, who was about sixty-five years old, was machinist and worked at various times in Plainfield shops, principally the Pond Tool works and the Scott Press works. Some years ag he received a legacy of $6,500 from his mother, and later another of $4,500 from a brother. Since that time he had not worked regularly, spending most of his time fishing and hunting, two sports of which he was very found. For some time past he had been living in Bound Brook, boarding with a family on Mountain avenue.

Reick is survived by his wife, one son, and two daughters, all of whom live at Scotch Plains. The son is Squire Reick, who enjoyed prominence locally as a baseball pitcher.

RESOLUTIONS ON DEATH OF J. HERVEY DOANE

Board of Recreation Commissioners Express Regret Over Loss of Member.

Resolution on the death of J. Hervey Doane, for several years a member of the Board of Recreation Commissioners, of this city, were adopted at a recent meeting of the Board held at the Y. M. C. A. A copy of the resolution was ordered sent to Mr. Doane's family and another will be spread on the minutes of the Board.

The Board decided to start the regular playground work on July 5 and the closing date was fixed as August 25.

The supervisors and assistants at the various grounds this season are as follows: Franklin School, supervisors, Miss Marion Mair, assistant, Miss Sadie R. Rothberg; Irving School ground, supervisor, Miss Ruth I. Wean, assistant, Miss Ruth S. Ralston; Bryant School, supervisor, Miss Harriet Louise Franke; St. Mary's School ground, supervisor, Miss Harriet Moe; Parker Field, supervisor, George W. Wriston. The committee on playground teachers reported that there had been several applications for appointment as playground assistants without pay for the purpose of experience in playground work. The appointment of any such was left to the committee, Messrs. Marshall and Zerega. This is an excellent opportunity for any young women who may contemplate taking up playground work to gain actual playground experience.

WILLIAM TODD A BENEDICT.

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Emma Cook, of Philadelphia, to William Todd, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Todd, of West Front street, this city. The ceremony was performed in New York last Monday. Mr. Todd has been located in Philadelphia for the past year as claims agent for the American Express Company, but a few weeks ago accepted a similar position with the Adams Express Company on the Long Island division with headquarters at Jamaica. The couple will make their home in New York city.

INFANTRY AGAIN FORCES FIGHTING

Germans, French and British All Make Fierce Assaults.

NO IMPORTANT GAINS

Crown Prince Beaten Back Before Verdun—British Fleet Lost 333 Officers in Jutland Battle—Italian Losses Enormous.

Infantry action featured developments on all points yesterday and last night. No important gains were made, although desperate attacks were launched by the Germans along the whole Verdun front; by the French at Haucourt road, east of the Meuse and at Vaux village, and by the British southeast of Ypres. The Berlin and Paris statements follow:

The German War Office today gave out the following statement:

West front: "British troops yesterday evening again attacked the positions conquered by us southeast of Ypres, in West Flanders, but the assault broke down under our artillery fire. French infantry tried to advance against our trenches west of the Haucourt-Esnes road, but were repulsed. East of the Meuse bitter fighting which developed between Callette forest and Damloup is still going on with undiminished violence. Enemy infantry in great masses has tried to regain positions conquered by us during the past few days. The greatest effort was made by the enemy on Cumieres ridge, southwest of the village of Vaux, and in the district southeastward. All French counter-attacks were repulsed with the heaviest losses."

French war statement:

According to today's communique issued by the War Office, the Germans continued their assaults with undiminished violence last night along the Verdun front east of the Meuse. The attacks were unsuccessful. The Teutons attacked French positions in the region of Vaux and Damloup. Between the fort and the village of Damloup the German offensive was particularly severe. The French are still in possession of Fort Vaux. In the vicinity of Douaumont there was heavy artillery fighting. Unsuccessful German raids were undertaken in the Vosges.

Italian Losses 40,000.

Paris, June 5.—Italian casualties resulting from the Austro-Hungarian offensive up to four days ago were 40,000, according to The Matin. It is stated by the same newspaper that the Austro-Hungarians have not more than 12,000 Italian prisoners.

Bulgars Shell French.

London, June 5. A list issued by the Admiralty today gives a total of 333 British officers killed in the Jutland naval engagement.

AUTOMOBILE PARTY UPSETS ENROUTE TO LAKE HOPATCONG

An automobile containing five young men enroute for Lake Hopatcong, upset near Henry Guinard's place at Watchung at 1 o'clock yesterday morning, and all the occupants were injured but not seriously. At the corner of the road where the car turned turtle there is a thick growth of trees alongside the road and a wire fence and this prevented the machine from going over an embankment.

A telephone call brought help from a Plainfield garage and the car was righted after which the party continued its journey to Lake Hopatcong.

MRS. CHARLOTTE A. CLIFFORD.

Mrs. Charlotte Anderson Clifford, widow of C. C. Clifford, died yesterday at her home, 94 Manning avenue, the borough. Mrs. Clifford was seventy-seven years of age. The funeral will be held at her late home tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 and interment will be in the North Plainfield cemetery.

THE DIFFERENT NEMO

No. 10—Nemo Figure-Control

Figure-reduction means pressure. Whether that pressure is harmful, or not, depends on the material and construction of the corset.

Nemo Corsets have earned the endorsement of hygienists because, while they exert a high degree of figure-control, they do not constrict or compress the figure harmfully.

The Nemo "bridge" construction, in all Nemo Corsets, prevents pressure over the stomach and liver, and provides ample breathing space.

Reduction of figure below waist is comfortably done by using Nemo semi-elastic fabrics.

Healthful support is given by Nemo Self-Reducing Straps.

All these features are embodied in this very popular model:

No. 322—Nemo Self-Reducing Corset, for the average stout figure, flesh well distributed; sizes 21 to 36 ..... $3.00

THE DIFFERENT NEMO

No. 2—Nemo Self-Reducing Straps

How do Nemo Self-Reducing Straps remove surplus fat and make the figure permanently lighter and smaller?

By constant, gentle friction between the Straps and the body, with each movement of the wearer. This passive massage softens the fat, which is gradually absorbed and removed.

This effect cannot be produced by bands and straps sewed on to a corset.

The Nemo Straps are semi-detached, therefore free to move. That's the Nemo patented invention—used in Nemo Corsets only.

Here's a fine example of Nemo Ego-Shape System:

No. 318 — Nemo Self-Reducing Corset, for short, stout figures, excess fat on abdomen rather than on hips. Figure-reduction by passive massage of Self-Reducing Straps and elastic bands on back of skirt. White coutil, sizes 22 to 36 ..... $3.00

BIBLE SCHOOL PARADE A GREAT SUCCESS

Attractive Floats Feature Annual Demonstration—Exercises at F. P. Vail's.

Despite the threatening weather in this vicinity Saturday afternoon, the annual parade of the Dunellen and New Market Sunday-school Union was held as arranged, and it was an impressive sight. About two hundred children, in addition to the older members, took part in the parade, and the bright faces of the children, together with their gala dresses and the many pretty little class formations made an attractive picture.

Numerous miniature floats and handsomely-decorated baby carriages bespoke considerable labor and ingenuity on the part of the parents and teachers, a canoe-shaped float drawn by Walter Nelson, containing his three children, receiving especially favorable comment.

While the little children were the center of attraction, yet a very interesting feature of the parade consisted of the many artistically-bedecked vehicles, including automobiles, motor trucks, stages, carriages and farm wagons carrying the smaller children and the more elderly members of the schools.

The children of the Baptist Sunday-school of New Market and the Protestant Episcopal Sunday-school, headed by the ministers of the respective churches, marched to the Methodist church, where they were joined by the members of the Methodist school and the Dutch Arms band proceeding thence to Washington Park, where the Presbyterian Sunday-school fell into line and thence marching to Washington avenue, North avenue, Prospect avenue to Edwards avenue, New Market, thence to New Market road and, breaking ranks at the grand stand erected on the lawn of F. Percival Vail, where brief formal exercises were held, consisting of singing by the schools, music furnished by the Dutch Arms band, scripture reading and a short address on "David" by Rev. Mr. Griffens, of Elizabeth. H. S. Townley, president of the Sunday-school union, presided at these exercises.

Following the exercises, the members of the respective schools reformed in line and marched by the way of New Market road to their churches, refreshments being served in the different class rooms to the tired but happy children.

Great credit is due to all who assisted in making the affair such a big success, and the onlookers who thronged the line of march were loud in their praises of the care and detail with which the parade was planned.

Jesse Rogers, the local motion picture actor, is spending several days at Atlantic Highlands. Mr. Rogers is considering an offer from the Kalem Company to go down to Florida for several weeks.

Mrs. William Johnson entertained her sister and family, who motored out from Brooklyn yesterday.

A large number visited Washington Rock yesterday. There were quite a number of automobile parties from New York as well as Jersey.

J. C. Henderson and family, former residents of Green Brook, have removed to the Rice place on Green Brook road.

Dr. E. G. Curry and family, who were to move to Mountain Lake this week, have postponed their departure until the bungalow which they are having erected there has been completed.

Allen Frederick, who was appointed American Express agent at Atlantic Highlands two weeks ago, spent the week-end in the borough.

John Logan spent yesterday at Lake Hopatcong.

Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Brakley have moved from New York City to East Orange.

Clarence Waldron has taken a position at Levgar's.

Mrs. Eliza Field and family spent the week-end in Hoboken visiting relatives.

William Breen has gone to Wilmington, Del., to take a position with the Dupont Powder Works.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Whitney, of Chicago, who are visiting in the borough, were tendered a reception Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Emile Muller. The affair was arranged by Mrs. Edwin H. Dean and Mrs. Albert Muller.

CHARLES HILL RELEASED.

Charles Hill has been released from the borough jail after being confined there for several days on a charge of assault and highway robbery preferred by Frank T. Farrell. The alleged deed was performed last Monday night. At the hearing Friday evening, Hill claimed that he went to Three Bridges at 6:30 Monday evening and didn't return until Tuesday afternoon and that it was therefore impossible for him to have committed the crime. The police, upon investigating Hill's claim, found it to be true and his immediate release followed.

GIFT TO LIBRARY.

Mrs. E. B. Latham has presented the Public Library with seventy-five volumes of fiction, juvenile and technical books, all of which are now on the shelves ready for the borrowers. The Library Board would greatly appreciate gifts of books which are in good condition, as their funds will not permit of the purchase of sufficient books to supply the demands of the readers.

WESTFIELD GIRL WEDS FANWOOD MAN

Miss Helen Johnston Becomes the Wife of John Kyte at Home Ceremony.

An attractive home wedding was performed at 6 o'clock Saturday afternoon by the Rev. James A. Smith, pastor of the St. Paul's Episcopal church, of Westfield, when the united in marriage Miss Helen Schroeder Johnston, of Brooklyn, and John Herbert Kyte, of Fanwood, in marriage, the ceremony taking place in the presence of one hundred relatives and friends at the home of the bride's brother-in-law, Henry E. Darling, of Ross place, Westfield. The bride was given in marriage by her father, William R. T. Johnston, of Brooklyn, and her only attendant was her sister, Mrs. Henry E. Darling. The best man was Robert L. Kyte, of Elmora, a brother of the groom.

Miss Johnston entered the room on the arm of her father, and the party met beneath a bower of roses, honeysuckle and wild locust, where the ceremony was performed. The bride wore a white satin gown with an overtunic of embroidered silver and old Dutch lace, and she carried a bunch of white roses. The bride's sister wore a dress of light sea foam green satin and carried a bouquet of pink roses.

Following the wedding ceremony a reception was held at which guests were present from New York, Plainfield, Westfield, Fanwood and other more distant points. The interior of the house was prettily decorated with roses, honeysuckle and cut flowers. The young couple are well known among a large circle of friends, and were the recipients of many costly and beautiful gifts.

Later in the evening they left for an extended motor trip through the South.

BICYCLE THIEVES MAKE A HURRIED DEPARTURE

Bicycle thieves visited the borough yesterday afternoon. Although they tried hard enough to get away with something the activity of Dr. F. W. Wescott prevented them. Only a quick "getaway" prevented them from seeing the interior of the borough lockup. Dr. Wescott was sitting on the porch of his home at the corner of North and Martine avenues when he noticed three young men approaching the Fanwood postoffice from the Martine avenue bridge.

Separating when they reached the postoffice, one went around the building one way and the other went the other. Grabbing the bicycles of Postmaster George Reiner and his son they started off through the field, but the doctor was soon after them and the chase became so warm that the culprits dropped their loads near the residence of Charles Sheelen and made off in the direction of Westfield.

SATURDAY NIGHT CLUB.

The members of the Saturday Night Club spent a pleasant evening in the Fanwood firehouse Saturday evening, the program having been arranged by Miss Florence Kennedy, Mrs. George B. Carter and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Tuzo. Owing to the approach of warm weather there will be but a few more meetings held until fall.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Sands, of Fourth street, left Saturday to spend the summer at Coney Island, where Mr. Sands is superintendent of the A. L. Thompson attractions.

Mrs. Augustus Sheelen and daughter, spent the week-end with relatives in Jersey City.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICE.

An anniversary service that was attended by many local people, including the members of the B. Y. P. U. of the Baptist church, was held in the Methodist church last night by the Epworth League. A splendid musical program was rendered, and short addresses were made by the various officers of the League.

PREACHES IN JERSEY CITY.

The Rev. J. Madison Hare, pastor of the Baptist church, preached a sermon in the Bergen Reformed church, Jersey City, last night, to the members of the Fourth Regiment, N. G. N. J., of which he is the present chaplain. Mr. Hare was formerly a pastor of one of Jersey City's largest churches and is very well known all over the city.

Paul Ritter, of Perth Amboy, is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Ritter, of South avenue.

The Middlesex Volunteer Fire Company was called out to extinguish a small blaze in the home owned by Frank Delbruno last night at 11 o'clock. The local department quickly responded to the call and after a half hour's work had the blaze out. The loss is estimated at about $150 and is covered by insurance.

Miss Isabelle Delaney, of Newark, has returned home after spending the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Delaney.

John Horan is now able to be around after being ill with scarlet fever for about six weeks.

Watchung.

A number of the young people attended a picnic supper in honor of Miss Jessie Mebane, Saturday evening on the porches of Sunny Slope farm. After the picnic supper, the evening was pleasantly spent in music and playing games. Among those present were the Misses Jessie Mebane, Caroline Hughes, Elsie Schmidt, Lucy Hughes, Stella Sheets, Daisy Schmidt and Gladys Sullivan, Mary Dell and Clara Hadley, and the Messrs. Dauglas Demler, Newton Spencer, Roy Herrman, Arthur Myers, Mebane Ramsay, William Demler, George Myers and Thomas Fetherston.

All the members of the Indian Legend Players are requested to attend the rehearsal tonight in costume. A special song, which has been composed for the play, will be rehearsed.

Charles A. Eaton, Jr., of Woodstock College, Toronto, has returned to his home on Valley road for his summer vacation.

Albert Porret has leased half of his house to Mr. and Mrs. Mulford, of Plainfield.

Miss Jessie Mebane, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. George T. Hughes of Sunny Slope farm.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the North Plainfield Improvement Society will not meet Thursday afternoon, June 8, as announced before. The date of the meeting will be announced later.

While repairing the scale at Wilson crusher, Saturday, Ephraim S. Acker had the misfortune to run a ten-inch spike through the palm of his hand, which caused a painful injury.

Mrs. Phillip Coriell, of New York, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. George T. Hughes, on Sunday.

Special Gas Water Heater Offer Lasts Only a Few Days Longer

YOU still have a chance to save from $1.00 to $5.00 by ordering a Gas Water Heater before Saturday, June 10. After that date the regular prices will again prevail.

Bear in mind that we make an additional reduction of 5 per cent for cash.

Those who prefer to buy on our Service Payment Plan will find it a greater convenience. $2.00 with order and $1.00 per month will secure a boiler heater; $20.00 with order and $20.00 per month, an automatic instantaneous heater, which supplies hot water in any quantity at the turn of a faucet.

A Gas Water Heater is the easiest and best way to heat water for dish washing, laundry work, shaving, bathing or any other household purpose.

Order a Gas Water Heater NOW and get the benefit of its use through the hot weather. It will mean a pleasant kitchen, and, as it is cheaper to heat water with a Gas Water Heater than with a coal range, the money saved during the life of a water heater will pay for it several times over.

This is a case where opportunity is really knocking at the door of every home that lacks a Gas Water Heater. Use the coupon. It is worth from $1.00 to $5.00 if water heater is purchased prior to June 10.

BANDITS LEVY TOLL ON MANY AUTOISTS

Posse Hunting For Highwaymen In New Jersey.

Jersey City, June 5.—As the result of an attempt to hold up a party of Hudson county men, including State Senator Charles M. Egan and County Physician George W. King, eighteen state motor inspectors were rushed from this city to Warren and Morris counties, New Jersey, to search for a band of highwaymen.

According to reports from that district, the northwestern part of the state has been terrorized during the last four nights by at least three men who conceal themselves in bushes at the side of the main roads in wait for automobile parties. When cars appear they fire, aiming at the tires. When the automobilists stop to repair the punctures the robbers, who are said to be armed, pounce upon them.

It was only by good fortune that County Engineer Thomas J. Wasser, with three other men, escaped the robbers while crossing the Rockaway Valley railroad track a few miles west of Mendham, Morris county. As it was five bullets grazed the left rear tire of Wasser's car and lodged in the back of the machine. The slight puncture eventually caused a blowout, but by that time the party had reached Morristown, five miles beyond.

Only a short distance in advance of the Wasser car, William Clossey, chief of the Hudson boulevard motorcycle police, was driving with a party of friends.

GREAT PIER FIRE.

Loss In San Francisco Estimated at $1,500,000.

San Francisco, Cal., June 5.—In property loss the fire that destroyed Pier 46 was the greatest the San Francisco water front has ever seen. No lives were lost, but according to the figures of the shipping men interested and of the harbor commission the property values reduced to cinders will reach nearly $1,500,000.

The 7,000 ton cargo of the Japanese steamship Shinyo Maru No. 2 alone was worth $1,250,000. The damage to the vessel was slight.

Many small vessels were set on fire and drifted about the bay. Among the shipments destroyed were 2,000 cases of castor oil, intended to relieve a shortage of that article in the United States.

Although there is a strike among the stevedores, there is no suspicion that they had anything to do with the fire.

EVERY HOUSEWIFE IN PLAINFIELD WILL GET ONE OF THESE

THIS sample can of Matchless Liquid Gloss, sent with the compliments of your regular dealer, will be left at your house within a week. We want you to give Matchless Liquid Gloss a thorough trial, for we believe that it is the best furniture polish ever made.

Matchless Liquid Gloss first won fame as an automobile polish. In it motorists found what they were looking for—a scientifically prepared gloss of the highest cleansing and polishing efficiency, containing nothing which could harm even the delicate surface of the body of a motor car.

Matchless Liquid Gloss is just as good in the house as it is in the garage. It does two things at once—cleans and polishes. Use it on floors, woodwork, furniture—all varnished or enameled surfaces. It removes stains and discolorations, nourishes and preserves the wood fibre and leaves a soft, lasting lustre.

Any of the dealers listed below can supply you with Matchless Liquid Gloss—and they highly recommend it. Sold in pint, quart, half-gallon, gallon and five gallon cans.

PITCHERS IN BATTLE ON DUNELLEN GROUND

McLaughlin Beaten by Younger Rival in City League Engagement

One of the most evenly waged contests staged in the City League schedule to date was played on the Dunellen field Saturday afternoon when the Clinton Avenue combine lost to the Tabs by a 2 to 1 score. Each aggregation poled out eight safeties, Hannon, Robenson, Lou Dixon and McLaughlin being responsible for two baggers.

It was a case of veteran against youngster in the pitching line, Warry McLaughlin opposing Jack Denny. They proved to be about even up on twirling honors, each being touched for the same number of bingles and Denny striking out one more than his rival. Hannon, Rosenson, McLaughlin and Wilson were the leading hitters of the afternoon, getting a brace each.

Brown had a big day in the fielding line for the Clinton Avenue aggregation, collecting six putouts and three assists during the afternoon.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD HAD EASY TIME WITH SPICERS

The South Plainfield baseball club easily defeated the Spicer A. C., of Plainfield, yesterday afternoon by a score of to 6. The local team was at its best and several times with the bases full a fast double play was made. The locals also played errorless ball and at all times were heavy with the stick. On the other hand the Spicer clan played very loose ball. Velard started off for the home team and in four innings he held the Spicer men to one hit. Dolan pitched a steady game, but his men failed to give him any support.

SMOOT LEADS FIGHT FOR A "SUFF" PLANK

Hilles and Davis Promise Their Support.

Chicago, June 5.—The woman suffragists who believe they hold a powerful club over the political parties in the number of women now allowed to vote in national elections have already won a partial victory in their fight for a plank in the Republican and Progressive parties indorsing the right of women to vote.

Certain of the Republican leaders, led by Senator Smoot of Utah, have reached an agreement to try to persuade the resolutions committee to approve the principle of the right of women to vote. Likewise National Chairman Charles D. Hilles of the Republican party and Secretary O. K. Davis of the Progressives have promised their support to a suffrage plank in their respective party platforms.

The suffrage leaders, however, who will open a convention of enfrachised women from twelve states at the Blackstone, have determined not to stop at halfway measures. From the Republicans and Progressives they want a plank in the party platforms indorsing the Susan B. Anthony amendment to the federal constitution.

From the Democrats, who will be trailed to St. Louis next week, they intend to demand immediate action on the amendment of the judiciary committee of the senate and their stand, they say, will be backed by the political power of a large percentage of some 4,000,000 women who can now vote in national elections.

EVENING BIBLE CLASS AT WASHINGTON SCHOOL

One of the best opportunities for Bible study is being offered at the West End Community Center where a class is being organized under the direction of one of the best Bible teachers in Plainfield. The class is to be absolutely non-denominational and as the teaching will follow out the line of thought which Dr. Biederwolf presented many who are desirous of seeing more clearly and learning more fully of the Word as those who have studied and understand it interpret it will be glad to attend the classes. Miss Clyde Burnett is to talk on the fourteenth chapter of Mathew tomorrow evening, when the first meeting will be held in the kindergarten room at Washington School. Miss Burnett is a member of Dr. Haldermann's church in New York and has had the advantage of hearing this great man's Bible lectures. Aside from that she has been a close Bible student for years and has led and instructed some of the largest classes in the city.

Every one living in the vicinity of Washington School who is interested should come to the class tomorrow night. If those who own campaign song books will bring them an enjoyable evening will be spent. The class will begin at 8 o'clock.

ROBERT MOYER TO GRADUATE.

Robert Raymond Moyer, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Moyer, of Kensington avenue, this city, is a member of the graduating class of Peddie Institute. The exercises in commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary and annual commencement of the institute began yesterday morning in the Baptist church of Hightstown, when the Rev. William E. Chalmers, a graduate of the class of 1889, preached the anniversary sermon at 11 o'clock. The final graduation exercises will take place Wednesday. Mr. Moyar was a member of the class of 1915 of the Plainfield High School.

JERSEY WATERS ARE INSPECTED

State Commerce Board Sees Great Possibilities.

WATER FRONT NEGLECTED

Commissioners Take Trip Through Newark Bay and Raritan River—Action May Be Taken to Make Big Port of New Brunswick.

New Brunswick, June 5.—The manifold advantages and latent possibilities of the water frontage of northern New Jersey were displayed to members of the state board of commerce and navigation on a trip through the waters of Staten Island sound, Newark bay and the Raritan river under the personal direction of W. Parker Runyon, one of the commissioners.

Miles of undeveloped water front, pier sites, factory locations, which because of their proximity to water routes with their low freights could be used to make of this section of New Jersey one of the greatest and busiest industrial centers in the United States, were seen by the members of the board neglected and practically going to waste, although New Jersey has a potential capacity for housing the mightiest merchant fleets that have ever come to our shores.

Commissioner Runyon estimated that between Perth Amboy and Elizabethport less than half of the water front capacity has been developed. Between Elizabethport and New York the development has been fuller, but even in that section at least one-third of the available land is lying idle.

The party left Perth Amboy in the handsome new seventy horsepower boat of the Perth Amboy dry docks. The boat first headed down the Kill von Kull. The wharves and factories of the city of Perth Amboy show the development that may be expected along Staten Island sound in the future. After going a short distance up Newark bay the party returned to Perth Amboy and then inspected Raritan bay and ran up the river to New Brunswick.

The great possibilities of the river were commented on, and it is likely that some action will be taken by the commissioners if opportunity offers to develop this waterway. There was some talk of the plan suggested by Charles A. McCormick of this city for building a dam which will provide sufficient water to make New Brunswick a real water front city, but no action of any sort was taken. After a short run back to Perth Amboy the trip was concluded.

All the members of the state board of navigation and men prominent in legislative circles as well as a number of representatives of newspapers in various parts of the state were in the party.

STEVENS ALUMNI IN PARADE.

Class of 1911, Arranged as "War Brides," Wins First Prize.

Hoboken, June 5.—A parade of the alumni featured class day at Stevens Institute of Technology in Hoboken. The class of 1911, costumed as "War Brides," took first prize; 1914, as "Wilson's Note Factory," was second, and 1912, representing "Ye Olde Mill," won honorable mention.

The commencement exercises will begin with a sermon by the Rev. Amos Shirley of Trinity Episcopal church, Seventh and Washington streets. The graduation exercises will take place tomorrow.

PRINCETON MEN TO TRAIN.

Nearly One-fourth of Students Will Do Summer Work.

Princeton, June 5.—Two hundred and fifty-six students of Princeton university have signified their intention of attending the military training encampment at Plattsburg. Other students are contemplating going on naval cruises, and it is estimated that nearly one-fourth of the students of the university will be engaged in some sort of military training during the summer.

Several students have signified their intention of taking up army aviation.

Kiddies Land Bare Fish.

Stone Harbor, June 5.—Miss Helen Krouse, ten years old, of Haddonfield, and John Westbrook, twelve years old, of Harrisburg, coaxed a forty pound angler fish near the House landing in the channel and with the help of two men got it ashore. It was shipped to the Academy of Natural Sciences, Philadelphia. The creature has practically a large pouch in two parts, one to hold its food, the other to digest it, and with mouth clean across the top, getting the name from fishermen of "all mouth."

Education Board Elects.

Trenton, June 5.—Joseph S. Freelinghuysen was elected president and Melvin A. Rice vice president of the state board of education, which also authorized a survey of the normal schools. The resignation of Professor John T. Walker, superintendent for seventeen years of the Trenton Deaf and Dumb school, was accepted to take effect on Aug. 1, and he was appointed supervising principal of the academic department of the school.

Marconi Going Back to Front.

Paris, June 5.—Guglielmo Marconi, the inventor of wireless telegraphy, passed through Paris on his return from London to Rome. He said he was going to the front for a few weeks and met all questions with the curt statement that he possessed no special information with regard to the Italian situation.

OLE THEOBALDI WILL PLAY HERE

Famous Norwegian to Be One of Community Chautauqua Musical Features.

VIOLIN 300 YEARS OLD

Instrument Was Made in Milan by Starving Violin Maker in 1502—Mme. Florence Alice Stilzel, Soprano, to Assist.

This violin, to be played in this city Chautauqua week by Ole Theobaldi, the great Norwegian violinist, is more than 300 years old and was valued in London in 1900 at $25,000. It is the famous Caspar da Salo violin and was made in Berzia by a starving violin maker and first exhibited in Feurini's Museum, the latter part of the sixteenth century. It remained in this museum for more than 200 years, and when the place was looted and burned by Napoleon's army it was carried away among other treasures and taken back to France by a Corsican sergeant. In time it fell into the hands of Ole Bull, who presented it to Theobaldi on the latter's return from his great world tour in 1889.

Theobaldi's work is decidedly spectacular, and he is said to be one of the strongest musical attractions appearing among the Chautauquas this season. He will appear here in the concert as one of the features of the five days' program and will be assisted by Mme. Florence Alice Stitzel, operatic soprano, and Mlle. Helen Kelere, piano virtuoso.

Other strong musical numbers announced are the American Quartet, and Clayton Conrad, O'Hara and Wetmore, the Dunbar Southern Singers and Chas. Frink, banjoist, and Victor's Florentine Band and Neapolitan Troubadours.

The lecture features are what the management calls "the backbone of the Chautauqua." These will include lectures by Lee Francis Lybarger, of the Philadelphia bar, on "The Community Conscience;" Arthur Delroy, of the New York Psychic Club, on "Character Development by Suggestion;" Frederick Warde on "Shakespeare and His Plays;" Dr. Euclid B. Rogers on "A Living or a Life," and Andre Tridon, Mexican War correspondent, on "An Inside View of Mexico."

The season tickets for the Chautauqua will be sold by a local committee and reduce the cost of hearing the ten programs to a few cents a number.

PARALYSIS IS FATAL TO DANIEL ALPAUGH

Daniel Alpaugh, a well-known local resident and engaged as a commission merchant in New York, died shortly after midnight this morning at his home, 135 East Sixth street. He had been ill about three weeks, following a paralytic stroke.

Mr. Alpaugh was born in this State fifty-three years ago and had resided in Plainfield since 1900. He was a member of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church, but had no lodge affiliations. Besides his wife, Mr. Alpaugh is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Fred Franbach, of Westfield; Mrs. G. S. Robbins, St. Louis, Mo., and Miss Florence Alpaugh, residing at home. The funeral will be held at the late home Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and will be in charge of the Rev. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent avenue church. Interment will be in Hillside cemetery.

HAROLD ACKERMAN'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Harold Ackerman whose death occurred Friday, was held yesterday afternoon at the home of his mother, Mrs. Michael Walsh, of 108 Liberty street. The service was in charge of the Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson and interment was made in the Methodist cemetery. Numerous floral tributes were presented by friends.

TEMPLE S. S. IN CLOSING PROGRAM

Many Prizes Given to Students in Exercises of Yesterday.

A good crowd attended the closing exercises and flower festival of the Sunday-school of Temple Sholem held yesterday afternoon in the Temple. The exercises were arranged by a school committee consisting of Mrs. William Newcorn, Mrs. Max Tepper, and Mrs. Gustave Mendel, and all pupils of the school participated. Teachers of the school are Mrs. Newcorn, Miss Marion Hyman, Miss Sadie Moskowitz, Miss Minnie Soloman and Miss Dorothy Sklarew.

After an organ selection by Miss Rae Prager, the opening prayer was offered by Miss Bessie Ox. The flower service was offered by the entire school, followed by a prayer by Miss Ruth Schwartz. Miss Lillian Kadish then recited a beautiful poem, after which four kindergarten children recited the morning and evening prayers. The children were Blanche Berger, Dora Goldstein, Gertrude Schlanger and Mildred Ox.

A short sketch, "The United Workmen," was much enjoyed by the audience. The participants were Murray Matthews, Charles Adelberg, Ishmael Sklarew, Jerome D. Newcorn, Milton Levene, Joseph Berger, Joseph Slonim, Harold Sklarew, Cecil Newcorn and Irving Salls. Original essays were read by Miss Pearl Genisman, Miss Celia Mann, Miss Dorothy Sklarew, Miss Pauline Fass and Miss Violet Berger. Recitations by Miss Sophie Schloss and Miss Ruth H. Schwartz and songs by Miss Celia Mann and Miss Ray Matthew were enjoyed. Master Cecil Newcorn rendered a violin solo, accompanied by Miss Pauline Fass.

A clever sketch, "A Bunch of Flowers," was creditably given by Bertha Levene, Gladys Sklarew, Frances Berger, Sophie Schloss, Ethel Levene, Mirian Schlanger and Ruth H. Schwartz.

One of the most pleasing features of the entire program was the May pole dance in which Celia Mann, Ruth H. Schwartz, Ray Matthew, Ethel Levene, Gladys Sklarew and Frances Bergen participated.

Prizes were awarded to the following members of the school: Class A. Dora Goldstein, Blanche Berger, Carl Adelberg, Gertrude Schlanger and Mildred Ox; Class B, Jerome Newcorn, Sophie Schloss, Ethel Levene and Gladys Sklarew; Class C. Cecil Newcorn, Celia Mann, Bertha Levene and Ruth Schwartz; Class D. Pauline Fass, Ruth Schwartz, Violet Berger and Harold Sklarew.

Credit was given to Mrs. William Newcorn for her faithful and efficient work in planning the exercises and making of them a success.

Miss Marion Hyman was presented with a handsome ring in appreciation of her services. Miss Minnie Solomon and Miss Sadie Moskowitz were presented with parasols. A book was presented to Dorothy Sklarew.

MRS. S. J. ROBINSON DIES AFTER SECOND OPERATION

Mrs. Elizabeth W. Robinson, wife of Samuel J. Robinson, and widely known throughout the city and borough, died on Saturday at her home, 744 West Third street. She had been ill during the past five months but, after submitting to a serious operation at the hands of Dr. Todd Helmuth, a New York specialist, she seemed to recover for a time. Recently her condition again became grave and Dr. Helmuth performed a second operation yesterday afternoon. She failed to rally and continued to sink steadily during the night.

Mrs. Robinson was a native of Elizabeth but had resided in Plainfield for the past thirty-five years, most of that time at the address where she died. She was fifty-six years old. Mrs. Robinson possessed many excellent qualities that won her many friends, and she enjoyed the utmost respect from all who knew her.

Beside her husband, Mrs. Robinson is survived by one daughter, Miss Edith Robinson, residing at home, and two sons, Joseph Robinson and Arthur Robinson, both of West Third street; also one sister, Mrs. Patrick Colohan, of Roselle. The funeral will be held at the late home tomorrow morning at 8:30 and in St. Mary's church at 9 o'clock. Burial will be in the family plot in Hillside cemetery.

PAYS $50 FOR ATTEMPT TO STEAL A BICYCLE

GERMAN LOSSES STILL GROWING

Eighteen Teuton Ships Destroyed, Says Admiralty.

KAISER'S FLEET ROUTED.

English Authorities Declare Reports Given Out by Berlin Are False—Tonnage Loss of Enemy as Great as That of Great Britain, Is Asserted.

London, June 5. — The following facts in regard to the great naval battle in the North sea have been positively established, according to the latest statement of the British admiralty:

The German reports of the battle are false.

The German losses were heavier than the British not merely in proportion, but positively.

The arrival on the scene of battle of the main body of the British high seas fleet was the signal for the German fleet to speed back to its base.

Prior to Sir John Jellicoe's arrival the German fleet had been severely punished. Sir John took up the pursuit. The two main fleets were repeatedly in momentary contact, but the German flight made it impossible for the British to bring their full force into play.

Darkness put a stop to the pursuit, and then the destroyer flotilla took up the chase and successfully attacked the kaiser's warships.

A German admiralty statement was received here asserting that the German fleet suffered no losses beyond those admitted in the official account.

German List Complete.

While the admiralty does not cite positive facts to support its assertion that the German losses were heavier than the British, it declares that "there seems to be the strongest ground for supposing" that the following units were lost by the Germans:

Two battleships.

Two Dreadnaught battle cruisers of the "most powerful type."

Two light cruisers of the latest type (Wiesbaden and Elbing).

One light cruiser of the Rostock (1912) type.

The light cruiser Frauenlob.

At least nine destroyers.

One submarine.

This makes a total of eight big ships, nine destroyers and one submarine, a grand total of eighteen vessels as against only six warships and eight destroyers, a total of fourteen vessels, admittedly lost by the British.

The German declaration that no further losses were suffered than those announced means that the kaiser's admiralty insists that the battle cost Germany only three big ships and a number of torpedo boats. The British announcement brings the German loss in tonnage—thus far asserted by Berlin to be only 49,000—up to or even beyond the British loss of 125,000 tons.

By way of emphasizing that the main body of the British grand fleet made a clean sweep of the North sea waters once it appeared on the scene, the British admiralty relates that Sir John Jellicoe, "having driven the enemy into port," returned to the main scene of the action and stayed there until noon on June 1, nearly twenty-four hours after the first shots had been exchanged on the previous afternoon, and searched the sea for disabled vessels. Finding none and having fulfilled his task, the British commander returned to his base, 400 miles away. On the following evening, the admiralty states, the British fleet was again ready to put to sea.

As to the British losses, the admiralty insists that there is nothing to add to or subtract from the previous enumeration of ships lost.

ARE LOYAL, SAY TEUTONS.

100,000 Gather to Proclaim Love For United States.

New York, June 5.—More than 100,000 American-Germans and American-Austro-Hungarians gathered at the Sheepshead Bay speedway to proclaim their loyalty and love as citizens of the United States. The hyphen, however, was not hidden. It was emphasized and praised as the tie that bound those of foreign origin to the land of their adoption.

The demonstration, which drew together probably the largest number of persons who ever assembled in one place under private auspices, was in denial of the charge that American citizens of Teutonic extraction have their hearts across the sea while their heads and hands seek material advantage in the United States. Those who have made this charge were buried under a blanket condemnation in a declaration of principles adopted by acclamation by the great throng.

Rockefeller Gives $789,980.

New York, June 5.—Announcement has been made that the general education board, one of the principal philanthropies of John D. Rockefeller, at its spring meeting had appropriated $789,980 to universities, colleges, schools, educational research and other activities included within the scope of the board's work. The appropriation of this sum brings the total appropriations by the board since it was founded in 1902 to $18,386,968.39. This latter amount was either appropriated outright or contributed toward total funds to be raised amounting in all to $64,903,000.

CAPTAIN H. H. MOTT DIES IN 86TH YEAR

Funeral Held at His Late Home on Grove Street the Borough, Today.

The funeral of Captain Henry Hart Mott, aged 86 years, will be held at his late home, 63 Grove street, North Plainfield, at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon. Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, will officiate and the burial will be in Hillside cemetery. Captain Mott died on Saturday following a long illness. He was born in New York city, where he spent most of his life, with the exception of a short time at Lakewood.

At the outbreak of the Civil War he became captain of the 57th N. Y. Volunteers, serving with distinction throughout the conflict. He was wounded several times. After the war he engaged in business at 42 Leonard street, New York, as an importer of woolens and white goods. He retired from business about thirty-five years ago.

Captain Mott was a member of the New York Commandery, Military Order Loyal Legion and a member of the Society of War Veterans, and the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church, New York. He removed to North Plainfield about five years ago, where he continued to live until his death. He is survived by a wife and two nephews, Charles and William Schaffner, both of New York city.

CHURCHMEN FAVOR WORLD WIDE PEACE

Seventh-Day Baptists Adopt Resolutions at Closing Session of Conference.

The following resolutions treating on world-wide peace were adopted at yesterday's meeting of the Eastern Association of the Seventh-Day Baptist church held from June 1 to 4, in the Seventh-Day Baptist church, this city.

The Eastern Seventh-Day Baptist Association at its annual meeting in Plainfield resolves first that we favor settling international pictures by arbitration, not war.

Second, that we are in sympathy with the effort of the Federal consul of the churches of Christ in America and similar organizations to promote international goodwill, friendship and brotherhood.

Thirdly, that we recommend to our general conference the appointment of a commission on International Peace whose duties shall be to spread its principles among our churches and to co-operate with similar commissions and organizations and see that copies of these resolutions be sent to Rev. Fred Lynch, secretary of the Federal conference, and Rev. Charles F. McFarlan, secretary of the World Alliance, and to the secretary of the Seventh-Day Baptist General Conference.

The following officers were elected for the next meeting of the association to be held at Shiloh:

President, Whitfield S. Bonham; vice president, George J. Schaivley; corresponding secretary, Miss Suse Harrin; recording secretary, Miss Lucy W. Campbell; treasurer, Arthur J. Spicer.

MISS GATES TO APPEAR IN RECREATION ENTERTAINMENT

The Public Recreation Committee has secured Miss Pauline M. Gates to present one of her artistic monologues at the entertainment in the Evergreen Avenue School Thursday evening, June 8. Miss Gates has been studying at Sargent School, in New York.

Among the four widows whose pensions will be reduced is Mrs. Sarah Scott, of 617 South Second street, this city. The pension which Mrs. Anna L. Cree, of this city, was receiving, will be revoked altogether.

MEXICO CITY IS NOW IN DANGER

Zapata Pressing His Attacks on Capital.

CARRANZA TO MOVE TROOPS

Constitutionalist General Ordered to Be in Readiness to Withdraw to the South—News Creates Consternation Along the Frontier and in Northern Mexico.

El Paso, Tex., June 5.—News from Mexico City that Emiliano Zapata and his forces are pressing their attacks hard against the Mexican capital created consternation along the Mexican border and throughout northern Mexico.

This was followed by confidential orders to the generals commanding Carranza forces to hold themselves in readiness to dispatch south any troops they can spare if called upon.

The action of the Zapatistas may result in the withdrawal of many of the Mexican troops recently rushed into northern Chihuahua ostensibly to put down banditry. This would greatly relieve the strain now existing between the United States and the Carranza government over the question of the withdrawal of American forces from Mexico.

General Gavira announced that any soldier of the Constitutional government attacking an American will be punished by death. As few Americans remain in Mexico except the American military forces, it is presumed that the order refers particularly to American troops and is designed to discourage Carranzistas against openly showing any animosity toward the Americans.

Carranzistas Change Attitude.

That the Carranza generals of northern Mexico have become reconciled to the fact that the American army is not to leave Mexico soon appears evident by the equanimity with which they and their troops view the shipment of large quantities of rations, road building material and camp equipment to the Pershing army. These supplies are being sent into Mexico every day, and the feeling that formerly was apparent among Mexican officers under similar conditions is not now apparent.

The withdrawal of the American force under Colonel Sibley, which entered Mexico south of the Big Bend region of Texas four weeks ago after the Glen Springs raid, has had a salutary effect upon the Mexicans. The fact that this expedition was withdrawn and the Pershing expedition allowed to remain has convinced the majority of the Mexicans that the United States did not quit the chase because of fear of consequences, but rather as showing its good faith in merely wishing to punish Mexican raiders and withdrawing when the punishment had been inflicted.

Though nothing has been made public regarding any further plots of border raiders, General Funston continues to take precautions. The coast artillery companies along the Southern Pacific railroad between here and San Antonio recently relieved by companies of the Texas militia have now been sent to stations along the International and Great Northern railroad between San Antonio and Laredo. Two batteries of artillery at San Antonio have been ordered to Eagle Pass and Laredo to relieve others, which will proceed to Douglas, Ariz., south of which in Sonora Carranza troops in large numbers are massing.

LOCAL INSURANCE BROKERS WILL ENTER A PROTEST

When the City Council meets tonight there will be presented a protest from the fire insurance brokers of the city against the practice of placing the city's insurance without of town representatives. The local agents believe that they should get a share of this business inasmuch as they are all taxpayers in Plainfield. The rule has been to give all the insurance to one man who places it with various companies in New York.

A Little Chat About Telephone Numbers

NO DOUBT you have noticed the way the telephone operator repeats the numbers you give her. When you ask for "Main two one four five," she repeats "Main two one—four five"—pausing just a fraction of a second between the hundreds and the tens.

Perhaps you have thought she was just being playful. She's too busy a young woman for that. There's a real reason for this practice.

The switchboard before which the telephone operator sits is honeycombed with tiny holes, each the termination of a subscriber's line. These holes are in sections of one hundred each. To locate "2145," the operator first finds the "twenty-first" section labelled "21" and then the 45th hole in that section.

Tests have proved that this new method of repeating numbers and of passing them from operator to operator, tends to prevent mistakes and helps the operator in speeding up your call by making it easier to locate the required number on the switchboard.

Perhaps you will find in this a suggestion for your own adoption. You can help the operator in her efforts to give you quicker service by adopting this new style of calling telephone numbers.

Next week we're going to talk to you about the gentle art of listening.

DUNELLEN METHODISTS OBSERVE ANNIVERSARY

Reunion of Former Pastors Will Bring the Event to a Close Tonight.

The celebration of the semi-centennial of the Methodist Episcopal church of Dunellen, which will end tonight, commenced at 10:30 o'clock yesterday morning, when Rev. Dr. James William Marshall, superintendent of the New Brunswick District of the New Jersey Conference, who was pastor of the church from 1873 to 1875, delivered the sermon to a crowded church. In the afternoon at 2:30 o'clock the Sunday-school held a rousing rally. Frederick A. Pope, of Somerville, delivered the address at this occasion. His subject was "Master Builders." Speaking of mothers during the course of his address Mr. Pope caused numerous of the elderly persons in the assembly to burst out in tears. At the 7:30 service in the evening Walter Wesley Winans, pastor of the M. E. church of Hempstead, L. I., who did his first preaching in the Dunellen church, delivered the sermon to an even larger congregation than was present at the morning service.

Frederick J. Hubach, superintendent of the Elizabeth District, will be the presiding clergyman at the final ceremonies this evening, when there will be a reunion of the former pastors followed by a social hour.

NEW EDIFICE USED FOR THE FIRST TIME

Pleasing Services Are Held in the Netherwood Reformed Church.

Yesterday was one of the greatest days in the history of the Netherwood Reformed church, the new church building, although not entirely completed, being used. At 9:45 a. m., the Sunday-school met in the old building and marched into the new one, singing "Onward Christian Soldiers."

At the morning service, the building was filled. Thirty-six new members were received, thirteen by letter and twenty-three on confession. The communion service was beautiful and impressive. At the afternoon service another large audience was present.

The pastor, Rev. Edward S. Ralston, preached an appropriate sermon from the text, "He showed them a large upper room furnished." An offertory solo was sunk by Mrs. Joseph Edgar.

132 NEW MEMBERS RECEIVED.

The largest communion service in the history of Trnity Reformed church was held yesterday morning when Rev. J. Y. Broek, the pastor, received 132 new members. Of this number, 104 came on confession and 28 by letter, while there were 27 adult baptisms.

COMMENCEMENT SPEAKER.

Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, of Watchung, pastor of the Madison Avenue Baptist church, New York, will make the commencement address at the Clinton High School, Newark, June 22.

MANY ENTER TENNIS TITLE TOURNAMENT

Good Playing the Rule on Plainfield Country Club Courts This Morning.

ANNUAL MEMORIAL SERVICE CONDUCTED BY JR. O. U. A. M.

According to their annual custom, the members of the Jr. O. U. A. M. Councils of Plainfield held their memorial service at Hillside cemetery yesterday afternoon. There was a large attendance of Juniors, there being about 125 from the local councils. The service was held over the grave of a late member of Franklin Council. Guy D. Peck was the master of ceremonies, and Rev. C. S. Gillespie, pastor of Grace M. E. church, North Plainfield, made the memorial address and prayer.

In his address, Mr. Gillespie took occasion to comment on the principles of the order and extol the virtues of the departed memmbers. The Uniformed Rank of the order also turned out in good numbers. The trip to and from the cemetery was made by special trolleys.

RICHMOND RITTERBUSH AWARDED FIRST PRIZE

Richmond Ritterbush, of the Plainfield High School, was awarded first prize, last Friday night, in the Union county oratorical contest held in the Battin High School, Elizabeth.

Joseph Gallagher, also a student in the Plainfield High School, was awarded first honors in the preliminary competition held two weeks ago but was unable to compete Friday night because of illness. The Plainfield students' subjects were as follows: "The Importance of the Panama Canal in War," Warren Mumford, and "The Withdrawal of American Troops from Mexico," Richmond Ritterbush.

FUNERAL OF E. S. BAUGHAN.

The funeral of Edward S. Baughan, whose death occurred Friday afternoon after a long illness, was held yesterday afternoon at his late home on Watchung avenue. The service was conducted by Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong. Burial was in Hillside cemetery.

A CALL FOR TUTTLE.

Theodore Roosevelt is not the only American for whom an office seems to be calling. There is in the air a growing sentiment for ex-Congressman Tuttle to again take the field, and this has begun to find its way into newspapers in the form of editorial demands.

The Hackettstown Gazette recently had this to say: "Ex-Congressman Tuttle will undoubtedly be drafted by his party to make the Congressional fight in the Morris-Union district. The district is too strongly Republican to invite a contest in the minority party and there will be State-wide interest in the return of Mr. Tuttle. No man in the Jersey delegation accomplished more or better results and none stood higher in the confidence of the administration. He carried the district twice and lost the last time by less than a thousand votes. This is one of the most important districts of the State and the public realize that they are practically without representation under party government."

The Dover Index echoes the call. It says: "This district needs a man of Mr. Tuttle's strength and ability to accomplish things for the benefit of the people, as he demonstrated with the Democratic majority during the two terms he was at Washington, while Mr. Capstick (Rep.), who is now there, being in the minority party, has not been able to do anything of importance and has been placed on unimportant committees. If the Democrats of this district desire to elect a Congressman next fall, Mr. Tuttle is the man to name for this office and he will certainly do his level best, fairly and squarely, to succeed.

"By sending Mr. Tuttle back to Congress to represent this district the voters will find themselves represented by a man who will stand by the President and be for Preparedness in all things, as this great nation of one hundred millions of people should always be from now on to the end. Mr. Tuttle has been tried and not found wanting in the genuine scope of public affairs. This is a guarantee that he would never be guilty of voting against the United States Government or the President in the face of any foreign power."

The demand of Republicans, of the individual voters who make up the Republican party, is for either Roosevelt or Hughes as an opponent for Wilson. Conservative estimates are that more than seven out of eight men, and women, who are to be represented at the Chicago convention, which opens Wednesday, will express a preference for one of these two men, and yet the avowed intention of the convention delegates is to beat both of them. Under the avaricious leadership of Root, Penrose, Barnes and others of the Old Guard a "stampede-proof" convention has been organized—the delegates are said to by men who will refuse to be moved by oratory and demonstration, but will calmly vote according to orders. This means that they are to be deaf to the voice of the people. If Roosevelt wins the nomination it will be the greatest victory of his career, and will mean that the popular approval of his candidacy has grown so strong that delegates choose to defy the bosses rather than defy the people back home. If not Roosevelt, the convention must nominate Hughes, or go down in history as a repetition of the "steal of 1912."

On another page of today's Press will be found inviting pictures of the boys' camp under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. of New Jersey. Here is the proper place for your boy to spend his vacation, or a part of it. He will be associated with healthy, live youngsters of his age, who will play under the leadership of Christian young men high of idea and strong of purpose. The camp is not only a place of amusement and recreation, but one in which young bodies and young minds are strengthened for the real battles of life—that of the body against disease and death, and that of the soul against sin and destruction.

The Germans have gained much by their spectacular and costly battle with the British fleet. They did not materially cripple their enemy, nor curtail England's control of the seas, but claims of victory were received in all of Germany with riotious enthusiasm and the hope and faith of the people who must bear the burdens of the war is greater than for many months, and victory will come to the nation whose people have the greatest courage in the last years of the struggle.

Newark, N. J., June 5.—When Mrs. Goldie Fink is placed on trial today for assaulting a police officer with a cleaver in her butcher shop, her brother will not be on the jury. When the case came to trial a few weeks ago, the prosecution had presented its case before Judge Martin received information that the foreman of the jury was a brother of the defendant.

Douglas Fairbanks, Starring in Triangle Play, "The Good Bad Man."

AT PROCTOR'S TOMORROW.

Tremont Theatre, Boston, in the nineties by Charles Frohman, and later made a record run at the Madison Square Garden in New York. The director, Frank Lloyd, has managed to get all out of the side-splitting incidents of the original piece and, further, he has shown an adroitness in putting in touches from time to time which were only hinted at in the one play of the season which was the only formidable competitor for public favor with "Charley's Aunt," a farce which had such a tremendous run in New York City. "Jane" is a veritable laugh-provoker and ought to please the most exacting motion-picture goers. In addition, today, the fifth episode of "The Mysteries of Myra" is shown, with Jean Southern and Howard Estabrook assuming the leading roles. Tomorrow, Douglas Fairbanks appears in the exceptional Triangle success, "The Good Bad Man," a photoplay which might be termed a dashing, old-fashioned, new-fangled thriller. Douglas Fairbanks appears with all his enthusiasm, his personality and individuality and his swift-moving action, and proves to be a good bad man with a reason. He seeks excitement, courts danger, risks his life—all to satisfy the cravings of a worried brain. He is afraid of his own thoughts—of the past and what the future holds in store for him. Not until he finds there is no foundation for his fears is there peace, and he hastens back to the girl of his heart to claim her for his own. A delightful photoplay, indeed, bearing all the earmarks of wholesome entertainment without a taint of suggestiveness. Mack Swain also appears tomorrow in "His Bitter Pill." Keystone comedy, and the fourteenth episode of "Mary Page" is also presented. On Wednesday, Theda Bara appears in "The Eternal Sapho, a story of studio and fashionable life, and despite the fact that Miss Bara must by now be acquainted with every possible mood and expression of her usual parts, she is as convincing here as ever, and, more than that, seems to bring a certain freshness and originality to her work. The fifteenth episode of "The Iron Claw" will be an added feature on Wednesday.

DOES THIS MEAN TIRE TROUBLE?

Plainfield Theatre.

One of the bright spots in the new program of vaudeville for the first half of next week at the Plainfield Theatre will be the Carman trio, appearing in "A Day in the Harem." This production has proved a great success wherever played and is bound to make a hit with local theatregoers. Cannon and Wood present another feature in the form of stunts on a bound tranpoline. This act is made up of a number of thrilling moves and the performers are a pair of the best that have visited Plainfield.

The other numbers on the program included Robb and Robertson in "The Boob and the Lady"; Lew Harris in a comedy skit; Lillian Floyd, vaudeville's daintiest ingenue; and "The Little Immigrant," with Joe Kaine and Lew Krause.

The last episode of the Mary Page feature film will be shown this afternoon and tonight.

DR. EATON HISSED IN N. Y. ADDDESS

Y. M. C. A. Meeting is Scene of Lively Incident When Man Walks Out.

One man walked out of the audience during the address of the Rev. Charles A. Eaton at the West Side Y. M. C. A. in New York yesterday, after denouncing the remarks of the speaker as an outrage, and some of those in the audience cheered the interrupter and hissed the speaker. Dr. Eaton again bitterly denounced the administration policies of President Wilson. The subject of his address was "Pacifist or Militarist, Must We Choose Between Them?" He said he was tired of this country's "day to day policy of opportunism, of let-aloneism, and of watchful waiting."

"When the Lusitania sank," he continued, "a man told me, as if in extenuation of the loss of life of American women and children, that they had been warned. I say, who has the right to warn our citizens save their own Government? If we had been of the same calibre as our fathers the world would have trembled at that act, for the world would have known that the United States would have turned the world upside down, and thrown it into chaos if necessary to avenge the slaying of our people."

At this point there was obvious unrest among his hearers, and one rose and asked Dr. Eaton what he would have been had he been President Wilson when the Lusitania warnings were published.

"I would have ordered Count Von Bernstorff, if he were the author of those warnings," said Dr. Eaton, striding down the aisle amid applaus and hisses, "to withdraw them before night or I would have asked for his recall."

The dissenter at this turned to the audience.

"This is an outrage," he said, "that this man is allowed to come into this building as he did and talk about our President."

Dr. Eaton appealed to the meeting to know if it was not too bad a man could not voice his private convictions without having some one quarrel with him about it. A few hissed the speaker and applauded his opponent as the latter took his hat and walked away.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

The Bible class supper will be served in the association this evening at 6:30.

Miss Aller's Bible class will meet for study at 7 o'clock, and the Plainfield Business [illegible] Association will meet tonight [illegible] o'clock.

The swimming classes will meet in the High School pool from 8 to 9 o'clock.

Tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock the women's Bible class will meet for study with Miss Aller.

RECORD ATTENDANCE AT GRACE M. E. CHURCH

Yesterday witnessed a record attendance at the communion service in Grace M. E. church. About fifty new members partook of the sacrament for the first time, among which a large percentage of men was noticeable. The pastor, Rev. C. S. Gillespie, has always appealed very strongly to the men of the church, an evidence of which is seen in the large men's Bible class he conducts in the Sunday-school.

The evening service was well attended and the favorite Tabernacle songs were sung. Dr. Raymond V. Brokaw, who has recently returned from Serbia, assisted the pastor during the service. All the men of the church and congregation are asked to get together in the church tomorrow night. W. D. Murray will address the gathering and a social hour will follow.

ELABORATE PLANS FOR T. A. B. S. RECEPTION

The entertainment committee of the T. A. B. Society has made elaborate arrangements for the euchre and shirt waist reception to be given under the club's auspices on Friday night, June 9, in the T. A. B. S. hall on West Fourth street. The first event of the evening will be the euchre games. There will be sufficient tables to accommodate everyone and in order to make the interest more keen many valuable prizes will be offered winners. At the close of play, the tables and chairs will be cleared away for dancing, which will continue until a late hour. Refreshments will be served during the entire evening.

RECREATION NOTES

The West End Community Center will hold its last business meeting of the season this evening in the Washington School. Reports on the work of the past year will be given and plans for next year discussed.

The Athenians and Zephyrs are to meet in the High School gymnasium tomorrow night. The Zephyrs are to hold a business meeting and elect officers for the coming year. Plans for next season will be made and the manager of the basketball team will be elected and instructed to arrange a schedule of games for next year. All members are urged to be present.

KNIGHTS ATTEND SERVICE AT ST. MARY'S CHURCH

The forty hours devotion services were held in St. Mary's church yesterday morning at 11 o'clock, when a solemn high mass was celebrated by the Rev. Joseph McDonald, assisted by Rev. Walter J. Hennessey, deacon and a Passionist father who acted as sub-deacon. The sermon was preached by the pastor, the Rev. Father Bogan, and the Fourth Degree Knights of Columbus, in full dress, assisted in the ceremonies, forming a bodyguard for the Blessed Sacrament as it was taken in procession and in recession through the church.

The closing exercises of the forty hours' devotion will be held on Tuesday morning, when a solemn high mass will be celebrated at 9 o'clock.

FOUR DOOMED AS TRAITORS.

Hungarian Czech Leaders Sentenced to Pay Extreme Penalty.

Vienna, June 5.—Four members of the Hungarian Czech party have been found guilty of high treason and espionage and sentenced to death.

The men are Dr. Kramersch, leader of the Young Czechs, and Dr. Rosenhain, a deputy in the diet, who were found guilty of high treason, and Herr Zamasol, bookkeeper, and Herr Cervinka, editorial secretary of the newspaper Narodny Listy, who were accused of espionage.

The four were charged with leading a movement to bring about a rapprochement between Bohemia and Russia. Herr Kramersch has repeatedly been to Petrograd in connection with the movement.

MICHIGAN STANDS ACID TEST

Employers Answer Wilson by Signing For Training Camps.

Detroit, Mich., June 5.—Employers of Detroit have determined to answer President Wilson's threat to apply the acid test to the business men of the country on the question of preparedness.

Already eighty-one local firms have asserted their willingness in a signed agreement to allow their employees to go to summer training camps without loss of pay or prejudice to their advancement. Many Grand Rapids firms also have signed the agreement.

Kansan Planned His Own Funeral.

Wichita, Kan., June 5.—J. S. Eccleston, seventy-six, a wealthy resident of Fowler, Kan., who died recently, left his own obituary and a will directing his funeral arrangements. Mr. Eccleston directed that he be buried on Sunday and that the pastor take the text from the fourteenth chapter of John, both of which suggestions were adopted.

Brandeis on Bench.

Washington, June 5.—Louis D. Brandeis took his place on the supreme court bench beside Associate Justice Hughes.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

How a Fox Became a Fine Young Prince.

The Fox Turned Into a Prince.

[Adapted from Grimm's Fairy Tales.]

"A LAD who set out to find a gold bird for his king," daddy began the bedtime story, "was fortunate enough to make friends with a fox, who helped him also find a gold horse and a lovely princess, which he had to give up to his king, who promised to give the lad the gold bird. But on the way to the castle they met two rogues who were going to be hanged and who turned out to be the lad's own brothers. 'Can nothing save them?' cried the lad. The people told him he must buy their freedom.

"So the lad paid what the people asked, and his brothers set out for home along with him. Now, the day was very hot, and as they came to the woods where the fox had first met them they sat down by a brook to rest. The lad had forgotten that the fox had warned him not to sit down by a brook, you see, and while he thought of no harm his robber brothers crept up behind him, threw him down the bank, took the princess, the horse and the gold bird and rushed home to the king. 'See,' they cried; 'all this we have won for you!'

"Then the king made a feast, and the two brothers were welcomed home. But the gold horse would not eat, the gold bird would not sing, and the lovely princess would do nothing but sit by herself in her chamber and weep.

"Now, what had happened to the youngest son, the lad who had found the bird? He fell to the bottom of the brook his brothers threw him in. No bones were broken, but the banks were so high he could not crawl out. As he was wondering what would become of him he glanced up, and there stood his friend, the fox. 'As foolish as you have been not to follow my advice I cannot bear to leave you in that brook bed. Grab a hold of my brush!'

"When the lad once more stood on the bank safe the fox said, 'Your brothers have set a watch to kill you if you go home.' So the lad dressed himself as a poor piper and went to the king's court playing on his pipe. But he was scarcely inside the gates when the gold horse began to eat, the gold bird began to sing, and the beautiful princess stopped weeping. The lad walked straight to the king and told him his brothers' roguery. The king had them locked up and gave the princess to the lad, who, after the king's death, married her and became the king.

"Soon after his marriage he met the fox walking in the woods. With tears in his eyes the fox begged the new king to cut off his head and his brush. When the king did this it appeared that the fox turned into a prince, who was the princess' own brother. A spiteful fairy had once changed him into a fox, and the spell was only broken by some one getting the gold bird and cutting off the fox's head and brush," daddy ended.

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

Mrs. Mertage Is Confident Her Daughter Could Have "Done Better," Speaking Matrimonially.

"This is a note from Mrs. Jack Forsyth, asking us to come down for the week end. You know I told you about meeting them at a picnic in the woods. They have an elegant touring car. I imagine they live in good style and I think you would enjoy visiting them." Ethel tossed the note to her mother.

"Jack has been entertained at our house many times. I should like to go. Just write and say I am visiting here and that of course will bring me an invitation. Can Ralph get away for Saturday?" There had been a decided coolness between Mrs. Mertage and her son-in-law since the evening when she had tried to interfere in his business affairs.

"Oh, he can come down Saturday afternoon or evening and we can go on the early train Saturday. I am crazy to know what kind of a home they have." Ethel reached for the note again. "Her stationery is good, but nothing fancy."

"You might have married that fellow if you had worked it right. I am sure he was very much in love with you at one time." Mrs. Mertage's tone was discontented.

"Oh, I could never have loved him as I do Ralph," said Ethel, determined to make her mother think everything was all right. "Besides, he was not rich when I knew him."

Mrs. Mertage sniffed. "If you are anything like your mother, you cannot long continue to love a man who fails to provide properly for you. You cannot respect him, and respect is necessary to love," she replied.

"Oh, I respect Ralph; everyone must. He is a good business man and has risen rapidly——"

"Oh, it is all very well for you to stand up for him; a good wife should. I always stood up for your father (she did not say against whom), but in your heart you know you might have done better."

"Don't, mother," pleaded Ethel.

"I guess you are right. It is of no use to discuss disagreeable truths."

This was a common expression of Mrs. Mertage, yet it was the one thing she was always doing. "Rubbing it in," her husband called it.

"What will you wear?" asked the mother, after a pause.

"Oh, my traveling suit; I have nothing else," came dispiritedly from the daughter.

"While you are down there, it will be a good time to buy a fall suit. You certainly need it.

"I can't. I have no money and it will be of no use to ask Relph. Last month's money is all gone and pay day is a week off."

"Get it charged," advised the mother. "You certainly could pay for it before Ralph found it out, and if he did find out let him know you intend to have what you need. He may as well get used to the fact that you propose to be decently clothed."

"I know no one to use reference——"

"Why, the Forsyths," interrupted Mrs. Mertage. "You could say you came unprepared to get the suit and had found exactly what you wanted and feared it would be gone, etc. That is easy to manage. I would buy it for you only I have had hard work to get money for this trip. Times are hard, John says."

"I could let Ralph think you gave it to me and so give myself a chance to get the money together later," said Ethel hopefully. The main thing was to get the suit and have no scene at the time. "Sufficient unto the day is the trouble thereof," she repeated in extenuation of her deceit.

"Of course, that is just the thing," agreed her mother.

London, June 5.—The Austrian war office announces a further advance in the Arsiero-Asiago region, south of Monte Cencio, and also northeast of the mountain, where they announce the capture of the town of Cesuna, about half way between Arsiero and Asiago, a little south of the Val d'Assa. The operations gave the Austrians 5,000 prisoners, the Austrian statement says.

APPROVES GLYNN AND JAMES

Wilson Wires McCombs Concerning Chairman of National Convention.

Washington, June 5.—Approval of the selection of ex-Governor Martin H. Glynn of New York as temporary chairman and indorsement of United States Senator Ollie M. James of Kentucky for permanent chairman of the Democratic national convention at St. Louis were expressed in a telegram from President Wilson to William F. McCombs, chairman of the national committee. Secretary Tumulty gave out the message. It follows:

Hon. William F. McCombs, St. Louis:

I have heard with gratification of the selection of Martin H. Glynn as temporary chairman. A strong body of opinion, with which I concur, centers on Ollie James for permanent chairman. I would be gratified by his selection.

WOODROW WILSON.

Senator James was permanent chairman of the Baltimore convention, which nominated President Wilson. There have been few instances in the Democratic party of the same man presiding over two consecutive national conventions.

ITALIANS THREATEN PASTOR.

Rope Carried by Angry Denver Folk, Likened to East Siders.

Denver, June 5.—Because he had given out a statement that the inhabitants of the Italian quarter in Denver lived "in squalor equal to that of the east siders in New York," the Rev. Francesco P. Sulmonetti, pastor of the Methodist Italian mission, was threatened by a mob of 2,500 angry Italian men and women. For four hours the pastor was barricaded in his church while the angry crowd circulated outside, armed with clubs and provided with a rope with which they threatened to lynch him.

The minister was finally rescued and escorted to safety by the police in answer to the request and intervention of a committee of Italian citizens and Bishop Francis P. McConnell of the Methodist church.

GLIMPSES OF CAMP LIFE AT LAKE WAWAYANDA WHERE Y. M. C. A. BOYS WILL SPLASH THIS SUMMER

Chapel Service

Charles R. Scott, Camp Director.

The Popular Ferry and the Lodge.

Camp on Island and Lake Activities

With the advent of mild weather, there is coming the call of "Back to Nature" to the boys who expect to spend time in the camps of the Y. M. C. A. this summer. With the season hardly upon them, the officials are already being swamped with applications for membership, and it is expected that this season will prove a banner one for attendance. On the shores of Lake Wawayanda, the site of the pioneer camp of the association, there will be more tents than ever before, and, according to reports from a number of districts, every camp in New Jersey will be crowded.

The State camp will be conducted on the shores of Lake Wawayanda. The registration has exceeded all previous records for May 1, which was the opening registration day, 234 reservations were made, and it was reported at the State office today that it now reaches 421, with only a few vacancies. Charles R. Scott, the State secretary for boys' work, will serve as director for the sixteenth season, and he will have associated with him fifty or more men as leaders of tent groups, as well as superintendents for different departments. W. H. McNair, a teacher in the Woodbridge High School and captain for two seasons of the lifeguards at Ocean Grove, will be the associate director. James Valentine, Jr., of Glen Ridge, will serve as camp clerk. J. Edward Sproul, of Passaic, will be the secretary; Dr. W. Roy Thompson, of Philadelphia, the physician and also instructor in first aid to the injured. The social work will be in charge of Arner L. Terwilliger, of Ridgewood. Ralph P. Denman, of Irvington, will be a leader in the physical work and athletics. The buglers will be Herbert McNair, of Woodbridge, and Roland Tailby, Highland Park. Ralph D. Fisher, of Pennsylvania State College, will have charge of the nature study work, and Kenneth Wilson will be responsible for keeping the records for the Wawayanda "W." A postoffice will be established for the first time at Wawayanda Lake this summer and Walter L. Molineux of Metuchen will be the postmaster.

The educational features of the camp will include the summer vacation school, where more than 100 boys have been helped in their studies. Dr. J. A. Corlies, of Newark, principal of the Cranford High School, will be the principal and E. S. Griffin, of Hamilton College, will assist. Last year forty subjects were taught, including preparation for college examinations. The life-saving work will be under the supervision of George G. Hegan, of South Orange, who won the Mills Cup for faithfulness in this work a year ago.

Camping with boys in New Jersey has received the hearty approval of parents, and each year the number of boys attending increases so that many additional camps have been organized. The first local camp was conducted by the Trenton association, and this year it will pitch tents on Marshall Island in the Delaware, and Walter L. Hughes will be the director. Camden soon followed, naming its encampment after the president of the association and chairman of the State committee, F. Wayland Ayer. Camp Ayer is located at Cold Spring, Pa., on Lake Comey, and H. G. Mann will be in charge. The next camp to be established was for the boys from the rural communities, which has appealed to hundreds of boys who live on the farm. It is a southern county camp known as Camp Ockanickon, and will be located on the shore of Brindle Lake, Ocean county, about three miles from New Egypt. Harry Hedley Smith will serve as camp director. Camp Kiamesha was next organized for the boys of the city of Newark, and is located on their ideal tract of 250 acres of woodland in the heart of the Blue Ridge Mountains in Sussex county. George S. Yaple is the camp director and reports an excellent enrolment of the boys of the city. A second camp for country boys was next found necessary, and is operated for the lads of Hunterdon, Morris and Somerset counties. It is beautifull located on Cranberry Lake and Alton C. Roberts is in charge.

Even the boys at the summer resorts are interested in camp life in the mountains. For several years the Atlantic City Association has conducted a camp, and this year it will be located at Byram, on the Delaware River, and will be known as Camp-Ho-Mita-Koda. The Morristown boys will pitch their tent on the shores of Barnegat Bay.

Plainfield will send its usual large number of boys to the camp this summer. There is room for a few more in the last section, which goes August 10 and returns August 24. Physical Director Meermans is in charge of arrangements. More leaders are also needed.

ASKS RICH TO CURB LUXURY

London War Savings Committee Refers to Motoring and Petrol.

London, June 5.—The national war savings committee has issued another and extremely urgent appeal to the nation, especially to the wealthier classes, to observe the strictest economy, pointing out the "appalling responsibility" of prolonging the war by indulging in luxury.

The committee especially refers to the question of motorcars and petrol.

MORE MARINES TO HAITI.

Daniels Orders Another Regiment to Re-enforce Caperton's Forces.

Washington, June 5.—To properly handle the situations in Haiti and Santo Domingo, where there is already a brigade of United States marines, Secretary Daniels has ordered the Fourth regiment of marines from San Diego, Cal., to Haiti for use under the direction of Rear Admiral Caperton either in that country or Santo Domingo as occasion demands.

American marines and bluejackets are now occupying Santo Domingo City and Puerta Plata, in the Dominican republic, and stationed at various points throughout Haiti. The force of marines on the island now aggregate 2,000 men and includes the First and Second regiments of marines and the marine artillery battalion.

SAYS HOT WATER EACH DAY KEEPS THE DOCTOR AWAY

Drink glass of hot water before breakfast to wash out the poisons.

Life is not merely to live, but to live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, look well. What a glorious condition to attain, and yet how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone prosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatism; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store which will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.—Adv.

Raking 'Em Over

By "JINKS"

CONFIDENCE EVEN AMONG THE ROOTER ELEMENT.

You've got to hand it to those North Plainfield High School baseball enthusiasts for keenness of vision. Forty-eight hours before the staging of Saturday's interscholastic title match the fair sex of that institution had laid plans for a celebration commemorating the coming of the championship cup to the borough. The athletic leaders of the male sex put the finishing touches on the arrangements by trimming the rival crew in easy shape and swept the boards for the triumphal festival Saturday evening. But who among us would not have been surprised if the "Canadians" fell down and if Plainfield had succeeded in turning the tables? True, we'd all like to see another of those rip-snorting rubber tilts between the rival institutions again this year, but the initial setto showed North Plainfield to be such an overwhelming favorite that a victory for the Red and Blue in the second engagement would probably have awakened the old cry of "fixers." North Plainfield had the decision coming to them and turned the trick without prolonging the pain.

• • • • • •

BOROUGHITES WERE POOR; PLAINFIELD WAS POORER.

Without detracting from the merits of North Plainfield's victory the solution to the league title fight this year rested with the boroughites simply because they were the better of two poor teams. Plainfield's nine fell far short of establishing the reputation of its predecessors, North Plainfield was equally off-color in this respect. This year's pitching material in both institutions was the best part of both teams, but at the same time it failed to measure up to the standard set by that of the past. Neither team was up to par in fielding and both were sadly lacking in ability as all-around baseball combines. North Plainfield won because it did not fall to as low a level as Plainfield, but nevertheless the victory is just as sweet to the present-day schoolboys and they deserve all the credit that may be passed their way.

• • • • • •

TEMPTATION TO PROLONG SERIES WAS STRONG.

Credit must be given the respective aggregations, however, for culminating the race at the earliest possible moment. The temptation to prolong a series, especially in an instance of this kind where a financial harvest is at stake in a rubber tilt and where one team is so far superior to the other, is one hard to resist. Plainfield held the upper hand in the initial part of the fray and North Plainfield could have passed victory along to the localites without fear of having the trick discovered. But they didn't.

• • • • • •

One of the prominent features of every borough triumph is the parade which invariably follows. As this is being written seventy-five North Plainfield High School pupils, girls as well as fellows, are passing along the muddy middle of North avenue carrying torches and tooting horns, indicative of a victory. Such a display of school spirit shows just how dear at heart the pupils hold the athletic interests of the school and it is commendable to say the least.

• • • • • •

Phil Daab who managed Plainfield's baseball interests in 1905, tells among other things some yarns about Warry McLaughlin's appearance in the role of a mound opponent to local ball nines. "Mac" has never gotten over the malady, he's still at it hurling them across for Dunellen against everything that we can find to send down that way. Oft-times we have stopped to ponder and wonder just how Warry, a Plainfield bred youngster of forty odd years, could have the heart to do some of the things he has been credited with at the expense of Plainfield ball clubs.

Have you noticed how the City League teams steer clear of Parker Field? Only last Saturday the Hope Chapel and Farmer teams were offered the playground lot for their contest but accepted the West End avenue field instead. Some have declared that the leaguers find more excuses for erratic performances on poor playing grounds but we've been given to understand that league followers find Parker Field too far out of the way and demand that their favorites stage the contests nearer the business section. Parker Field has a diamond that is the equal of any in the State and it's a pity some team doesn't put it to good use.

Plainfield High School girls are being instructed in the various methods of diving. Let's hope this is as far as the course goes for if they ever start to teach "dipping," the wives of the future will have it on to their present-day representatives forty different ways when it comes to giving their husband's pockets the "once-over" during sleeping hours.

• • • • • •

Speaking of feminine aquaties it might be well for North Plainfield to install a swimming tank and institute a course if they expect to chalk up any more baseball victories on cloudy afternoons, for the fair marchers in Saturday night's demonstration were called upon to wade through puddles that transformed white regalia into that of the "poke-a-dot" variety (or something of that sort.)

• • • • • •

Those organizing the Union County High School Athletic League are keeping their activity well covered up for fear that Brooks, Lukens and the three Armstrong brothers, who pastimed as Rahway High School representatives for thirty-three years, more or less, will hear the glad tidings and come back. Since this veteran quintet was turned loose from Rahway the High School at that place has been forced to hustle to keep apace of its county rivals.

Now that boxing has been legalized in Jersey it might be well to suggest a post-season ring tournament for certain City Leaguers who have been squabbling among themselves during a number of the contests staged to date.

• • • • • •

"Willie" Keeler, "Rube" Oldring, "Dave" Fultz, and some other big leaguers might have pastimed around Plainfield in days gone by but no one of them has ever been accused of trying to bust up a letter carriers' convention by running a bargain day bill as the City League promoters did on Decoration Day.

Councilman John Cose was one of those individuals charged with hiking over to Hyde Oval Saturday afternoon. Mr. Cose blew back in a heat after the sixth inning with the announcement that North Plainfield High School had collected a half dozen runs. "That isn't always enough to win a ball game," one of his friends remarked. "No, but it'll make a big difference in the results," replied the councilman.

BOROUGHITES WAKEN FROM SLUMBER AND WIN INTERSCHOLASTIC TROPHY

Plainfield High School Started With a Rush That Proved Too Speedy—Before Locals Caught "Second Wind" Dilts Had Registered 17 Strikeouts—Davidson Opened Well But Was Accorded Discouraging Support—One Big Inning Turned the Trick.

After being five runs behind, North Plainfield High School gave an exhibition of surmounting difficulties by scoring eight runs in the third and fourth innings of the second interscholastic contest Saturday afternoon on Hyde Field, the boroughites finally defeating Plainfield High School, 9—6, thus winning the interscholastic championship of the city in two consecutive games.

In the first inning Semer, as leadoff man for P. H. S., secured a hit and dented the pan after two were out on a triple by Apgar, the last-named scoring on an error by Van Mater. The red-and-blue upholders were not satisfied, but collected three more in the third, thus giving them a lead of five runs.

The outlook was dubious for the boroughites for a time, but in the last half of the same session they broke the ice and narrowed the margin down to three runs. After Dawe had been thrown out, Van Mater walked and stole second, tallying the initial run, when Townley doubled. McDonough proceeded to make things interesting by slamming another double into the left field section.

The next inning the borough batters completely massacred the delivery of Davidson. Six hits were bunched, which were intermingled with an ascension trip by the visiting aggregation. After the dust had blown away, six N. P. H. S. players had crossed the plate.

A large crowd witnessed the contest, which was not without thrills. Fine batting and excellent twirling featured. For the first three innings Dilts did not appear to have complete mastery over his delivery, lacking his usual speed. The fourth inning showed a complete reversal of form. During the last six innings he fanned two batsmen every inning, striking out the entire side in the seventh. Nine hits were collected from his delivery, six of which came in the first three sessions, while seventeen men fanned.

Excluding the fourth inning, Davidson pitched fine ball, eight of his opponents being retired on strikeouts. With better support, the city twirler would have had a better score.

CHAPELITES MOUNT INTO SECOND PLACE

Two Good Games Played in City League Saturday Afternoon.

Two good games were played in the City League race Saturday afternoon, Netherwood and First Baptist being idle owing to the death of the father of two of the players on the former team. Clinton Avenue fell a victim to the Tabs and Hope Chapel beat the Farmers.

By virtue of Saturday's victory Hope climbed ahead of the Baptist team into second place and the Baptists took third.

CHAPELITES EXHIBIT AIR-TIGHT BASEBALL

Defeat Farmers in One of the Best Games of City League Season.

Hard hitting, coupled with good pitching, gave the Hope Chapel City Leaguers a 3 to 1 victory over the Farmer A. C. Saturday afternoon, the contest being a nip-and-tuck affair throughout the nine innings. Both teams gave exhibitions of tight and clever fielding and the respective pitchers were accorded excellent support in the pinches.

Dick Schott, who returned to the Hope fold Saturday after a farming-out session with the Hopewell semi-pro. contingent, let the Farmers down with four singles, fanned eight and dealt out one free trip. Hope Chapel collected eleven safeties off Morley's pitching, three being credited to "Tuts" Jaeger and a pair each to Heron and Luthman, the former getting a double. Miller, of Hope, also slammed out a two-sacker.

But two slip-ups were charged against the winners, and the losing side had only one. Jack Garretson was the Farmers' big man with the stick, accounting for fifty per cent. of the hitting, that being a brace of singles. H. Anderson and Campbell copped the other two Farmer hits.

TAYLOR AND BLAZIER TO MEET IN FINALS

Will Compete for Spring Championship at Hydewood Golf Club.

The semi-final round for the Spring championship was the attraction at the Hydewood Golf Club on Saturday, when W. P. Taylor defeated Walter Whitehead 2 up and H. E. Blazier defeated William H. Nischwitz 3 up. Mr. Taylor and Mr. Blazier will meet on Saturday in the final round and the winner of that match will meet the winner of the Fall championship for the championship of the club.

Play for the President's cup brought out a large field of contestants and the scores generally were low. The following were posted:

William H. Nischwitz, 97, 17-80; H. E. Blazier, 87, 7-70; Walter Whitehead, 97, 16-81; R. M. Smith, 106, 25-81; H. L. Moodey, 102, 20-82; F. I. Collins, 106, 23-83; H. H. Woodland, 98, 14-84; R. F. Hand, 124, 38-86; Dr. H. K. Carroll, 102, 13-89; Clarence J. Hand, 113, 16-97.

SEMI-FINAL ROUND FOR SPRING CUP

S. D. Perrin and C. E. Lipscomb, Winners, Will Meet in Finals at Club.

The semi-final round for the Spring cup at the Plainfield Country Club on Saturday resulted in S. D. Perrin defeating Owen H. Fleming, 3 and 2, and C. E. Lipscomb defeating J. R. Evans, 2 and 1. Mr. Perrin and Mr. Lipscomb will meet in the final round on Saturday and some good golf is anticipated.

The point-winners for the Spring cup on Saturday were as follows:

W. M. Alling, 81, 13-68; S. D. Perrin, 87, 17-70; C. E. Lipscomb, 90, 17-73; S. D. Lounsbery, 82, 9-73. Other scores returned in this competition follow:

H. D. Hibbard, 92, 14-78; Arthur Murphy, 87, 9-78; J. E. Erickson, 92, 14-78; Howard Craig, 91, 12-79; L. G. Carman, 91, 10-81.

These scores were posted in the sweepstakes event:

W. M. Alling, 81, 13-68; G. A. Bomann, 91, 21-70; W. W. Coriell, 97, 12-76.

In the evening there was a dinner-dance which attracted a large number of members who remained to enjoy the features arranged by the house committee. Excellent music was provided and the program was a popular one.

MARTIN'S HOMER AND TWO SINGLES NOT SUFFICIENT

Three hits, a home run and two singles; a double play, four assists and one putout, without an error, were a part of Jack Martin's contribution to the Milwaukee-Kansas City American Association game on Saturday afternoon, but despite the Plainfielder's clever work his team lost, 5 to 3. Here's a short note that Manning Vaughn, the Milwaukee baseball writer, sends along about Jack:

"Martin led the Milwaukee hitters with a homer and two singles. Devore got two hits and the five were all the Northerners got off Regan. Jim Thorpe, who several months back began hitting left-handed, changed and batted right Saturday, but the change gleaned no base hits for the Indian. The fielding of Benson and Martin was a bright feature of the contest."

PLAINFIELD HORSES SHOW SPEED IN ROAD ASSOCIATION'S MATINEE MEET

Adam C. Blair and Dr. H. E. Winter Have Fast Entries in Hertha, The Baron and Owyhomac—One Local Steed Proved the Best in 2:19 Class and Two Others Capture Second Places Against Classy Fields.

Two Plainfield horses proved big attractions at the second matinee harness meet of the New Jersey Road Horse Association held on the Weequahic Park track, Newark, Saturday afternoon. "The Baron," owned by Dr. H. E. Winter, of West Front street, was the star in the 2:19 class, and his "Owyhomac" came in second in the free-for-all.

Adam C. Blair's new mare, "Hertha," ran second in the 2:19 to Dr. Winter's steed. In this event seven horses came to the wire as follows: Maboo, Hertha, In-for-Luck, Libby Medium, The Baron, Patchen Chimes, and Bobby Moreland.

Libby Medium and Hertha were new ones to the association. The latter drew the pole. At the word, Hertha and Bobby Moreland went away with a flowing breeze and a wet sail. They were on tiptoe and they made a splendid race to the three-quarter pole. At this point The Baron came along with a fine burst of speed and captured Bobby Moreland, but could not reach Hertha. It was a rattling" finish with Hertha the best of it by half a length.

In the second heat five of the horses were bunched all the way around, so that the proverbial blanket would have covered them. Hertha held the pole, but The Baron coming strong on the outside, challenged her for the lead and took it from her on the stretch, winning the heat by a head.

In the third heat Hertha, from second place, went into the lead with The Baron next. She held the lead to the turn home, when The Baron passed her and won the heat and race.

Class 5 was a combination of classes five and six, and the horses were Lustrous McKinney, Owyhomac and Nettie Patch.

Owyhomac started with the pole in his favor and he gained three lengths to the quarter; Lustrous McKinney closed up this gap but broke on the stretch and lost five lengths. He made this up and carried Owyhomac to a break at the three-eighths pole and finished the heat with some to spare.

Lustrous McKinney went off in the second heat with a burst of speed that carried his two competitors off their feet. Owyhomac rallied quickly and closing up the gap collared McKinney at the distance post, but the pace was too hot and he left his feet again. This put him out of the race. Lustrous McKinney won the heat and race.

Patrolman John Henderschott admiring his badge in small mirror of slot machine.

West Front street grocer grinding his teeth after being informed that large order he had just received was all a mistake, being intended for rival grocer on the same wire.

Cloth salesman selling suit "makings" to North avenue taxi driver for $3.50, and a few minutes later disposing of the same quality goods to said taxi driver's "pal" for $5.

Sign displayed in front of a residence on West Third street, near Lee place: "Gottors fixed here."

Overheard at Fourth and John street, when a trolley conductor rushed back to upbraid a colored woman who had stepped off a moving car without giving any signal to stop and getting thrown into the nearest gutter: "Go 'way, man; Ah has mah own way of gettin' off a trolley."

At the end of the parade of the combined Sunday-schools of Dunellen and New Market, Saturday afternoon, was a wagon filled with small children holding up banners with anti-liquor signs displayed, such as "Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight?" "The Water Wagon for Ours" and "Rum Is the Ruination of the Rising Generation." The effect was calculated to put a damper on any beholder who had hot coppers, but was spoiled and produced a laugh through the children singing at the top pitch of their juvenile voices: "How Dry I Am, How Dry I Am; Nobody Knows How Dry I Am."

FEMALE CHALLENGERS.

The Female Stars, a crack female baseball organization, has several open dates for June and July and would like to sign games with teams in the vicinity of Plainfield. For further information address C. Smith, manager, 272 South Eleventh street, Newark, N. J.

ARE YOU THE LUCKY ONE?

Somewhere on this page the name of a Plainfielder appears. If it is yours clip out the column in which you find it and bring it to the Plainfield Daily Press office, where you will receive in return a book containing twelve admission tickets to the Plainfield Airdome, valued at $1.20. A name will appear each night on this page; if you don't happen to be the lucky one tonight continue to watch. The tickets are good at any performance and will entitle you to the same privileges enjoyed at this popular amusement center by those who pay.

We have a large surplus of all varieties of plants and must clean up on same to allow for extensive repairs. Visit the Greenhouse near Netherwood Depot. You will be well repaid for your time.

CHANCE FOR PRESS ADVERTISERS TO ATTRACT THE ATTENTION OF THE ENTIRE COUNTY.

As the result of an agreement between the Plainfield Daily Press and the Elizabeth Evening Times any advertiser placing a classified ad in the Press may have that same ad inserted in the Elizabeth Evening Times upon the payment of one-half more than is charged for the Daily Press insertion alone. Thus, if an advertisement in the Daily Press costs forty cents, the same advertisement may be placed in the Elizabeth paper for an additional twenty cents.

The Elizabeth Evening Times has a circulation of 9,000 and is widely distributed throughout Union County. Thus if an advertiser places his advertisement in the Plainfield Daily Press and Elizabeth Evening Times he places it before the eyes of thousands of readers at a very small cost.

Most advertisers welcome the opportunity to attract the attention of the whole county to their offerings and with the co-operation of the Elizabeth Evening Times the Plainfield Daily Press is now able to make this possible. The Elizabeth Evening Times has earned a reputation for itself as an advertising medium, especially along the classified line, and it is a well known fact that its influence extends into other counties besides Union.

Lord Kitchener Goes Down With Staff On Boat Sunk By German Undersea Fleet

Admiral Jellicoe Officially Reports His Death--British War Secretary Was on Way to View Fleet After Jutland Battle--Severe Blow to Cause of the Allies--England Is In Mourning.

London, June 6.—Earl Kitchener, British Secretary of State for War, went down with the British scout cruiser Hampshire, sunk by a German torpedo or mine off the West Orkneys last night. There is no hope that Kitchener, or any member of his staff, was rescued, for rescue parties have combed the sea and the coast and no survivor of the Hampshire has been found.

Four life boats were launched from the Hampshire, it is stated, but there was a heavy sea and all were immediately swamped. Earl Kitchener was probably in one of these and met his death in the open.

This is the greatest individual loss that could come to the British nation. Kitchener, a military hero for a lifetime, has been the greatest figure in the reorganization and mobilization of the English army, and his death will interfere with all plans of the Allies. All England is in mourning today.

While statements to the effect that the Hampshire was on her way to Russia have been made it is believed that Kitchener's first duty after leaving England was to review the main fighting fleet after its battle with the Germans last week. He was approaching the fleet when the Hampshire went down.

Admiral Jellicoe's report to the Admiralty follows:

"I have to report with regret that His Majesty's ship Hampshire, Capt. Herbert J. Savill, R. N., with Lord Kitchener and his staff on board, was sunk last night at about 8 o'clock, to the west of the Orkneys, either by a mine or a torpedo.

"Four boats were seen by observers on shore to leave the ship. The wind was north northwest and heavy seas were running. Patrol vessels and destroyers at once proceeded to the spot, and a party was sent along the coast to search, but only some bodies and a capsized boat have been found up to the present. As the whole shore has been searched from the seaward, I greatly fear that there is little hope of there being any survivor.

"No report has yet been received from the search party on shore. H. M. S. Hampshire was on her way to Russia."

The members of Earl Kitchener's staff included H. J. Creedy, M. V. O., and Sir G. C. A. Arthur, M. V. O., private secretaries; Brevet Lieut.-Col. O. A. G. Fitzgerald, personal military secretary; Lieut.-Gen. Sir A. E. Codington, K. C. V. O., C. B., military secretary; Col. E. W. M. Norie, A. D. C., assistant military secretary.

Also part of his staff were the chief of the Imperial General Staff, Sir William Robertson; Col. C. E. Caldwell, C. B., director of military operations; Lieut.-Gen. Sir H. C. Sclater, K. C. B., adjutant-general to the forces; Col. H. G. Felton, C. B., D. S. O., A. D. C., director of organization; Major-Gen. Sir J. S. Cowans, K. C. B., M. V. O., quartermaster-general to the forces; Major-Gen. F. W. B. Landon, C. B., director of transports and movements, and Major-Gen. Sir S. B. von Donop, K. C. B., master general of the ordnances.

Sir William Robertson is known to be in London.

The above list comprises the executive staff of the Secretary of State for War and is, in effect, his office organization. There is some doubt whether the Admiralty reference to the staff applied to this organization.

The Orkney Islands, off which the Hampshire went down, are off the north coast of Scotland. The Hampshire was on her way into the Atlantic and around the northern end of the Scandinavian Peninsula into the White Sea. Earl Kitchener probably intended to debark at Archangel.

The Hampshire was one of the Devonshire class of six cruisers. She was built in 1903, and normally carried 655 men. She displaced 10,850 tons, was 450 feet long, 68½ feet beam, and drew 25½ feet. She was armed with four 7.5-inch, six 6-inch, two 12-pound and twenty 3-pound guns and two torpedo tubes. She cost $4,250,000.

The Hampshire has been in use as a scout boat and for carrying officials on various missions, having ample accommodations for the latter purpose. She was too old to take a place on the fighting line. When the war started she was in the Far East and was reported to have been worsted in a fight with the Germans in the South China Sea. She was one of the British squadron which was sent to this country for the Jamestown Exposition in 1907.

Without his crowning achievements as the great organizer of the British campaign in the European war, Kitchener has already won lasting fame by his many campaigns in Egypt, South Africa and in India.

He was born June 24, 1850, in County Kerr, Ireland, a fact that gave rise to a general belief that he was of Irish blood, but his parents were of French and English descent. His father was a soldier who had managed to climb to the lieutenant-colonelcy of a dragoon regiment, when he retired to the estate in Ireland, where Horatio Herbert Kitchener was born.

Educated at the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich, he entered the army as second lieutenant of engineers in 1871. Earlier in the year, while on a visit to Dinan, he had enlisted without the consent of the British authorities, in the French Mobile Guard under Gen. Chanzy and

NO ENGINE YET FOR NETHERWOOD

Common Council Rejects All Bids and Starts Over Again.

REPAIR MANY STREETS

Old Building On City Hall Site Must Be Removed Within Thirty Days—Insurance Men Protest Against Policy Handling.

Netherwood must wait longer for its automobile fire engine.

At last night's meeting of the Plainfield Common Council it was decided to reject all bids for a triple combination engine received some time ago. This includes the bid of the American-La France Fire Engine Company, which was recommended by the fire committee after a heated argument. Objection to the acceptance of the bid was made by local business men because of a charge that other cities had found these engines inferior, and Corporation Counsel Reed advised against its acceptance because a reduction in the price had been made by agreement after all bids were in. Chairman Cose last night presented a resolution authorizing the rejection of all bids, which was unanimously adopted.

Later he presented a resolution calling for new bids to be received at the special meeting of June 19. This was passed and advertisements will be inserted at once.

The City Hall building committee reported that it had decided not to move the house on the new building site to the rear of the lot and rent it, but to sell the building with the provision that it be removed within thirty days. This was included in the following report, later approved by the Council:

"At a meeting of the City Hall building committee held Friday, June 2, 1916, it was unanimously decided to recommend to the Council that the frame dwelling on the City Hall site be sold immediately at the best price obtainable, and that advertisements to that effect be inserted in both local papers, it being understood that the house shall be removed from the lot, or torn down and the material removed, within thirty days. This committee has carefully considered whether it would be advisable to move the house back on the lot, and rent it after putting it in thorough repair. Our decision is that this would be unwise. A careful estimate shows that it would cost approximately $4,000 to build new foundations and move the house, install steam heat and modern plumbing, electric wiring, bath rooms, replace unsound material, paint inside and out, and redecorate. In its new location facing Sixth street the rear of the house would reach nearly to the stable, making access difficult. To rent the house would be difficult without including space about it for lawn, and this would encroach on the City Hall grounds. Furthermore, there is some question as to the right of the city to incur obligations for expected revenue on a rental basis; and as the city in the future is likely to require more rather than less space, it seems best from every point of view to dispose of the house, and we so recommend."

The report of special commissioners on the widening of Central avenue from Front steret to the railroad was received. But one objection to the improvement was filed. This came from L. V. F. Randolph, president of the trustees of the First Baptist church. The objection was to the assessment made against the church body. Mr. Randolph set out that institutions was purely philanthropic, supported by citizens, and that it would receive no benefits from the improvement. He further stated that in the opinion of the board, assessments for the improvement had been illegally made, and urged that the church be declared exempt. The report was ordered referred to the streets committee, together with the protest.

A proposition from Ryder & Graves to furnish all labor necessary for the upkeep of the fire alarm system for $1,200 a year and to furnish all materials used in the upkeep of this system at a price but fifteen per cent above the net cost was referred to the fire committee.

An application for street lights on Woodland avenue, between Prospect avenue and Randolph road, was referred to the street lighting committee.

A protest signed by J. T. Vail and many other local insurance agents demanding that insurance business of the city be distributed among agents having local offices was received and referred to the finance committee. In this it was stated that city business was being given to a single agent, having a central office in New York.

Immediately following the reading of this protest there was a letter from Lamar Van Syckle on the same subject. Mr. Van Syckle pointed out that through an error in the writing of the policy there was no insurance on the police station and had not been for years. He said he understood that Herbert Buxton was a member of the Council at the time this policy was written, which made it illegal. Mr. Van Syckle also criticised the

GRADUATES GIVEN THEIR DIPLOMAS

Commencement Exercises Are Held at the Plainfield Seminary Today.

PRIZES ARE AWARDED

Rev. Howard E. Clark Delivers Address on Educational Topic—Names of Graduates—Music a Feature of the Affair.

The Plainfield Seminary held its 48th commencement today. The exercises opened with the processional hymn, "We March, We March to Victory," sung by the student body as they entered the hall and took their places, after which the Lord's Prayer was repeated in unison.

The address was given by the Rev. Howard Ernest Clarke, who has recently become pastor of the Congregational church, of this city. He took for his theme the question, "What Will You Do With Your Education?" and spoke of the wrong conceptions of the purpose of edulcation, such as that of making it a mere decoration or a means to wealth, rather than a means of service, which is the true and highest purpose of an education; one should go into a thing not for what he can get out of it, but for what he can put into it.

The address was followed by Schubert's "Whither," sung by the school, after which the members of the graduating class—the Misses Marion Dent Howell, of Bound Brook; Elizabeth Boyd Benton, Elizabeth Bertram Fullerton, Gladys Constance Herbert, of Bound Brook, and Margaret Isabel Herb, of Bound Brook—received their diplomas from Miss Arnold. A response was then sung by the school.

The presentation of prizes followed: United State history, first prize, $10 in gold, Prudence Hussey; honorable mention, Elizabeth Cooke. Prize for perfect attendance and punctuality, Mildred Wadley. Prizes given by the alumnae, $10 in gold for the highest standing in the French department, first prize, Eleanor Bucklin; honorable mention, Gladys Herbert; $10 in gold for the best work in first year algebra, first prize, Augusta Clawson; honorable mention, Carol Benton.

After de Koven's "O He' Carita" had been sung by the school, the graduates received many beautiful flowers, which were brought them by seven charming little girls.

The decorations of the hall were unusually artistic. Large wreaths of snowballs hung against the walls, while the platform was a mass of green, evergreens forming the background, with bayberry leaves, smilax and iris across the front.

MANY FRIENDS ATTEND MRS. ROBINSON'S FUNERAL

The funeral of Mrs. Samuel J. Robinson, whose death occurred at her home 744 West Third street, Saturday morning, was held in St. Mary's church this morning at nine o'clock. An unusually large gathering of relatives and friends was present at the requiem mass conducted by Rev. Father Henessey. During the service Father B. M. Bogan took occasion to speak on the life of the deceased and offer words of sympathy to the bereaved family. The floral tributes were very numerous and included large set pieces from Plainfield lodge of Elks, Perseverance lodge, Knights of Pythias; the International Motor Works, where Mr. Robinson is employed; Plainfield Postoffice employes of which Arthur Robinson, a son, is one, and the firm of Park & Tilford, of New York, by whom another son, Joseph Robinson, is employed.

Burial was made in the family plot in Hillside cemetery, the following close friends of the family acting as pall bearers: Daniel Miller, John Coffey, Donald McInnis, W. W. Wilson, Thomas Hendry and Charles Lindmark.

ATTIC FIRE DOES MORE THAN $300 IN DAMAGE

A fire that broke out in the attic of the home of D. Reasoner, 216 New street, at 10:10 last night, did damage of more than $300 before it was extinguished by members of the fire department. The whole upper part of the dwelling wah burned.

CIVIC ASSOCIATION MEETING.

The East End Civic Association meets this evening at 8 o'clock in the Netherwood Reformed church. Arthur B. Jones, of Plainfield, will speak on "Community Centers and Recreation Work."

FIRST TO GET TICKETS.

Miss Etta Raybert was the first to get a free book of twelve tickets for the Airdome furnished by the Plainfield Daily Press to the individual whose name is published each night in the classified advertising columns. Miss Raybert called at the Press office bright and early this morning and was rewarded. Watch for your name, it may be in the classified columns tonight.

ENTERTAINMENT AT COUNTRY CLUB FOR BRIDAL PARTY

Mrs. James W. DeGraff, of Central avenue, gave a luncheon at the Plainfield Country Club yesterday for Miss Marjorie Brown, whose marriage to Kenneth H. Condit, of East Orange, takes place tonight at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church at 8 o'clock. The guests included the members of the bridal party, exclusive of the best man and ushers. The decorations were blue and yellow, corresponding with the colors of the gowns of the bridal party.

Mrs. Howard McWilliams, mother of Miss Brown, gave a dinner and dance at the Plainfield Country Club last night for all the members of the bridal party. There were covers for seventeen, which included a few invited guests outside of the wedding party. The dancing was enjoyed until nearly 12 o'clock.

FUNERAL OF DAVID BOWDEN.

The funeral of David Bowden, whose death occurred in Muhlenberg Hospital, Saturday afternoon, took place at 2:30 this afternoon at 402 Park avenue. Rev. D. W. Skellenger, pastor of Hope chapel, officiated in the presence of a gathering of relatives and friends. Burial was made in Hillside cemetery, nephews of the deceased acting as pallbarers.

MR. BOOTH DOESN'T SMOKE.

At last night's meeting of the Plainfield Common Council Chairman Babcock, of the finance committee, introduced a resolution authorizing the committee to buy an ash tray for each desk in the Council chamber. The cost is not to exceed $10. There is a rule that members nor visitors shall not smoke during sessions of the Council, but it is never invoked except when there is a great attendance and the hall is filled. President Blatz called for a roll call and every member of the body voted "Aye," excepting one. Councilman Booth opposed the resolution.

"You do not smoke, do you, Mr. Booth?" President Blatz asked him.

"No," was the reply.

The councilmen will have their ash trays at the next meeting, and they promise to even give the newspaper men one.

TRUSTED PORTER IS CAUGHT STEALING

Employes of Force Store Take Part in Exciting Chase of Thief.

Edward Christian, colored, for many years a trusted employe of A. E. Force and company, was arrested this morning in the act of stealing four valuable dresses from the store. When the negro's house was searched a short time later by the police a full automobile load of stolen goods was recovered.

The negro was first arrested by Mr. Force himself, but escaped and there followed an exciting chase down Front street, in which many of the clerks of the Force store participated. Patrolman Bebout, standing near the corner of Madison avenue, heard the cries of "stop thief" and caught the fleeing negro.

Christian lives at 843 Richmond street. He has been an employe of the Force store as porter for many years, and always borne a good reputation. When his actions caused suspicion and this was reported to Mr. Force he refused to believe that the porter was dishonest, but three men were put to watch him this morning and they saw him take four valuable dresses from the store and attempt to get away with them.

Christian is locked up at the police station and will be tried before Judge DeMeza tomorrow morning. In his home Lieut. Higgins this morning found about fourteen pairs of shoes, a number of pairs of silk hose, dresses and many other valuable articles.

M. H. EWART, TREASURER.

Matthew H. Ewart was elected treasurer of Trinity Commandory, No. 17, Knights Templar, last night, to succeed the late Calvin H. Rugg. The latter, with the exception of one year, held the office from the time of the organization of the commandery until his death, which occurred recently.

COUNCIL FAVORS A PENSION FOR CARRIERS

An echo from the recent convention of the New Jersey State Letter Carriers' Associaiton was heard in the City Hall last night when the Common Council, by unanimous vote went on record for pensions for letter carriers. A resolution, introduced by Councilman John H. Cose, stated that the Council was in favor of adequate pensions for those who had given the best years of their life to the service, and ordered the clerk to send a copy of the resolution to each member of the New Jersey delegation in Congress.

ARTICLES ARE WANTED.

Members of the Belgian Relief, the Prince of Wales Relief, the Mercy League and the King's daughters are requested to send in their articles for the Allies' Bazaar to their respective chairmen as soon as possible. Articles for the first three mentioned may be sent to the following Mrs. F. W. Wallace, Mrs. Rufus Delafield and Mrs. J. K. Myers. Plainfield Day at the Allies' Bazaar will be on June 12.

START STREET WORK.

The work of widening Somerset street, from Jackson avenue to Johnson's drive, was started this morning with a gang of twenty-five men. The initial task is felling trees.

YOUR DOG IS IN DANGER.

If there is a nice little doggie around your house that you think a great deal of, tie him to a bedpost or something, for the poundkeeper'll get him if you don't watch out.

Plainfield has two poundkeepers—new ones, and all they are supposed to do is watch out for stray dogs and take them up. This precaution is taken because of approaching "dog days" when canines are supposed to become dangerous because of rabies. Mayor Calkins last night sent the appointments to the Common Council. The new poundkeepers are John K. Van Ness and Edgar Donley. One will work in the East End and the other in the West End and they promise that gay young dogs aré to be scarce in Plainfield pretty soon. Both appointments were confirmed by the Council.

SLOANE IS OUT OF AEROPLANE CO.

New Corporation Has Big Order From U. S. Government.

MAKING 12 MACHINES

Want to Keep Plant in Plainfield—Stay Predicated Upon Railroad Facilities and Room for Enlargement.

John E. Sloane, son-in-law of Thomas A. Edison, has sold all his stock in the Sloane Manufacturing Company, makers of Sloane-Day military tractor aeroplanes, and H. B. Mingle, president of the reorganized Standard Aeroplane Company, this morning announced that the plant will be enlarged and improved at once.

Already the Standard Aeroplane Company has received an order for a full squadron of machines for the United States Government. The order calls for 12 modern military tractors, and they are to be delivered on the Mexican border, ready for instant use in the punitive expedition under command of Gen. Funston.

This order is the largest ever placed by the United States Government and is for almost twice as many machines as the entire equipment of the army. The first aeroplane will be delivered June 21, and after that they are to be handed to the Government at the rate of one a week until the dozen machines are in service. This is the present output of the local plant, but more men are being added each day and much experimental work is being done preparatory to an increase of the number of machines turned out.

New stockholders in the aeroplane factory are not known. Mr. Mingle is from New York. In the reorganization of the company A. B. Hazard has been made general manager of the plant. He comes from Detroit, where he was in charge of a large automobile plant. Charles Day, designer of the Sloane-Day tractor, will remain with the company as chief engineer and designer.

Reports that Mitsue & Company, Japanese tea merchants and capitalists, were owners of the company, were denied by President Mingle this morning. He admitted, however, that Mitsue was instrumental in the reorganization and had furnished financial assistance to the new company.

Indications are that the plant will remain in Plainfield, although there are a number of cities bidding for it.

"We want to stay in Plainfield," Mr. Mingle said today. "This, however, is predicated upon a number of things within the power of Plainfield people. We must have space for the enlargement of the plant, and more workmen. We must have better railroad facilities and we must have a testing field. This field cannot be less than two miles in length and one-half mile in width."

Stock books of the company will be opened to local business men for the purpose of creating local interest, but the capitalization will not be increased. It remains at $500,000.

The placing of the government order with the local company is adequate proof of the efficiency of its plant. Before awarded a contract for the squadron of machines a board of experts made an inspection of ten of the largest aeroplane plants in the entire country. They came to Plainfield and went over the plant of the Standard Aeroplane Company, and carefully tested all of the machines made in America. Their decision was based as much on the ability of the factory to turn out the aeroplanes on contract time and in perfect condition as on the make of the machine, although the Day model tractor is admitted by European experts to be one of the best in the world. Because of its speed and climbing power it has been adopted by the English government as the best means of defense against Zeppelins and many are being used in London.

Just how many men are to be added to the working force of the plant is not yet known. More than 90 are employed there now, and more are needed, said Mr. Mingle. If Plainfield can furnish the expert mechanics, the space needed for enlargement, and the testing field, and its business men can bring about an improvement in the shipping facilities offered the company, the plant will not be lost to this city.

RECEPTION TO FORMER PASTOR AND MEMBERS

Rev. Frederick J. Huback, of this city, superintendent of the Elizabeth district of the Methodist Episcopal church, presided at the closing service of the semi-centennial of the Dunellen Methodist church last evening. There were about 150 present. Following the service there was a reception to former members and Rev. S. K. Doolittle, of Irvington, pastor of the church from 1900 to 1905, who was the only one of the former pastors who could not attend. Following the reception there was a general social hour during which ice cream and cake were served.

WILL GET FACTS ON STEVENS' BILL

Demand for Debate on Important Measure Made by Business Men's Association.

ONE SIDE DISCUSSED

W. B. Holland Appeared at Meeting Last Night and Awakened Interest—Fergus Motor Car Company Manager Also Present.

Discussion involving the merits of the Stevens-Ashurst bill, now pending Congressional action, became so heated at the monthly meeting of the Plainfield Business Men's Association last night that arguments pro and con were concluded only after it had been definitely agreed to thresh the matter out in a debate, the date of which and the principals, to be announced later. W. B. Holland, representing the American Fair Trade League of New York, delivered an address supporting the measure and his remarks prompted a reply from President David T. Kenney, of the local Chamber of Commerce, who was present at the business men's session.

Henry Rosenbaum, A. E. Force, Leo Slonim and John J. Varley entered into the controversy and Mr. Varley brought it to a climax by suggesting the debate. Mr. Holland agreed to be present on the date selected and also furnished the association with names of representatives of the negative side of the issue. These will be communicated with and arrangements made to have a formidable opponent attempt to refute the stand taken by the league delegate.

Mr. Holland said in part:

"The question is social and ethical as well as commercial. It concerns all of us as consumers because the consumer is the one most vitally interested in honesty in advertising and the square deal in merchandising. Unless the principle of price maintainence is of advantage to the consumer then it is doomed, because the rights of the manufacturer will never be more important than the rights of the great public.

"The cut rate merchant who sells one article at a loss to draw trade to his store in the hope of selling some other article at a high profit must sell some other article at a high price to maintain his average, and this average must be maintained if the merchant is to stay in business. The customer who buys regularly at a cut rate store must pay this average profit so that he gains no advantage in the long run.

"Cut prices have always been the weapon of monopoly. Trusts have been built up by cutting the prices below cost to drive out a competitor. So general has this practice been in the past that many States passed laws to prevent it. These laws required manufacturers to sell at uniform prices in all towns in the State with such variations as were needed to equalize freight rates.

"Now cut prices are being used by big department stores and mail order houses to kill small merchants. If the system is continued it will result in the ruination of the small towns and the smaller cities and will put the merchandising of the country in the hands of a few huge concerns with headquarters in New York, Chicago and Boston.

"The public is more concerned in competition in quality than in competition in price. So long as any advertised article is on the market, whether it is a breakfast food, a safety razor or a hat, competitors must approximate the quality of the advertised articles. The manufacturer of an advertised brand must protect his name and his business reputation by keeping the quality."

Mr. Holland gave several examples to show how advertising by enabling the manufacturer to increase his output had enabled him to lower prices and this lowering of the price while keeping up the quality had been a distinct advantage to the consumer.

"Take the case of the Ford automobile," he said. "By making 300,000 a year Mr. Ford has been able to sell a better car for $400 than could be bought five years ago at any price. And every car sold in this country today, no matter what the price, is in competition with the Ford and the entire population has benefitted by this economy due to enormous production. That enormous production would not have been possible except by the maintainance of the standard price system in the automobile industry."

General Manager Bowen, of the Fergus Motor Company, an automobile concern that has been considering several prospective sites for the location of a factory in Plainfield, was present at the meeting and outlined in detail the history and merits of the Fergus machine, indicating in brief the plans of the newly formed corporation for its manufacture and the benefits it would bring to Plainfield commercially. According to Mr. Bowen the concern would employ about 600 men when the factory is first opened and the number will be gradually increased.

Other cities, principally Syracuse, N. Y., Paterson and Newark, have become interested in inducing the directors of the company to locate in

HENNESSY NOT TO BE CANDIDATE

Withdraws From Running For Governor.

POOR HEALTH IS CAUSE.

State Senator From Bergen Is at Sanitarium at Battle Creek, Mich.—Outlines Policy He Thinks Democratic Party Should Pursue.

Newark, June 6.—In a letter to Charles H. Ingersoll of South Orange, Senator Charles O'Connor Hennessy of Bergen announces his withdrawal as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor. Mr. Hennessy has written similarly to Judge William M. Seufert of Bergen, to whom he has likewise made known that he cannot even be a candidate for senator from his own county. Mr. Hennessy's health compels him to forego all political activities. He is still at a sanitarium at Battle Creek, Mich.

Mr. Ingersoll was a supporter of the Hennessy home rule tax bill when it was in the legislature last winter. He was one of a committee of the State Manufacturers' association which recommended the abolition of the personal property tax, in line with Mr. Hennessy's proposed legislation. Mr. Ingersoll had promised to form a committee of independent Democrats in Essex county to aid the senator's gubernatorial candidacy.

In his letter to Mr. Ingersoll Mr. Hennessy says that "at present no party and no candidate, if we except Mr. Record, is standing for anything in particular except the old familiar stuff about business administration and economy and efficiency."

"If these things," Mr. Hennessy continues, "were important enough to continue as the leading issues of a campaign the advantages might easily rest with the Democrats, who in the reform of state financial methods have shown superior initiative and ability. But these contentions must be regarded indifferently by the great mass of voters. There is nothing in them to arouse moral enthusiasm or to appeal to the interest of the average man.

"The Democratic party in New Jersey needs an awakening. It needs to be made to stand for something that will attract earnest and progressive voters. Under Woodrow Wilson's leadership the party came into office and influence as the enemy of government control by privileged corporate interests and the champion of larger political power for ordinary citizens through a reform of the primary and election laws. Candid men will concede that the Democratic party made good use, both in legislation and administration, of the power intrusted to it. But a party cannot live long merely on the memories of the past. Nor does it deserve to succeed when it possesses little more than an appetite for jobs."

Municipal home rule, "subject only to constitutional restraints and the reserved power of the initiative and referendum," he suggests as a proper subject for Democratic advocacy.

William Allen White, Progressive national committeeman from Kansas, believes that Colonel Roosevelt may have to take control at Chicago. He says the Progressives are determined to hold back the nomination until Saturday.

TO TRAIN OFFICERS FOR SUBMARINES

School of Instruction Opens Next Month.

Washington, June 6.—Special training of American naval officers for submarine duty will be initiated by Secretary Daniels next month. A school for the instruction of officers in both the theoretical and practical work of submarines will be opened by the navy department at New London. The first class will report for a six months' course. Upon the termination of this course another class will be designated.

Secretary Daniels has followed the suggestion of Rear Admiral Grant, commander of the submarine flotilla, in initiating this new departure. Rear Admiral Benson, chief of naval operations, and Rear Admiral Griffin, chief of the bureau of steam engineering, heartily indorse the idea.

"When I became secretary," said Mr. Daniels, "there were twenty-three submarines completed, three in reserve and two out of commission—only eighteen being in active service, and to these eighteen boats there were only nineteen officers assigned, of whom thirteen were ensigns.

"These ensigns had been less than three years out of the academy. The submarine flotilla was consequently organized with Rear Admiral Grant at its head and a number of experienced officers assigned to it for duty. Shortly after assuming command of the flotilla Admiral Grant felt that both officers and men should be specially trained before assuming submarine duty and such a school was established on board the Columbia, his flagship.

"But to prepare officers in advance for the large number of submarines nearing completion, as well as for those that will be authorized in the current naval bill, it became apparent that larger facilities would be required, and the department has therefore approved his recommendation that this school be established at the New London submarine base.

"With the exception of the A, B and C boats (the first and smallest built by the government), two officers are now assigned to each submarine. It is planned that officers when graduated from the submarine school shall be appointed to subordinate positions on the boats and be placed in commission only after they have proved their aptitude for submarine work."

BUSINESS MENS ASSOCIATION OF PLAINFIELD RELIABILITY SERVICE VALUE QUALITY MEMBER

Above is shown the emblem of the Business Men's Association of Plainfield. About seventy merchants of this city are members of the organization, and most of them display this emblem in a conspicuous position on their windows. It stands, however, for more than mere membership in a commercial body. It stands for business honesty, and it is displayed by the merchants in this city who believe that honesty and fair dealing is worth more to them than any temporary advantage which may be gained by taking short cuts which others think brand them as "shrewd." The emblem will never be found on the window of a "fly-by-night" store that comes here for a few weeks or months to take advantage of holiday trade. The store in front of which this emblem is displayed is not here for a few days. It has probably been under the same management for years, and will continue under that management. It is a guarantee that if you have purchased anything in the store which displays it, and you are dissatisfied, you can go back at any time and have any reasonable complaint properly and courteously attended to.

There are many reasons which can be presented in favor of trading in Plainfield. The emblem shown above is the best one of all. The stores which display it are the ones where purchasers are assured of honest values, for every member knows that he will be taken to task by the others if he tries any shady merchandising methods. Perhaps you will say "that sounds all well enough in an advertisement, but they do not practice what they preach." If any reader of this has any doubt that the members of this organization are not jealous of the emblem, it can quickly be dispelled by attending any regular meeting. The frankness with which the business men discuss each other's faults will no doubt be surprising, but it is just that frankness which is making the business men of Plainfield, allied with this organization, strive to be fair to the public in every way. The meetings are held the 1st Monday of every month in Coward's Hall, on Park avenue, and visitors are always welcome. Our members are given a chance to get acquainted with many of the people of the city, and the kicker is made more welcome than the fellow who is easily satisfied, and comes out of mere curiosity. We know that we can all benefit from what the kicker says, for nine times out of ten his kick is a just one.

"But who are the members of the Business Men's Association?" perhaps you will ask. That is a fair question, for it is only for the members of this organization that these advertisements speak. In the next talk the names of every firm will appear.

Dunellen Council Takes Steps to Raise Additional Funds to Complete Contract.

Many matters of a routine and minor nature were disposed of at the monthly meeting of the Borough Council last evening. President Richard M. Ryan presided in the absence of Mayor E. B. Latham and all of the councilmen were present with the exception of E. M. Jones. A letter from Martin Bowman in regard to a crosswalk on the westerly side of the intersection of Madison avenue and Front street was referred to the street committee.

E. E. Waller was confirmed as a member of the fire department. A request from the department that the hydrants be tested and additional hose, etc., be procured, was referred to the fire committee. The resignation of Harry Shugars as caretaker of the local fire apparatus was accepted.

A resolution was passed that the issue of $45,000 4½% collecting sewerage gold bonds be advertised for bids twice in the Weekly Call and once in the Commercial and Financial Chronicle. These bonds will be in denominations of $1,000, and will be retired at the rate of $1,000 per year from 1917 to 1921, inclusive, and $2,000 per year from 1922 to 1941, inclusive.

Chairman Castner, of the street committee, announced that the storm sewer on North avenue was about completed and he recommended that the matter of taking care of the wash water from Waller's garage with a line of pipe from the garage to the storm sewer be taken up with Mr. Waller at once. This recommendation received favorable action.

The floatation of a demand note for $350 to take care of current bills and the issuance of improvement certificates to the aggregate sum of $5,700 to provide funds for the payment of sewerage bills were authorized.

The sewerage committee in submitting its report upon the request of the sewer contractor that the borough pay the salaries of the sewer inspectors which it ceased to do when the time limit of the contractor expired, recommended favorable action. In this action the Council takes into account the unusual conditions encountered by the contractor, such as the scarcity of labor due to the war which was entirely unforeseen when the sewer contract was signed.

The sewer committee also recommended that the engineer issue no permits for the connection of the houses with the sanitary system until the work has been completed and the engineer was so instructed by President Ryan after an affirmative vote by the Council.

WINS SCHOLARSHIP.

Miss Meta Pennock, who was valedictorian of her class at Plainfield High School, has won a cash prize for scholarship at Barnard College.

Theodore Hamilton, who is to graduate this June from the Penn State College, where he has been taking a course in agriculture, is spending the week home.

Miss Margaret Fuller has gone to Connecticut, where she will continue her musical studies for the summer.

TO ATTEND SOCIAL.

A number of the young people of the borough are planning to attend the entertainment to be given by St. Mary's Social Club in the parish house at Stony Hill, Friday evening. They will leave on the 8:15 trolley from this place.

James Markle is enjoying his annual vacation from his duties in one of the New York banks.

POSTPONES MEETING.

On account of the cantata to be given in the Presbyterian church this evening, the monthly session of the Board of Education will be held later in the month.

UNDERGOES OPERATION.

Allison Trust, of East Arcadia, North Carolina, who is spending the summer together with his brother in the borough, stopping with Mr. and Mrs. George Voehl, had his tonsils removed today in the Muhlenberg Hospital.

ANNOUNCE ENGAGEMENT.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Holt, of Westfield, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Sadie Oller, to Harrison Edgar Giddes, of this borough.

Mayor E. B. Latham is attending a convention of electrical business men at Hot Springs, Va.

25 NEW MEMBERS.

A pleasing aftermath of the Biederwolf campaign was the reception Sunday of twenty-five new members by the Presbyterian church and fifteen by the Methodist.

TO REPEAT CANTATA.

The sacred cantata, "Esther," given so successfully under the direction of Mrs. Charles S. Day in the First Baptist church, New Market, will be repeated under the auspices of the Presbyterian Christian Endeavor Society in the Presbyterian church at 8 o'clock this evening.

GOING TO PLATTSBURG.

Arthur Gangloff departed Saturday for Plattsburg, N. Y., where he will receive a month's military instruction. His employer, the Western Electric Company, has granted him two weeks' extra vacation for this purpose.

Scotch Plains, Fanwood

COUNCIL TO MEET.

The June meeting of the Fanwood Common Council will be held in the Fanwood firehouse tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. Among other matters to be brought up the Council will ask to have a light placed in front of the Borough Hall. In the absence of Mayor William H. Hoar in the West, Albert I. Nichol, president of the Council, will preside.

The monthly routine business meeting of Bucket and Engine Fire Company for June was held in the firehouse on Bartle avenue last night.

Raymond Brick, of Terrill road, has accepted a position with J. B. Guttridge, of Netherwood.

WOMEN'S LEAGUE MEETING.

A meeting of the Women's League, of Fanwood and Scotch Plains, was held at the home of Mrs. Wright Babcock, of North avenue, yesterday, who was assisted in entertaining by her daughter, Miss Elizabeth Babcock. A pleasant afternoon of discussion was spent and several of the members made short addresses. At the end of the meeting tea was served.

ENTERTAINED FRIENDS.

Mrs. Joseph E. Rhodes, of Midway avenue, entertained a number of friends from Brooklyn and this place at a luncheon yesterday. The dining room was prettily decorated, and Mrs. Rhodes proved to be a charming hostess.

NAMED A COMMISSIONER.

Together with two other Union county men, Dr. F. W. Wescott, of Martine avenue, has been appointed as one of the committee to condemn a park site in Westfield.

The following local men have been drawn to serve on the coming session of the petit jury at Elizabeth: Andrew Conway, of the township, and John Borman, of the borough.

The monthly business meeting of the Epworth League will be held in the Methodist church tomorrow night.

South Plainfield.

Timothy Ingraham, of Oak Tree, while driving a horse through this place yesterday morning, was arrested on a complaint of Louis C. Teed, of Newark, a State officer of the Society of Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Mr. Ingraham was taken before Judge Kaine, where a charge was made of driving a horse unfit for use. Mr. Teed claimed that the horse Mr. Ingraham was driving was suffering with a spavin. William Hamilton was called as a witness for the defendant. Mr. Hamilton qualified as an expert in such matters, and proved that the horse was not afflicted with a spavin, but was suffering from a ringbone, and that it suffered no pain whatever. Judge Kaine, however, ruled that owing to the blemish on the leg he was unfit for hard work and fined Mr. Ingraham five dollars.

Thomas Saverd is slowly recovering from an attack of pneumonia.

Charles Klinger, of Newark, has returned home after being the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Prantingham.

Miss Ellen Ostrye has returned to her home in Perth Amboy after spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. George Sandhere.

Y. W. C. A.

It has been requested by friends of the Young Women's Christian Association that the monthly report of the office records be published for the benefit of the subscribers and members of the Association. The following is the report for the month of May, 1916:

The number of callers, 921; calls made by the secretaries, 52; telephone calls, 469; ougoing calls, 254; letters, 31; postals, 970; committee meetings, 10, with an attendance of 76; applications for work, 28; applications for help, 38, and 8 positions were filled. 349 persons were served with lunch, and 110 with supper. The number of transients received was 22. The library circulation was 147. The average number of persons using the building for one day was 84, while 2,596 were made welcome during the entire month.

PLATFORM MAY CAUSE TROUBLE

Bitter Fight on Some Planks Is Expected.

MEXICO ONE DIFFICULTY.

Progressives Want Denunciation of Wilson German and Mexican Policies, While Regulars Hesitate—"Americanism" Likely to Create Dissension. "Hyphenism" Also an Issue.

Chicago, June 6.—The planks of the Republican platform dealing with President Wilson's foreign policy and the subject of "Americanism" threaten to stir up a man's size fight between Progressives and regulars.

Progressives insist that the platform shall declare in favor of a policy of intervention in Mexico, and they also demand a plank denouncing Mr. Wilson's course in his negotiations with Germany.

A report in circulation that many of the regular leaders are opposed to a plank favoring universal "military training" aroused the ire of Progressives who have been led to believe that they would have a potent voice in framing the Republican platform.

This matter of platform building has caused trouble in other directions. The word having gone out that Senators Lodge and Borah would be intrusted with the task of writing the platform in the first instance has caused a lot of jealousies.

While other platform makers are on hand with planks on many subjects, all of which would be given consideration by the resolutions committee, it is well known that the leaders look for guidance on this important phase of the convention's work to Senators Lodge and Borah.

A Good Combination.

Lodge is in touch with the regulars and with Colonel Roosevelt as well. On the other hand, Mr. Borah speaks the language of the Progressives and appreciates the point of view of the conservatives. It is quite generally believed that at this crisis in the party's life Mr. Lodge and Mr. Borah make an ideal combination to draw up a platfrom that will be satisfactory alike to both factions.

Senator Lodge arrived and immediately conferred with George W. Perkins. The question of the platform was discussed. It is the expectation now that Colonel Roosevelt will be consulted on the platform and that the conference will decide on something to bring the two parties together.

It is understood that one tentative draft of the platform prepared by Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler already has been submitted to Mr. Perkins, who will consult Colonel Roosevelt. One story was that Mr. Perkins had attempted to read this tentative draft to Colonel Roosevelt over the telephone, and the colonel had informed him that he did not wish to hear it at this time.

There is bound to be some trouble over the plank on "Americanism." Some of the radicals would write a plank on this subject denouncing "hyphens" and "hyphenates" and bitterly castigating the president's German policy. It is the opinion of Senator Borah that the language of this particular plank should be dignified in tone, merely stating affirmative propositions without showing any temper relative to the president's negotiations with Germany.

Intervention Opposed.

Strong opposition has developed to the proposal of Senator Hall and certain Progressives that the platform should make a flat declaration in favor of intervention in Mexico. Critics of this plan point out that it might prove to be a serious blunder to tie up the administration in advance to a definite course on a question of such large importance as that embodied in the Mexican situation.

It is recalled that a few years ago, when the Democrats started to revise the tariff, their whole program was menaced for a time by a previous platform declaration for free lumber. This is one of many instances where political platforms have embarrassed the party in congress.

It is the opinion of most of the regulars and many Progressives, too, that the Republican platform should make a dignified protest against the Democratic foreign policy as a whole without particularizing in any respect.

There has been a change of heart among the leaders as to the wisdom of a straight out declaration for "military training." The view now seems to prevail that on this question, too, there should be a strong plank "or preparedness without any attempt to commit the party at this time to either universal "military training" or "military service."

Cow Adopts Orphan Colt.

Meadville, Pa., June 6.—A mare owned by J. S. Brown, farmer, at Conneaut lake died, leaving a young colt. It was fed on a bottle for a time and when strong enough was turned out with a herd of cattle. One of the cows had lost a calf, and she has adopted the colt. They are now inseparable.

Germany Calls Men Home.

500 WOMEN NEEDED FOR "ROSE TAG DAY"

Committee Announces Extra Rewards for Those Who Work for Hospital.

The success of "Rose Tag Day" on June 17 is going to be largely dependent upon the number of women "taggers" who volunteer for this work and the enthusiasm they put into "tagging." Although a great number of young women have already offered their services, there is still need of many more. A "tagger" by volunteering does not obligate herself to give up her whole day. She will work in relays or shifts and the total time given up by her will be in the neighborhood of two or three hours. Surely there is not a woman in Plainfield who will not willingly make some sort of a sacrifice for her hospital that does so much towards alleviating pain and sickness in this community. Of course, a woman who "tags" all day will stand a better chance of obtaining the rewards of theatre tickets that the committee have offered.

There will be certain sections of Plainfield on Rose Tag Day—it being a Saturday—that will be more valuable tagging territory than others. It would be eminently unfair to allow the "taggers" in those choice sections to compete for the rewards on an equal basis with the "taggers" in less lucrative sections. It has, therefore, been decided that those "taggers" whose territories include the Plainfield Country Club, the Park Golf Club, the railroad station, the horse show grounds (where Troop D will be holding a rough-riding exhibition), Front street (from Watchung avenue to Madison avenue)—will compete for a special reward of two orchestra seats at any New York theatre they may choose whereas the "taggers" in all the other districts in the city will compete for four orchestra seats as a first award and two orchestra seats as a second award.

The offer of these eight theatre seats, as an incentive to the "taggers," should bring forth keen rivalry in the women's endeavors to help this most worthy cause.

Will any woman who is willing to be a "tagger" on June 17 please communicate at once with either Mrs. C. D. Warren, 966 Hillside avenue, president of the Woman's Auxiliary Board, or with Mrs. A. V. Heely, 321 West Eighth street, chairman of the women "taggers."

Blue Serges At Rothberg's

As a perennial candidate William Jennings Bryan has got nothing on a Blue Serge!

But in buying a Blue Serge, don't confuse the fabric with the fit, or the color with the cut—style is what you are after.

Rothberg's Blue Serges $15, $18, $20.

The higher they run, the better they get, of course, but we have no apologies to offer even for our $15 numbers, which are great value in blue serges at that price and give a good idea of what a man can expect at higher figures.

IN CHANCERY OF NEW JERSEY.

To Harriett L. Victory and Henry H. Victory, Lloyd L. Osborn and Abigail A. Osborn:

By virtue of an order of the Court of Chancery of New Jersey made on the day of the date hereof in a cause wherein The Morris County Savings Bank is complainant and you are defendants, you are required to appear, plead, answer or demur to the bill of said complainant on or before the thirty-first day of July next or the said bill will be taken as confessed against you.

The said bill is filed to foreclose two mortgages, one given by Henry G. Ostermoor and wife to The Morris County Savings Bank dated February 23, 1909, the other by you, Lloyd L. Osborn and Abigail A. Osborn to the Morris County Savings Bank dated April 15, 1910. Both of said mortgages cover the same lands situate in the City of Plainfield, County of Union. And you, Harriett L. Victory, are made a defendant because you are the record owner of the fee in said mortgage premises, and you, Henry H. Victory are made a defendant because you as the husband of the said Harriett L. Victory may have some interest therein, and you, Lloyd L. Osborn and Abigail A. Osborn are made defendants because it is in said bill alleged that you claim to have some interest therein, and also are liable under your sealed bill, the payment of which is secured by the mortgage stated made by you to The Morris County Savings Bank.

LORD KITCHENER DROWNED

he participated in the disastrous retreat after the defeat at Le Mans. The age of 64 found him again fighting with the French against the German invaders.

Went to Avenge Gordon.

From 1874 to 1882 he was engaged in survey work and civil organization in Palestine and Cyprus, with a brief interval of residence at Erzerum as Vice Consul of Anatolia. In 1882 he was appointed by Sir Evelyn Wood as a volunteer to one of the two majorships of Egyptian cavalry. Two years later, as quartermaster-general and deputy assistant adjutant he was engaged in the vain attempt to open communication for the Nile expedition to relieve Gen. Charles George Gordon at Khartum.

In 1885 he was a commissioner for the delimitation of Zanzibar as a British protectorate. The following year he was brevetted lieutenant colonel and honored with various decorations.

Returning to Egypt he became Pasha in the native army and until 188 was Governor of Suakin. Throughout his service in North Africa his knowledge of Arabic was one of his greatest assets.

Appointed Sirdar.

In April, 1888, he attained the rank of colonel in the British army and in December of that year was seriously wounded leading his troops at the battle of Handub. He received special mention in the despatches and was created C. B. for his part in the action at Toski under Gen. Grenfell. At the conclusion of the eastern Soudan campaign he was for four years adjutant-general and second in command of the Egyptian army. In 1892 he was made Sirdar (commander) of the Egyptian forces with the British rank of brigadier-general.

Of several things that entitle Earl Kitchener to a place in world history, the most notable is that he organized the largest volunteer army the world has ever seen, in the greatest war of all times.

Within a year from the sudden outbreak of the European war in August, 1914, the ranks of British fighting men were quadrupled by an increase from less than one million to nearly 4,000,000.

In England When War Came.

By mere luck Kitchener happened to be in England on one of the comparatively rare visits he had paid to London during his long career abroad when the European war bhoke out. Within a few hours after England's declaration of war Kitchener was appointed secretary of state far war and immediately took full charge at the War Office, where he worked day and night to overcome the handicap which the central powers had over England in the matter of fighting strength.

He firmly told the British people they had a bigger war on their hands than they realized, and one that might last longer than they expected, but it was to be faced with entire confidence, and he, unsmiling, almost like a dehumanized machine, set about to make things hum. He had scarcely moved into Whitehall street when he made numerous changes in the personnel of the War Office which was said to be honeycombed with social and political favoritism.

After dispatching a few hundred thousand regulars to France and Belgium to help check the onrushing Germans, he began recruiting and organizing his army of millions. The British Isles were covered with signs and posters urging young men to join the colors. Kitchener went through the country superintending the drilling of the army. From time to time were reports indicating his failure to get the number of men he wanted, buth within a year after the war opened Premier Asquith officially announced in Parliament that about three millions men had enlisted in the United Kingdom alone, and almost another million in the overseas dominions.

"OVER THE COALS"

City League moguls last night increased the player limit from 15 to 18 in order to provide for vacancies occurring during vacation time. This happens to be the first indication of prosperity in the local loop. Nine extra players for each combine leaves fifty-four to take vacations at the same time.

Someone has accused Lew Coriell of being the best "schoolboy umpire." He was graduated to the City League last night for the season of 1916.

Might be well to farm some of those other City League "umps" out to the School League if certain grumblings we have heard are to be taken as an indication of their popularity.

We also note that Cliff Randolph has been graduated from Perth Amboy to Hope Chapel.

Plainfield High School has a high jumper who claims to be capable of a five-foot-six leap. Send him along to the big meet at Newark Saturday and let's see if he can turn the stunt on any lot besides Parker Field.

New Brunswick is a bona fide member of the Union County High Athletic League. This is a poor way to teach schoolboys the municipalities that make up a county. New Brunswick has either moved into Union very recently or else the Middlesex County High School must look like a particularly juicy victim for some of the Union county officials.

After winning the interscholastic title North Plainfield fell down when pitted against Kearny High School yesterday afternoon. All of which goes to prove our claim that the local and borough nines this year were not up to par.

Will T. Glenney is shouldering the responsibility of representing Plainfield in the metropolitan amateur golf championship match tomorrow. Admitting that he's well qualified to bear the burden, no one can deny that he should have other "likelys" from the Queen City with him.

LOCAL JUNIORS HOLD ANNIVERSARY AFFAIR

Plainfield Council Entertains Members and Friends in Celebration of Birthday.

In celebration of its tenth anniversary, Plainfield Council, No. 293, Jr. O. U. A. M., entertained a large gathering of members and friends in Junior Hall on East Front street last night. Past Councilor E. Gibson Smith acted as master of ceremonies during the rendition of an appropriate program, a feature of which was an illustrated history of the order. Violin, piano and cornet solos were given by the Misses Sadler and Miss Martin, who alove gave trio selections.

Robert Pentecost was the lecturer for the history of the order from a national standpoint, while Mr. Smith operated the stereopticon. The entertainment committee which arranged the affair was composed of Julius G. Williams, chairman, assisted by Joel D. Pennington and Samuel Cratsley.

Plainfield Council at the time of its organization ten years ago began with a membership of thirty-five. It now has one hundred and twenty-one active members and thirteen associate. Its first councilor was Winfield S. Angleman. The present councilor is Frank Clarke and with the able corps of assistants surrounding him the outlook for Plainfield Council during the coming year is unusually bright.

COLUMBIAN DRAMATIC MADE PERMANENT

The young people who have been conducting entertainments in Columbus Hall under the name of "The Columbian Dramatic Club" met last night and organized permanently, adopting the same name. Meetings will be held at Columbus Hall the first Monday of every month and after warm weather is over a series of dramatic entertainments will be arranged for presentation during the winter. During the past year the club conducted a number of dances and gave a highly successful musical comedy entitled "Ye Olde Singing Skule."

At the meeting last night these officers were elected: President, W. V. Sullivan; vice-president, Miss Anna Doyle; secretary, Miss Mary Murray; treasurer, Garret Keating.

"THE TEMPEST" LAST OF SHAKESPEAREAN RECITALS

The last of the series of the Shakespeare Tercentenary course of lecture-recitals given by Edgar C. Abbott, Ph. D., of Boston, for the benefit of the Arthur Home for Blind Babies at Summit. The recital yesterday was given in the parish house of the Congregational church and was attended by nearly one hundred persons.

"The Tempest," Shakespeare's last tragedy, was the subject and the speaker took extracts from the different acts and delivered them. Mrs. Rufus P. Lincoln was the hostess during the afternoon.

As a result of the three recitals given by Dr. Abbott the Arthur Home will be materially benefitted, a substantial sum being realized. The found will be used to care for and eudcate the blind youngster inmates of the Summit home.

KENNEY SENDS PROTEST ON THE STEVENS' BILL

Taking action for the local Chamber of Commerce as its president, David T. Kenney has forwarded a letter to Congressman John H. Capstick, of the Fifth Congressional District, protesting against the passage of the Stevens-Ashurst bill, a measure now before Congress which affects in a vital way the class of merchant that does business in a place of Plainfield's size. The Chamber of Commerce has decided not to request the passage of the bill and in his communication Mr. Kenney cites the reasons for believing that it is unconstitutional and why it would seriously and detrimentally affect the merchant.

SOME OF AMERICA'S MOST FAMOUS MEN ASK AID FOR DEFENDERS OF VERDUN

Prominent Bankers, Diplomatist and Educator Appeal for Funds in the Name of the Suffering Soldiers of France--

The National Allied Relief Committee, co-operating with the War Relief Clearing House for France and her Allies, is sending out what perhaps will be the most broadcast appeal yet issued on behalf of the war sufferers of Europe.

This appeal is for funds for the relief of the soldiers of France wounded in the fighting around Verdun.

What lends additional interest to this appeal is the fact that it is signed by six of the most prominent men in America. Those who signed it are: August Belmont of the banking firm bearing his name; Hon. Jos. H. Choate, Ex-Ambassador to England; Dr. Charles W. Eliot, President Emeritus of Harvard University; A. Barton Hepburn, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Chase National Bank; Edwin G. Merrill, President of the Union Trust Company, and Henry L. Higginson of the banking firm of Lee, Higginson & Company, Boston.

It is anticipated that the contributions received from this wide-spread appeal will be devoted also to relief work among a large number of wounded resulting from the greatly increased activities of the contending armies.

The appeal is reproduced herewith.

SENATOR LA FOLLETTE.

To Be a Candidate For the Third Time.

It has been announced that Senator Robert M. La Follette for the third successive time will be a candidate for the nomination in the Republican convention. He will be placed in nomination as Wisconsin's favorite son by M. B. Olbrich of Madison.

SON TOLD ON MOTHER.

Public School Principal Sues Wealthy Wife For Divorce.

Hoboken, June 6.—Admitting that his son Stanley, twenty-five, had carried many tales about his mother, Abraham J. Demarest, superintendent of the public schools of this city, appeared as a witness in the divorce suit he has brought against his wealthy wife, Fanny.

Demarest named Edwin W. Oliver, principal of public school 9, Hoboken. He denied that trouble between him and his wife followed her refusal to allow him to manage her large estate.

Mrs. Demarest was Fanny Taylor. Her father died in 1912 and left a fortune to be divided equally between her and her sister. Mrs. Demarest makes her home at 1017 Bloomfield street, this city.

The husband said he had ordered Oliver to stay away from his home, but that he had seen his wife and the school principal together at Riverdale.

HANGS SELF WITH OWN HAIR.

Woman Then Turns on Gas—Is Rescued by Her Own Son.

Trenton, June 6.—In an attempt to commit suicide at her home here Mrs. Mary Fischer, forty-five years old braided her hair and using it as a noose attached it to the gas fixture. Standing on a chair she turned on the gas and jumped. The body was discovered by her son, who was attracted ed by the fumes and broke into the room, finding his mother in a semiunconscious condition.

The son encountered some difficulty in releasing his mother, finally breaking the gas fixtures and carrying her to a place of safety. She was revived at the police station and later committed to the New Jersey State hospital. No reason is assigned for the woman's attempt to end her life.

COLONEL LOSES STRENGTH

Progressives Talk of Holding Off Till Justice Speaks—Wyoming Is For Him—Favorite Sons See Strength Waning—New York Contingent Is Counted On.

Chicago, June 6.—The impression that has existed here in regard to the strength of the movement in favor of Justice Charles Evans Hughes is developing with the arrival of nearly all the delegates to the Republican national convention.

Strong Hughes sentiment cropped out plainly not only in the uninstructed delegations, but in state groups that are pledged to favorite sons.

The disclosure of this feeling among the delegates has greatly increased the chances of the Republican convention naming the jurist. At the same time there was a corresponding letdown in the talk of Colonel Roosevelt as the possible Republican nominee.

Mr. Roosevelt's lieutenants, in fact, are now convinced that it will be impossible for him to capture the nomination in the Republican convention. They haven't given up the fight and do not intend to until the last minute, but they are confidentially concerned now in finding a way to bring about harmony and at the same time save their own dignity.

Holds Balance of Power.

While it would seem that little less than a miracle can change the outlook for Mr. Roosevelt's nomination, there is no disposition on the part of Republicans to minimize the power that the colonel wields in the present situation. Mr. Roosevelt will practically dictate the important planks in the Republican platform, and his is likely to be the controlling voice in the selection of the Republican nominee.

What Colonel Roosevelt's preference is in regard to the candidate, barring himself, was as uncertain as it has been at any time since the Republicans and Progressives began to arrive in Chicago. Many conferences were held by the Progressive leaders and between the bull moose lieutenants and the Republicans, but at the end the situation was as badly muddled as ever.

Republican leaders were insisting upon Hughes or some candidate from the favorite son group. The Roosevelt followers were standing loyally by the colonel and declaring that Hughes could not be considered by them until he had made a statement which would show that his views were in accord with the principles of the Progressive party. One wing of the moose party has thus far refused to consider the jurist, even under those circumstances, and has insisted upon Roosevelt's nomination.

Fear Temper of Moose.

Notwithstanding the stand of the most influential leaders, including the colonel himself, in favor of a harmony program, there were signs that were alarming to the men in both parties who want to bring about a union that they believe will insure the defeat of President Wilson. The Progressive chiefs doubt whether they can control the bull moose convention and prevent it from naming Roosevelt.

Mr. Perkins and others of the Roosevelt lieutenants have explained the circumstances in detail to leaders of the Republican party who are convinced now that their words are not intended as a bluff, but that there is real danger of the redhot Roosevelt Progressive delegates running away with the bull moose gathering.

Some of the Progressive leaders after conferences informed their Republican friends that they feared the situation was developing away from rather than toward harmony. They acknowledged that their brand of harmony seemed to consist wholly in the Republican convention's being willing to take only Colonel Roosevelt as its nominee.

The Republican leaders refused to consider for a minute the suggestion of Roosevelt's nomination by the G. O. P. They had gone over the roll of delegates carefully and they told the Progressive leaders that Mr. Roosevelt will not have more than eighty-eight votes on the first ballot. They added that he cannot even in a stampede get more than 200 votes in the Republican convention, whereas 493 are necessary for a nomination.

Fortified Against Stampede.

There is no doubt finally that the delegations from many states were carefully selected with the knowledge that they could not be stampeded for the colonel, and the leaders are now reaping the benefits of this early culling. The Republican leaders are confident that when Colonel Roosevelt himself realizes the situation he will join in urging the indorsement of Justice Hughes or some other Republican.

There were many developments which indicated that influential Progressive leaders are leaning toward an indorsement of Mr. Hughes. The proposal was advanced to the Republicans by one of the big moose men that the Republican convention should postpone the naming of its candidate for president until early next week, possibly on Monday.

It was pointed out that the last decision day of the United States supreme court will be next Monday and that Justice Hughes might then feel free immediately to issue a statement in the event of his nomination by the Republicans. At the same time the Progressives themselves proposed to postpone taking action in regard to a presidential nominee.

The Republicans rejected this proposal and insisted that they would carry through their program of balloting this week in the hope of naming candidates for president and vice president by Saturday night. Thereupon the Progressive leaders decided to postpone their own nomination at least until Friday, and many believe it will not take place if the leaders can prevent it before Saturday or the first of next week.

It became more apparent that Roosevelt and Hughes are the only candidates that would stand a chance of obtaining the indorsement of the Progressive convention. The entire situation in regard to the outlook for harmony revolves about the problem of obtaining some expression of view from Justice Hughes. Friends of the jurist contend that he feels as strongly and deeply as does Colonel Roosevelt on the so called issue of Americanism, but the task confronting the Progressives is to obtain some expression that will satisfy them and permit them to act consistently with their past declarations.

Those who are familiar with the attitude of Justice Hughes are confident he will not break his silence and that the only likelihood of successfully meeting the situation lies in the plan to have the Progressive convention hold off until the Republicans have nominated him and he has resigned from the bench.

Claim 350 For Hughes.

Many developments attested the strength of the Hughes movement. In response to a call from the Oregon delegation, which is the only one instructed for Hughes, 152 delegates attended a meeting in favor of the jurist and pledged themselves to do missionary work for him. Frank H. Hitchcock and other Hughes boomers were making confident predictions that the jurist will be nominated. They were saying privately that they will have more than 350 votes for him on the first ballot.

There was considerable evidence of a disposition on the part of many instructed delegations to break away from the pledges on the second and third ballots, and the Hughes men were confidently asserting that the justice will be named at least by third roll call.

Representatives of the favorite sons were not worrying over Mr. Hitchcock's figures, however, and asserted that they were absolutely confident the field would be able to control the situation against the justice at least on the first ballot. Many of the favorite son managers professed to believe that Mr. Hughes will be stronger on the first ballot than on any other and that when an opportunity is afforded for trading and deals between the state "sons" the Hughes strength will disintegrate.

The Wyoming delegation came out in a block for Hughes. They reserved the privilege, however, to vote for Senator Borah first if his name is presented. Strong Hughes sentiment developed in the Minnesota delegation, which has twenty-six votes and is instructed for Cummins.

Cummins Men Lean to T. R.

Many of the delegates instructed for Cummins were giving evidence of restlessness. The leaders of the Iowa delegation do not believe that Senator Cummins has any chance for the presidential nomination, and they are impatient to take a hand in the trading now going on. Most of these delegates are said to lean toward Roosevelt.

Strenuous efforts are being made by the allies to keep Root's name in the field and to hold the New York delegates for him. The managers of the favorite sons feared the moral effect that a big block of New York delegates would have.

Asks Wilson to Aid Russian Jews.

Washington, June 6.—Representative London of New York asked President Wilson to take every opportunity to assist Jews in Russia to obtain relief from oppressive conditions. He said the prospects were bright for more liberal treatment of the Russian Jews after the war. The president said he would take any steps possible.

May Place Roosevelt's Name In Nomination.

Although the leaders and rank and file apparently are not considering the nomination for president of any man other than Colonel Roosevelt at the Progressive convention, no agreements for the formalities have been made. It has not even been decided who will place the colonel's name before the convention. Oscar Straus of New York is being most prominently considered. Seconding speeches are expected from practically every state delegation.

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, JUNE 6, 1916.

A DUTY FOR ALL AMERICANS.

June 14 is a holiday. How many can tell the nature of the celebration? It is the day on which every citizen of the United States should pause long enough to ponder on the struggles and sacrifices that have gone into the building of this great nation—of its advantages of citizenship, its Christianity, its civilization and its freedom. It is the day for a renewal of patriotism, for the fondling of the Stars and Stripes, a re-consecration to the duties of American citizenship. It is Flag Day.

On Flag Day other cities in the country will have preparedness parades, their citizens believing that this is the best manner in which to arouse a more general love for country and realization of its needs. Plainfield will have no parade, we understand, but its citizens, every one, should drape an American flag from their house where it will be seen by all who pass, proudly proclaiming all for which we have suffered, all for which we stand, and all for which we dream.

WHEN FARMERS ARE MINERS.

That Col. Roosevelt knows something besides politics, war, big game hunting, and a few other things was shown by his reference to the agricultural conditions of the nation during his address in Newark the other day. He urged the farmers to put back into the soil when they take from it, that their lands will not become barren and non-producing within a few years. He said:

"As regards farming, for instance, if the soil is exhausted, then the people who draw their living from the soil will become impoverished and then the whole social structure will topple. It is the business of the whole community to see that the soil that has been tilled for fifty years is more productive and not less productive at the end of that time. It is our business to help the men who dwell in the open country in such a fashion that not only will their work be more productive, but that their lives and especially the lives of their women and children be led in full and satisfactory fashion."

Hughes on the second ballot, is what smart political dopesters are sending back to their papers in return for fat expense accounts just now. Whether or not Colonel Roosevelt will be satisfied with Hughes remains to be seen. It is said that the Progressive convention would indorse him provided his name came before this body with the Colonel's O. K. However, the danger in nominating Hughes is not so far away as the Progressive party. A lot of the delegates who are hollering for him now and many more who vote for him in the convention, if he gets enough votes to nominate, will be disgruntled after he makes a public announcement of his acceptance. No man knows what Justice Hughes stands for. He may be a rampant militarist or a pussy-footing pacifist. If he is either some are going to be sorry they helped nominate him. If he is neither, most of them are going to be sorry. He cannot possibly please all, for men of all political preferences will vote for him in the convention that makes him standard bearer, none knowing for what he stands. He may not even seek to please the largest number. If he is the choice of both the Republican and the Progressive conventions, however, he will have more than a fair chance of defeating Wilson and bringing glory and victory back to the Republican banner.

City Judge William De Meza has announced the commendable policy of assessing heavy fines in all bicycle stealing cases that come before him where the charge is proven. Many wheels have been lost in Plainfield recently through the operations of thieves, working singly or in organized bands, and this is a form of crime that baffles policemen. They are able to make arrests only when the criminals are amateurs, for a bicycle can easily be taken apart and altered so as to absolutely prevent identification. The only remedy in sight is to make examples out of those who are caught, and in doing this Judge De Meza promises to break up an annoying and costly criminal commonplace.

Jersey City is host to business men of the State these days, while celebrating "Made in Jersey City Week." The movement is a laudable one that will accomplish much in educating friendly buyers to the many articles manufactured in Jersey City. The only objection that a Plainfielder, or a resident of any other New Jersey city, can raise to the plan is that the title has one too many words. The proposition should be more general, and the slogan "Made in Jersey."

THE FORUM

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:—

A harsh and indiscriminate treatment of theological differences does not commend itself to those who think that fairness and Christian courtesy should be distinguishing marks of those who profess sound orthodoxy.

In contrast to the sweeping denunciation of Unitarianism by Dr. Biederwolf, allow me to quote from a sermon, delivered many years since, by a distinguished preacher of the English church, Rev. Frederick W. Robertson, M. A., also a man of most saintly character. The sermon is entitled "Salvation Out of the Visible Church," and contains this paragraph:

"There are some of us who can believe in the Christianity of those who are a little beyond our own church pale; some who even dimly suspect that God may love the Jew; some, too, who will be ready with qualifications to acknowledge a benighted Roman Catholic for a brother; but how many of us are there who would not be startled at being told to love a Unitarian? How many who would not shrink from the idea as overbold, that he who is blind to the Redeemer's Deity, yet loving him with all his heart, may, perchance, have that love accepted in place of adoration, and that it may be at our peril that we call him 'common or unclean?' Oh; there was a largeness in the heart of Christ of which we have only dreamed as yet—a something, too, in these words, 'God hath showed me that I should not call any man common or unclean,' which it will require, perhaps, ages to develop."

The Old-Time Campaign.

There used to be fun in the olden days,
When they had the real live campaign;
When the boys wore the oilcloth uniforms
And marched in the pouring rain;
When they carried the torches and gay flambeaux
And moved in a mighty line;
When the red fire burned for miles and miles,
Downtown when the nights were fine.

They marched in true military style,
As though they were bound for war,
And nine out of ten didn't really know
Just what they were marching for.
They wore all the trappings of cuirassiers,
One night they would march as Republicans
With plumes in their bright tin hats,
And the next night as Democrats.

- Proctor's Theatre -

At Proctor's Tomorrow.

Douglas Fairbanks appears today only at Proctor's Theatre in the Triangle play that was selected to inaugurate the opening of the new Rialto Theatre, New York, acknowledged to be the temple of the motion picture, "The Good-Bad Man," a thrilling Western picture containing thrilling and hair-raising Western stunts presented in a new and delightful manner. Douglas Fairbanks in "The Good-Bad Man" presents a combination of talent which is seldom equaled. Douglas Fairbanks, with his enthusiasm, his personality and individuality, his swift-moving action, plays the lead, while dainty, demure, Bessie Love plays the principal feminine part. It's a combination rarely seen—a combination sure to be appreciated by exhibitors and the public alike. Never for a moment does Fairbanks allow his audience to tire. His pictures are chock full of tingling action, rare thrills and genuine comedy. Stirring scenes so swift that you have to hold your breath are followed in quick succession by real comedy truly funny. "The Good-Bad Man" is a clever tale about an eccentric highwayman who appropriates the property of the undeserving and who generally redistributes wealth according to his own whims and theories. It is a breezy comedy-drama that is perfumed with the aroma of cactus and sagebrush and the irrepressible personality of Douglas Fairbanks. The feature attraction tomorrow will be Theda Bara in "The Eternal Sapho," while Thursday William Collier, the popular comedy star, will star in a five-part comedy drama under the direction of Thomas H. Ince, entitled "The No-Good Guy." On Friday Lou Tellegen, the talented dramatic star, who but recently married Miss Geraldine Farrar, will be featured in a Paramount masterpiece entitled "The Unknown." Saturday's feature will be a Metro production entitled "Lovely Mary," featuring charming Mary Miles Minter, the favorite of thousands of film fans.

WAITING FOR THE ORDER TO FIRE

--Astor Theatre--

The big attraction at the Astor Theatre today will be Louise Lovely in the big Bluebird production, "The Gilded Spider," which will be shown here for the first time. This is the photoplay that made such a wonderful impression on the New York public, playing to capacity houses at all performances. Miss Lovely is seen to good effect, being able to show her wonderful charm as a star with the Bluebird Company. Tomorrow we will offer for your approval America's most beautiful woman, Constance Collier, in "The Code of Marcia Gray," a Paramount production. A treat is in store for all those who appreciate a beautifully photographed, as well as strongly acted, film drama. In the scenes showing the magnificently spacious entrance hall of the Gray's mansion and superbly-appointed drawing room the fittings and furniture are exactly the same as in the costliest homes in America. These interesting features are brought out clearly in their true values by the excellence of the camera work. The many scenes of beautiful out-of-door views, of the palatial Gray mansion, of the gardens, of the sumptuous banquet scenes, and the scenes overlooking the Pacific Ocean and the gardens are all wonderful examples of photography, and show as well the truly artistic eye possessed by the director. Directed by a master hand that kept hold of the big theme of the story, and in each succeeding scene turned yet another page in the unfolding of the story, "The Code of Marcia Gray," is a production that the Morosco Photoplay Company released on the Paramount program with the foreknowledge of its assured popularity. In addition to this wonderful production we will show the first episode of "Who's Guilty?" featuring the everfamous Tom Moore and Anna Nilsson in the leading roles. "Who's Guilty?" will no doubt be as big a drawing card at this theatre as "The Goddess," which was shown here some time ago. On Thursday we will offer another series picture, "Gloria's Romance," featuring the famous beauty, Billie Burke. Don't miss this wonderful photoplay; each episode is complete in itself. Always a good show at the Astor Theatre; bring the kiddies.

handling of other policies. His communication was referred to the finance committee.

A map of Bronson Park was presented to the Council and turned over to the streets committee.

That the sky-line in Plainfield should be restricted to six stories was declared in a communication from President Kenney, of the Chamber of Commerce, telling of a resolution passed by members of that body a short time ago. Mr Kenney also called attention to the condition of Cedar brook and urged that something be done.

Mayor Calkins announced the resignation of DeWitt C. Ivins as tax assessor for the Second ward and the appointment of Harry C. Runyon, which was approved.

The Mayor also sent to the Council the appointment of Howard H. Craig as a member of the recreation committee to succeed the late J. Hervey Doane and appointment of Alexander Gilbert, William Stillman and L. V. F. Randolph to be members of the Board of Library Trustees for three years, all of which were approved.

A communication from Corporation Counsel Reed reporting that gas bills of the city since March, 1900, were legal debts and should be paid was received. Mr. Reed pointed out that the city could demand electric lighting free of cost, but not gas. The bill for the police department is thirty-six cents, that for the fire department is $408.24 and for city offices is $621.

The report of the overseer of the poor showed that $816.18 was expended in May; that of the inspector of buildings showed that 23 permits were granted and that of the street commissioner showed that 12 permits to make sewer connections were granted. Receipts of the clerk of the District Court were $123.26 and expenses were $40.16.

A bond issue of $30,000 for the new Emerson Avenue School was authorized by ordinance. These bonds are to bear interest at the rate of 4½ per cent., and will come due between 1955 and 1961. The treasurer was authorized to pay $7,000 over to the school fund until the bonds could be sold. The treasurer was also authorized to transfer $3,000 to the fire fund and $1,000 to the poor fund.

Upon recommendation of the finance committee the Council decided to accept a compromise with Raritan township on the expenses of a small-pox patient received from there sometime ago. Each city will pay half.

An ordinance authorizing the construction and repair of sidewalks on North avenue and many other streets was passed.

Plans for the West End pumping station were ordered put on file.

The clerk was instructed to advertise for two weeks that bids would be received at the meeting of July 3 for important additions to the sewer system.

The bid of Joseph F. Burke for repairing, resurfacing and rebuilding streets was accepted.

An ordinance calling for the permanent improvement of parts of Clinton avenue, Leland avenue, Sumner avenue, Lake avenue, Kensington avenue, Edgewood avenue, Stelle avenue and Clinton place was passed on its first and second reading and ordered advertised. It calls for a bond issue of $35,000, to bear interest at the rate of 5 per cent. A hearing on these improvements will be held on the evening of Monday, July 3.

An ordinance authorizing the laying of drains to carry off surface water from parts of Grove street, East Fifth street, West Fifth street, West Sixth street, East Seventh street, West Seventh street, Watchung avenue, Park avenue, New street, Plainfield avenue, Grant avenue and West Front street was passed on its first reading. A hearing on this improvement will be held on the evening of Monday, July 3.

The clerk was authorized to notify the water, gas, electric and telephone companies, also all citizens desirous of making sewer connections, that all improvements contemplated on parts of Watchung avenue, West Fourth street, Park avenue and West Seventh street must be made at once, as these streets are to be repaired and no breaks in the paving will be permitted after their improvement.

The budget ordinance, assessing taxes for the year of 1916, was passed on its third and final reading.

The Council adjourned until June 19.

FIRST-CLASS HOTEL IN NEWARK NEWARK.

Named after the founder of the city of Newark, built and opened to commemorate the 250th anniversary celebration, the Robert Treat Hotel, almost adjoining the Park place station of the Hudson tubes and within convenient access of everywhere, stands as a monument to the growth and progress of New Jersey's metropolis. There are very few hotels anywhere so sure to please the exacting traveler as this latest establishment, in which are embodied the best features of the most efficient hotels both in America and abroad. Handsomely appointed and containing 300 rooms and suites and 275 baths and showers, the Robert Treat must prove a boon to those whose business or pleasure calls them to Newark and who hitherto were forced to make their headquarters in New York, where the greater noise offered no recompense in greater comfort. The Wedgewood Room of the Robert Treat is already extremely popular; in fact, the patronage which the hotel commands so soon after its opening is proof that the public needed this accommodation—and appreciates it.

First Test of the Air Pump.

The first public test of the air pump was in 1654, by its inventor, Otto von Guericke, in the presence of Emperor Ferdinand of Germany.

Guericke applied the carefully ground edges of metallic hemispheres, two feet in diameter, to each other. After exhausting the air by his apparatus he attached fifteen horses to each hemisphere. In vain did they attempt to separate them because of the enormous pressure of the atmosphere. The experiment was a great success.

CELERY SALAD.—Celery may be used in combination with chicken, veal, fish, apples, nuts, oysters, peppers, tomatoes, potatoes, beets, etc. A very pretty salad is made by covering crisped white celery cut in cubes with a white mayonnaise made by adding the whites of two eggs to the regular mayonnaise recipe and half a cupful of whipped cream. Garnish with sliced tomatoes and celery.

Chicken Salad In Tomatoes.—Select smooth, good sized tomatoes, peel them and let them get ice cold. Then cut off the tops, scoop out the insides and fill the tomato with chicken salad. Put a dash of mayonnaise on top and serve the tomato on crisp lettuce leaves.

Lamb and Mint Salad.—Cut some cold lamb in cubes, mix with an equal part of cold diced potatoes and some mayonnaise dressing. Serve with mint jelly cut in fancy shapes.

Ham and Cabbage Salad.—Take the odds and ends of a boiled ham, cut very fine, add five hard cooked eggs mashed to a paste with a piece of butter the size of an egg, one-half a pint of shredded cabbage, one chopped apple, one chopped cucumber pickle and celery seed, pepper and mustard to taste. Place in a salad bowl, put a little of the shredded cabbage on top with watercress or parsley.

Liver and Egg Salad.—Take one cupful of chopped cooked liver, either boiled or fried; three hard boiled eggs and two small onions. Chop the eggs and liver together, but not too fine. Chop the onion very fine. Mix all with a French dressing and serve on lettuce.

Fish and Radish Salad.—Separate into flakes with a fork any cold fresh or canned fish, season with pepper, lemon juice and a few drops of table sauce and pack firmly in a mold. Chill thoroughly, and at serving time cut into squares. Arrange on a bed of radish leaves and parsley, place a radish rose in the center of each square and serve with mayonnaise dressing.

Sweet Potato Salad.—Peel and boil a good sized sweet potato, mash thoroughly, stir in a lump of butter and two tablespoonfuls of milk. Allow to cool, then stir in one-half cupful of chopped nut meats of any kind and serve with mayonnaise dressing.

"The emperor wishes you to sing to him."

Daddy's Bedtime Story

A Poor Little Kitchen Maid Knows The Nightingale.

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

THIS is what daddy told Jack and Evelyn after supper: "Once the emperor of China read in a book that a beautiful nightingale lived in his garden, but he never knew this. So he sent his high courtiers out to find the nightingale and bring it to sing for him. Nobody at court had ever seen the nightingale, so there was great excitement, for they all feared the emperor's displeasure. While they were hunting one man went to a poor little maid in the kitchen and asked her if she had ever seen the nightingale. 'I know it very well,' said she. 'Nights I take soup to my sick mother who lives by the sea. On my way back I am tired and rest awhile in the woods. There I hear the nightingale singing.'

"'Little kitchen maid,' said the highest courtier, 'I will let you see the emperor dining if you will take me to the nightingale. It must sing for the emperor tonight.'

"So the little kitchen maid led half the court to the woods where the nightingale usually sang. As they were all hunting a cow began to bellow.

"'There we have it!' cried a young courtier. 'What a wonderful power for so small a creature! I have certainly heard it before.'

"'Those are cows bellowing,' said another.

"Then frogs began to croak in the marsh. 'There it is—just like the tinkling of church bells!' cried another Chinaman.

"'No, those are frogs,' said the little kitchen maid.

"Then the nightingale began to sing!

"'There it is!' cried the little girl. 'Listen—there he sits!' And she pointed to a little gray bird sitting on a branch.

"'How common it looks!' said the highest courtier. 'Seeing so many grand people from the court must have frightened away all its color!'

"'Little nightingale,' called the little kitchen maid out loud, 'the emperor wishes you to sing to him tonight.'

"'With the greatest pleasure,' answered the bird, warbling beautifully.

"'It is just like crystal bells,' said the highest courtier. 'See its little throat! It is amazing that I have never heard it sing before. I'm sure it will be a great success at court.'

"'Shall I sing again to the emperor?' asked the bird, thinking the emperor was there.

"What a happy bird, daddy! Will you please get Jack and me a nightingale?" asked Evelyn. And daddy kissed her.

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS EVA LEONARD

Mrs. Mertage and Ethel are Duly Impressed by the Forsyth Home.

"Now don't miss the afternoon train," called Ethel Gordon as she climbed on board the Kansas City train behind her mother. She smiled and waved her hand to her husband when she was seated. Ralph waved in return, rather indifferently it must be confessed.

"I really believe he is getting old," thought Ethel to herself. "He certainly has a worried look. I never noticed it before. I suppose it is all my extravagance." She shrugged her shoulders and dismissed the subject.

"Why don't you answer?" her mother was saying in insistent tones.

"Pardon me. I was thinking of Ralph." Ethel laughed.

"Don't be sentimental. It is not becoming to you." There was a tone of finality in Mrs. Mertage's reply.

"I was saying that we had better get our shopping done this morning, for after lunch there will not be any time. Besides, we must pick out the things, and then get the Forsyths to indorse us," continued the mother.

"Oh, I half believe we had better not do anything about it," said Ethel doubtfully. "I hate to ask the Forsyths to recommend us, and I dread to have any more scenes with Ralph over money matters. I can get along with this suit. It does not look so bad. Ralph spoke about how well I looked."

Mrs. Mertage sniffed. "Some men take that way to keep their wives from getting more clothes. You are foolish not to have what you need to wear." Ethel needed little urging, so it was decided that they would tell the Forsyths that they had a little shopping to do before coming to the house.

They arrived at the home of their friends about noon. Jack met them at the door. Mrs. Mertage looked him over approvingly. He was scarcely thirty, tall, distinguished looking. His expansive sincerity and good will were utterly delightful. Nobody could have guessed from his manner that he had a rent roll and a safe margin at the end of the year.

"They have everything, simply everything," thought Ethel, "but he is exactly as he used to be before he inherited his money." A sudden fierce envy possessed her, as she contrasted the circumstances of these people with her own. They lived in lovely surroundings without a care. They had joyous and kindly dispositions, while she had to manipulate her husband constantly to keep him in a pleasant mood, because she spent more money than he thought they could afford. They had quarreled darkly already. What would he say when he found that she had run him in debt sixty dollars for a suit that he would insist she did not need? What would be the end of their marriage?"

"What do you say to that?" Ethel started from her revery, and looking up caught Jack's merry eyes looking at her for a reply. She flushed and he repeated his question.

"I was proposing that we take a spin around town this afternoon, getting back to the station to meet your husband. Is it agreeable?"

"Oh, I should like it of all things. The city, that is what I want to see. I love the bustle and confusion. It is so deadly still in Fairport. No noise except what I make myself ever comes to my ears." Jack laughed.

"I am going to take Ethel in front with me, so I can explain all the exciting points of Kansas City to her," announced Jack to his wife when the machine drove up to the door.

"All right, I will entertain Mrs. Mertage," was his wife's cheerful answer.

The Satisfaction of Being Distinctively Dressed cannot always be measured in mere terms of money. Many of New York's best dressed women spend but very modest sums for their gowns.

They discovered the secret in the Maxon Model Gown Shop, where they obtain many of the choicest creations—products of the world's famous fashion designers—at prices even lower than they formerly paid for an ordinary gown.

No two of our frocks are alike. Each is a model size and each one is perfect in workmanship and details. If you wear model sizes, this is your opportunity.

NEWS AND VIEWS
Conducted by
THE W. C. T. U.

If the enthusiasm for prohibition generated at the various religious conferences, assemblies and conventions being held at this time of the year can be fused into aggressive activity, the days of John Barleycorn are most certainly numbered. It is to be hoped that our Congressmen in Washington are noting the exuberance with which the various denominational bodies are dealing with the question which many of them as lawmakers have deliberately ignored or treated with scant courtesy.

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian church, in its stirring resolution for nation-wide prohibition, spoke for nearly two million people; the General Conference of the Methodist for five million; the Baptist Convention (North and South) for three million, and other bodies for a lesser number. These members of the Protestant churches form a mighty body of voters and a larger company of sentiment-creators, and if some of our Congressional representatives could be convinced that the various "Be It Resolveds" unanimously and enthusiastically adopted during the past few weeks were certain to be translated into votes against them when their names next appear as candidates for political honors, they might evince a keener interest in the District of Columbia prohibition bill and the resolution for a national Constitutional amendment.

The Church of God is aroused, there is no doubt about that! So must Congress be if it is to continue to represent the voting members of that church.

The Mayor of Seattle, in a single brief sentence, confesses to a state of mind which we wish would be experienced by every anti-prohibitionist in the United States. "I voted wet and am ashamed of it," admitted the Chief Executive of the Pacific Coast metropolis to a newspaper man the other day. His reasons, you ask? They are undoubtedly to be found on every street and in every ward of the city he governs; but he opened his heart to tell the newspaper man of one of them: "I haven't had a woman in my office crying and saying that her husband hasn't turned in any money in six months. I have not had this occur since the first of January, when the saloons were closed. There used to be four or five a day."

The Mayor has plenty of company nowadays in his change of attitude, for many a former pro-liquor enthusiast has become a "prohibition trail-hitter." The wonder is there are not more of them, for it is quite beyond comprehension how any man who voted for the retention of saloons in his own city or State can be otherwise than ashamed as he observes the results of prohibition, and realizes that he tried with his ballot to set back the wheels of progress. As he learns of the decrease in his community of criminals and of the idle vagrant class, there cannot fail to come to him the uncomfortable consciousness that if every other man had voted as did he there would now be hundreds of men languishing in the jails and prisons who have, through the elimination of the saloon temptation, become law abiding citizens.

He hears of the tremendous increase in savings in the banks—the result of prohibition—and if he gives himself time for contemplation he will be oppressed with the thought that scores of families which are today in comfort, with a rainy-day fund in the bank, had he and voters of like mind had their way, would be pinched by poverty because the bread-winner was squandering his wages over the bar.

The citizen of today who votes for the continuation of the legalized liquor traffic in his community sins against so great light that his action is unjustifiable from any point of view. Not only does he stultify his own conscience, but he takes upon himself the fearful responsibility of retarding the moral, social and economic progress of his city and every resident thereof.

Prohibition Arkansas has been for the last three years experiencing a steady decrease in the floating indebtedness of the State, a decrease which has kept pace with the increased prosperity. The amount of indebtedness as given under date of April 21 for the past two years, and for 1916 is: 1914, $92,640.41; 1915, $770,325.61; 1916, $462,915.93. There is every reason to believe that before the end of 1916 the deficit will be wiped out, as it is expected that between now and August, 1916, over a million dollars will be paid in as 1915 taxes. This will wipe out the deficit, pay the running expenses of the State government and leave a balance of nearly $200,000 in the treasury.

The national banks of Portland, Ore., are reporting an increase of $1,457,056 in deposits for the seven-week period beginning March 7.

The Waukegan (Ill.) Humane Society, after ten days of prohibition in the city, reports that calls for assistance have materially decreased. Every day the officers of the society are visited by grateful women who formerly needed the help of the society and whose husbands are now working steadily and bringing home their pay envelopes. Grocery store proprietor, meat men and dry goods merchants all report an increase in business and more prompt payment even in the short time since the saloons have been eliminated.

"The growth in our business for January, February, March and April, as compared with the same months last year, has been easily 10 per cent. in wearing apparel, shoes and stocking," asserts George A. Phillips, manager of the Palace Department Store, of Spokane, Wash. "Our business has shown an increase every month since the first of the year," states J. L. Paine, manager of the Crescent, another large department store.

The California Industrial Accident Commission, in the "Safety" number of its Quarterly Bulletin, says: "Cutting out booze costs nothing and pays dividends."

The saloon, as such, never helped the working man to make a clean fight against child labor, in favor of higher wages and better shop conditions. When a strike for these and other reforms is in progress, the wise labor leader orders his men to keep away from the saloons, for he knows from his broad experience that open saloons usually result in lost strikes.

NEW PAY SCHEDULE FOR THE POLICEMEN

Graded According to Service—Chief Gets $2,000 Beginning July 1.

Policemen and firemen will both get their raises beginning July 1, although the schedule of new salaries for the fire department was not ready last night when the Common Council met. Policemen are to be divided into six classes, according to years of service. The classes, irrespective of chief, captain, lieutenant and sergeants, are as follows: A, six years; B, five years; C, four years; D, three years; E, two years; F, one year. The police committee has the right to promote a member for meritorious service, without forcing him to serve his full time in any class, or it has the power to force him to serve more than one year in any class. Salaries are fixed as follows:

Chief	$2,000
Captain	1,500
Lieutenant	1,400
Sergeants	1,300
Class A	1,200
Class B	1,150
Class C	1,100
Class D	1,050
Class E	950
Class F	900

This ordinance was introduced by Chairman Babcock, of the police committee and was passed on its first and second readings by unanimous vote. Chairman Cose stated that he had not yet worked out the schedules for the fire department, but that his ordinance would be ready at the meeting of June 19, and that it would make the increase in salaries effective July 1.

KEARNY HIGH BEATS BOROUGHITES; PLAINFIELD WANTS ANOTHER WHACK

North Plainfield High School concluded its 1916 relations with Kearny High School yesterday afternoon at the latter place by dropping a 7-4 contest. The visitors lacked the initiative which is usually characteristic of their playing, while the twelve hits secured were not utilized to the best advantage.

In order to reserve Dilts for the contest with Battin High School today and also to give him ample time to recover from his labor on Saturday, Townley was sent to the mound. It was conclusively demonstrated that he had missed his calling as a pitcher, not being at home in his new abode. The Kearnyites were able to collect eight lusty blows at critical times, which were of intrinsic value to the scoring department.

Dilts proved his versatility yesterday by clouting out four hits in as many times at bat, while Andy McDonough made his presence felt by connecting for two doubles. The boroughites have four more contests scheduled, one of which will probably be with Plainfield High School this coming Saturday.

Queries--Comment--Answers

Query—What is the eleventh wedding anniversary known as? I mean what it signifies; for example, the fiftieth is known as the golden anniversary.—Y. U.

Answer—The eleventh anniversary is known as the "steel anniversary."

Query—When is the star Saturn visible?—L. P.

Answer—The evening star Saturn may be seen from January 4 to July 12.

Query—Why does a woman always get off a trolley car backwards? Why do women carry these tiny umbrellas that just cover the front of their faces?—E. T.

Answer—It's the "style" for women to get off trolley cars backwards, and anyway, even if it wasn't fashionable, certain modes of dress require a peculiar step-down. We presume that a woman carries the small umbrella to keep the freckles off her nose when the sun is shining, and to keep the paint from washing off when it's raining. However, we don't claim to be an authority on either one of these subjects, so the best thing for you to do is to put the questions to some woman yourself. We want to hang on to this earth a little while longer.

Query—When does summer officially begin? A says it began June 1, B says it hasn't started yet.—K. K.

Answer—It is due in Plainfield at 1:16 o'clock the afternoon of June 21, but the seasons haven't been keeping their appointments very well of late, and we may be wearing overcoats on that date.

Query—What is the five-mile bicycle record for amateurs?—C. B.

Answer—The amateur five-mile record was established August 12, 1909, in Salt Lake City, by Edward Mayer. It is 10:11 1-5.

Query—What is the pay for United States volunteer soldiers ranked as corporals?—D. S.

Answer—The corporal gets $252 a year, this pay being increased with each enlistment to the seventh.

those places, but the representative present last night admitted that there was a partial sentiment expressed in favor of Plainfield, because of the short distance from New York and the presence of skilled mechanics, and that a half-way suitable offer would bring the concern here. Considerable enthusiasm was manifested among the business men and a number, including A. E. Force, M. C. VanArsdale, President Herman Schwed and Henry Shuldenfrie querried Mr Bowen concerning his company's plans for manufacture and distribution.

It is proposed to place a minimum of $50,000 worth of stock in Plainfield hands and sentiment expressed to date indicates that this amount will be readily subscribed providing the plans for locating the factory here materialize. J. D. Loizeaux also spoke in behalf of the automobile and its promoters, urging the business men to do everything possible to bring the industry to Plainfield at some date in the near future.

During the business session J. J. Varley, chairman of the committee in charge of the campaign to establish a public comfort station in the business section, reported that twelve petitions had been circulated and that there appeared to be a general demand for it. The matter has been taken up with the Common Council and Councilman Charles S. Sminck, of the Public Health Committee, has assured the association of his support. Routine matters, consisting of the election of several new members and discussion relative to affiliating with the State Chamber of Commerce, occupied the remainder of the meeting time.

REV. DR. EATON DEFENDS HIS NEW YORK ADDRESS

Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, pastor of the Madison Avenue Baptist church, New York, whose address before the West Side Young Men's Christian Association, New York, on Sunday, caused considerable comment, backed up his declarations yesterday when he was accused of assailing the Wilson administration. He said that before the address he assured the gathering of his belief in President Wilson, and stated that he had in view simply the task of educating the American people for the momentous questions they are facing.

RECREATION NOTES

The Zephrys and Athenians will meet in the Plainfield High School tonight. The former club will hold their annual meeting tonight and elect officers for the coming year.

Swimming classes for men and women will be held in the High School pool tomorrow night. The women will occupy the pool from 7:30 to 8:30 and at the latter time the Girls' Friendly Society will use the pool until 9 o'clock. The men will have the use of it from nine o'clock on.

MEN'S CLUB SOCIAL.

The executive committee of the Men's Club of Grace church has planned another social meeting for the members and their friends Wednesday evening, June 14, at the Park Club bowling alleys. This will be the last meeting until Fall and a large attendance is expected.

SOME SPICY SPORT CHATS

Boston Braves Loom Up as Strong Pennant Contender.

OLD MACHINE IS WRECKED.

Few Members of 1914 Championship Team Are Left—This Year's Aggregation Is a Strong One—New Scoring Rule Stirs Up Trouble.

The wrecking of the Boston Braves' machine, which steam rolled everything that stood in its way in 1914, deserves a chapter by itself in baseball history.

Joe Connolly alone remains of the five gardeners who helped to bring a world's championship to Boston. Leslie Mann is with the Cubs, George Whitted is on the Phillies' roster, while Herb Moran and Ted Cather have skidded into the minors.

Only two of the five infielders toted around in 1914 are still with the club. "Butch" Schmidt, who used to first base with considerable class, has quit the game; Charles Deal is with the St. Louis Browns, and Oscar Dugey, utility man, is doing similar work for the Phillies.

Cocreham, Cottrell, Crutcher and Hess, who were among the pitchers that got a split of the world series gold in 1914, have passed along. Of the regular hurlers who worked under Stallings in 1914 only three remain—Tyler, James and Rudolph.

But the wrecking of the 1914 team has enhanced the chances of the 1916 outfit because the new Braves combination is far more powerful than the world champion aggregation. The 1914 Braves wouldn't have much of a chance in the coming pennant battle simply because the other teams have been strengthened far beyond their 1914 power. Stallings saw that he had to rebuild with stronger material—and he has done it.

An old controversy has popped up in a new guise. Frank Baker is the storm center and Eddie Collins is his accomplice. The subject for debate is: "Resolved, That Collins' skillful work on the bases had much to do with fattening Baker's batting average and that Baker will find himself lost without Eddie's assistance as the season rolls on."

This is simply a rehash of the ancient assertion that Ty Cobb keeps Sam Crawford hitting well. As a matter of fact, Collins might help Baker more than Cobb does the men who follow him, for Eddie is a more conservative ball player than the Peach. Ty does worry the pitchers when he gets on the bases. He will make them waste a lot of balls, and this should help the batter. But he worries his teammates too. The Georgian is an individualist. He plays his own game in base running and very frequently crosses everybody when he goes down. The batters following him, of course, are very anxious to help him home, and the general situation is one of unrest, with everybody sharing in it. While Ty does help get the pitcher in the hole, he doesn't aid the hitting of his teammates by anything like the margin claimed by some folks.

Peculiarities of scoring rules are always interesting. A happening that occasionally causes comment developed in a recent game between St. Louis and Pittsburgh in St. Louis, when a batter in turning to get out of the way of a "bean ball" accidentally tipped the sphere and sent it rolling down the third base line in fair territory. Smith, the Cardinal in question, of course was compelled to sprint for first base and was thrown out. But the base runner advanced just as though he had been legitimately sacrificed.

Nevertheless the retired batsman was charged with a time at bat! This is proper, but rather unfair to Smith.

If the ball had popped safe he would have been credited with an "accidental" hit. Why not relieve him of an undeserved time at bat by calling it a sacrifice even though it was chance?

A few days later in the same city official scoring again caused trouble. It started when Pittsburgh writers criticised the work of the St. Louis official at the Cardinal park for not giving "Babe" Adams a no hit game. One dinky hit that many thought was an error by Schultz was the sole black mark against the Pirate hurler.

The present system is truly faulty. Scorers are appointed by home clubs. They are invariably working newspaper men. Sometimes, as in that city, the same man is not on duty in all games, but the job is "split," representatives of several papers taking turns at the task.

Thus several individualities may enter into the scoring in the same town.

Pittsburgh writers suggest that the league select a paper without permitting any one to know which one it is and take its box scores from that publication. It is argued that the scorers would then each give his own version without waiting for the official on it.

But this would only confuse fans, who want one ruling on plays and that an official one. And they are entitled to it.

The obvious course if the scoring is not satisfactory is to take it out of the scribes' hands and establish a corps of league scorers, each to be assigned to certain series, just as are the league umpires.

Alexander Wants to Pitch Phillies to Another Pennant

GROVER CLEVELAND ALEXANDER has asked Manager Pat Moran to use him in at least sixty games this season. Alex is more than anxious for the Phillies to repeat their feat of last season and capture the National league pennant. The great twirler states that he is in wonderful shape and his arm never felt stronger. Last year he worked in forty-nine games. If Alexander participates in sixty games and wins a majority of them Pat Moran's team has an excellent chance to win the flag. Alexander's great work in the box last season had much to do with the Phillies winning the pennant.

CITY LEAGUE MOGULS RAISE PLAYER LIMIT

Several New Names Added at Busy Session in Press Office Last Night.

In order to provide for "vacation material" the City League officials, at their weekly meeting in the Daily Press office last night, decided to increase the player limit from fifteen to eighteen, and, in accordance with this arrangement, several of the teams filed new names for their rosters. Notable among those listed are Cliff Randolph, the well-known twirler, who becomes the property of Hope Chapel, and Herbert Stine, now catching for the International Y. M. C. A. College team at Springfield, Mass. He will be graduated from that institution next Friday, and is expected to don a First Baptist uniform a week from next Saturday.

The Farmer A. C. last night issued release papers to Sims and Ford, replacing these two with Spiel and Hann; Hope released Eddie Conshay; Netherwood added Wahl and Brandt; the Baptists added Dilts in place of Stahl, and Clinton avenue took on Leo Urston and Gerald Linke, the latter having performed during the month with the Plainfield High School nine.

In order to fill their vacancies the Farmers added the names of Donald Sminck, a former Plainfield High School twirler, W. Peterson and Mair, and Hope accepted Stahl, the former North Plainfield High School pitcher, after his name had been scratched off by the Baptist manager.

The controversy that has existed over Jack Garretson's appearance in a Farmer A. C. uniform was settled last night, and he was transferred to the First Baptist Club, the change to take effect this week. Garretson is recognized as one of the best players on the circuit, having been one of the leading semi-pro first basemen and hitters in this section a year ago, and all of the clubs were anxious to tie a string on him. He became the property of First Baptist several weeks ago, but owing to the limited roster of the Farmer A. C. a mutual agreement was arrived at whereby he was allowed to perform for the latter combine up to the present time.

Lew Coriell, who has gained a creditable reputation as an interscholastic umpire in and about Plainfield, and who did a portion of the City League work last year, was added to the list of indicator holders on the circuit.

The addition of such men as Stine, Dilts, Randolph and Coriell to the circuit comes as a welcome announcement, for they will each add considerable strength in their respective positions, and the teams getting the three star players might well consider themselves fortunate.

RAHWAY BATTLE WILL REPLACE P. H. S.-ALUMNI

In looking over the football schedule of the Plainfield High School for the coming season many have been surprised to find no game scheduled with the alumni. In its place a contest has been arranged with the Rahway High School eleven, to be played at Rahway on Thanksgiving Day morning.

The two teams have not met since they fought for the county title two years ago, Rahway downing the locals after a sensational game, 19 to 14. Both teams this year have their minds settled on capturing honors in the Union County Football League, and as Rahway has made an attractive offer it has been accepted.

CHANCE FOR PRESS ADVERTISERS TO ATTRACT THE ATTENTION OF THE ENTIRE COUNTY.

As the result of an agreement between the Plainfield Daily Press and the Elizabeth Evening Times any advertiser placing a classified ad in the Press may have that same ad inserted in the Elizabeth Evening Times upon the payment of one-half more than is charged for the Daily Press insertion alone. Thus, if an advertisement in the Daily Press costs forty cents, the same advertisement may be placed in the Elizabeth paper for an additional twenty cents.

The Elizabeth Evening Times has a circulation of 9,000 and is widely distributed throughout Union County. Thus if an advertiser places his advertisement in the Plainfield Daily Press and Elizabeth Evening Times he places it before the eyes of thousands of readers at a very small cost.

Most advertisers welcome the opportunity to attract the attention of the whole county to their offerings and with the co-operation of the Elizabeth Evening Times the Plainfield Daily Press is now able to make this possible. The Elizabeth Evening Times has earned a reputation for itself as an advertising medium, especially along the classified line, and it is a well known fact that its influence extends into other counties besides Union.

SOON AT WORK ON NEW PLANT

Getting Ready to Break Ground for American Motors Corporation.

MANNING IS MASON

Company Not to Be Confused With Big Automobile Merger, Although Louis Chevrolet is Interested in Both.

Ground for the new Plainfield plant of the American Motors Corporation will soon be broken. Workmen are busy cutting away the brush on the site near Grant avenue and Front street, and within another week the real work of construction will be underway.

Lee Manning has the contract for the mason work, and he is organizing his men for a beginning of the laying of foundations.

The American Motors plant will have a capacity of 10,000 cars yearly. It will be of the most improved type of mill construction. The main structure, or assembly shop, is 400 feet long by 60 feet wide. It has been laid out with the object of providing the utmost economy of effort together with the most favorable working conditions. Materials and parts will enter at one end and after passing through the hands of successive groups of machinists, each of whom is trained to handle just one operation, will be driven out at the other end—a finished chassis. After a thorough test on the road the body will be added and the necessary equipment installed, and the car will then be ready for delivery. It is estimated that more than thirty cars per day can be turned out of the assembly plant under these conditions by the Progressive System of production to be installed.

In addition to the main building the plant will include an administration building and power house, and provision has been made for the addition of other units as required by the extension of the Company's operations.

In explaining why the plant is to be located here an official announcement of President William Howard Hoople says:

"Plainfield, New Jersey, has been selected as the location of the American Motors plant after thorough investigation and careful consideration of many proposed sites. Here good labor is plentiful and shipping conditions are excellent. The central location affords ready access to the Eastern market while the nearness to the Atlantic seaboard enables the Company to ship its product to foreign countries and to the Pacific Coast, via the Panama Canal, at a large saving in freight cost over manufacturers in the Middle West."

The American Motors Corporation has been confused by some people with the American Motors Company, a new combination of automobile manufacturing plants. They are not connected, although Louis Chevrolet, vice president of the American Motors Corporation, which is the local concern, is a moving factor in the new merger. This merger is of the Willys-Overland Company, the Hudson Company, the Chalmers Company, the Chevrolet holdings, the Chandler Company, the White Company, and a large number of automobile accessory manufacturers.

ELTON HOAGLAND HONORED AT BETHLEHEM SCHOOL

Elston Hoagland, son of Postmaster and Mrs. A. E. Hoagland, who is completing a college preparatory course in the Bethlehem Preparatory School, took a leading part in the Shakespeare pageant at the Lehigh Stadium this year. Mr. Hoagland played the part of Antony and gave the speech over Cæsar's body.

Mr. Hoagland also was the leader of his team in a school debating contest on the subject "The Policy of President Wilson in Mexico Was Justifiable." His team was successful and he will receive a gold medal at commencement.

WILL MEET CANDIDATES.

Owing to the great number that are still seeking admission into the First Baptist church, it is found necessary to have a second additional evening this week beside the regular midwek service tonight, namely tomorrow evening, when candidates can appear before the pastor and deacons, who will meet them from 8 to 9 at the church. Those who are intending to unite by letter are asked to secure their letters from their respective churches at the very first opportunity.

POSTMASTER WANTS BIDS.

Postmaster A. E. Hoagland would like to receive bids for furnishing either an automobile or horse and wagon for the delivery of parcels post. Further information concerning the same can be obtained from Mr. Hoagland.

TEUTONS HAMMER AT VERDUN GATE

Furious Assaults Find French Lines Still Holding Firm.

WHOLE LINE IS ENGAGED

Asquith to Act as War Secretary Until Kitchener's Successor is Named—German Torpedo Boat Destroyer is Sunk.

Paris, June 7.—After a brief lull in infantry fighting east of the Meuse River the Germans have again launched a powerful assault against the French position at For Vaux, the gateway to Verdun on the northeast. Despite the fury of the attack it was repulsed by French forces under Major Raynal, the French War Office announced today. All day yesterday and all last night the big guns of the Germans west of the Meuse were in action raining shells of all calibre against the French positions at Hill No. 304, and in Caurettes' Wood. In the Vosges the Germans are again very active in the sector of Hartmannsweilerkopf. All the French positions in that region were subjected to a furious cannonade last night.

French Lose a Destroyer.

The French torpedo boat destroyer Fantassin has been sunk in collision with another ship. The crew was saved.

Asquith is War Secretary.

London, June 7.—Premiem Asquith will act as Secretary of State of War until a successor to Lord Kitchener is appointed, it was officially announced today.

Torpedo Boat Hits Mine.

A despatch from Amsterdam quotes the Telegraaf as saying that a German torpedo boat destroyer struck a mine and went down off Zeebrugge on May 31.

MRS. STEWART BUYS RARE PORCELAIN JAR

Was Donated Belgian Relief Committee From the Carvalho Collection.

The contribution of the Local Belgian Relief Committee to the fund of the Allied Bazaar, now being held in New York, was increased $200 this morning, this sum being the amount of a check sent by Mrs. Percy H. Stewart in payment for a beautiful Chinese porcelain ginger jar, one of the articles donated the Plainfield branch. It was contributed by Mrs. S. S. Carvalho, of this city, and was taken from the wonderful Carvalho collection, one of the largest and most complete in this country. A price of $125 was placed upon the jar, but when it came to the attention of Mrs. Stewart, she was so pleased with the opportunity of securing it that she voluntarily increased the purchase to the sum stated. The porcelain had not left Plainfield, and the committee is more than pleased that it should be secured by a Plainfielder and remain in the city.

The ginger jar was manufactured in 1661, during the dynasty of K'ang-Hsi, who was in power at the time China produced its greatest porcelains. It is described as being of hard cobalt blue, with hawthorne decorations. It is signed with the double circles of K'ang-Hsi, the insignia used by the ruler on all porcelains during his reign. These circles were meant to convey his statement that the works of art were as wide as the outer world and also of the inner world of China itself. K'ang-Hsi never allowed his name to be placed on any of the output, as he feared some Christian infidel might smash the porcelain and trample it beneath his feet. Mrs. Carvalho has had the ginger jar for twenty-five years.

TOWNSHIP COMMITTEE PASSES 'PHONE ORDINANCE

After hanging fire for two years and a half the telephone ordinance for Piscataway Township became an established fact at last evening's regular monthly session of the Township Committee in New Market when it passed on its second and third readings.

Among other business was the appointment of Stanley Day, Joseph E. Kelley and John M. Evans as members of the electric light committee.

KENNETH CONDIT NOW A BENEDICT

Takes Miss Marjorie Walbridge Brown, of This City, for His Bride.

MANY GUESTS PRESENT

Ceremony Performed at the Crescent Avenue Church by Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie—Reception Follows—Couple to Live at Princeton.

A wedding of social prominence took place last night at 8 o'clock when Miss Marjorie Walbridge Brown, daughter of Mrs. Edward McWilliams and the late Paul Taylor Brown, of Philadelphia, became the bride of Kenneth Hamilton Condit, son of Colonel and Mrs. O. H. Condit, of East Orange, at a ceremony performed in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church by the Rev. Dr. John Sheridan Zelie, the pastor. The edifice was attractively decorated with blue iris and calla lilies and yellow and brown iris in profusion was banked behind the pulpit.

As the bridal party entered the church, the wedding march was played on the organ by E. Mettler Davis. Miss Brown, who was given in marriage by her step-father, Howard McWilliams, was attired in a gown of white satin trimmed with old point lace. She wore a train veil of tulle and lace with a broad band of satin surrounding it. The veil was arranged in coronet fashion and was caught up with sprays of orange blossoms. The bride carried a bridal bouquet of lilies of the valley, orange blossoms and white jasmine.

Mrs. Edwin Muller, Jr., a sister of the bride, whose marriage took place last month, acted as matron of honor, and wore her bridal gown of tulle and sea pearl embroidery and carried a bouquet of rambler roses and forget-me-nots. The bridesmaids were the Misses Elizabeth Oliphant, of Trenton; Amy Condit, of East Orange; Audrey Gernon, of New York, and Eleanor De Graff, of Plainfield. They wore yellow taffeta frocks trimmed with cream lace and blue velvet ribbon. Each carried an arm basket of blue larkspur and roses.

Philip Condit, a brother of the groom, acted as best man, while the ushers were the Messrs. Ernest Walbridge, Jack Garvin, Edwin Muller, Clifford Merryfield, of New York, and Sumner Harrison, of Newark.

A reception was tendered three hundred guests after the ceremony at the home of Mr. and Mrs. McWilliams, at 1007 Hillside avenue. Guests came from New York, East Orange, Princeton and this city.

Later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Condit left for a wedding trip. They will visit the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. McWilliams at Rhode Island and other places before returning to Princeton, in the fall, where they will make their home. Mr. Condit is assistant professor in the engineering department at Princeton University.

FUNERAL SERVICE OF DANIEL ALPAUGH HELD

The funeral of Daniel Alpaugh, who died early Monday morning after a few weeks' illness, was held at the late home at 135 East Sixth street, this afternoon. The service was conducted by Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church of which Mr. Alpaugh was a member, and was attended by a large gathering of relatives and friends. Two of Mr. Alpaugh's favorite hymns, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," and "Jesus Safely Pilot Me," were sung by Miss Grace Carroll.

Numerous floral tributes extended included a beautiful set piece from the commission firm of E. S. Alpaugh & Co., of New York, of which the deceased was a member. Interment was made in Hillside cemetery and the following acting as pall bearers: Dr. T. S. Davis, Charles W. Eoff, and Garret Q. Packer, of this city; Miller Krymer, of Elizabeth; George Martin, of Maplewood, and Edward Wilkenson, of Philadelphia.

STRAWBERRY FESTIVAL.

The annual strawberry festival given under the auspices of the Woman's Society of the Seventh-Day Baptist church will be held in the church parlors tonight at 8 o'clock. An interesting program has been arranged for the evening during which the following persons will entertain: Charles Potter Titsworth, bass soloist; Miss Irma Good, soprano soloist; Miss Lillian Lamson, recitals from plays, and Theodore Davis and Miss Mable Maxson, piano solos. Strawberries and ice cream will be sold during the evening. Admission to the entertainment is free to the public.

LOCAL SOCIETY TO ATTEND.

The Holy Name Society of St. Joseph's church will meet in the church hall Sunday afternoon at 2:30 to march in a body to the trolley station and take the two o'clock car for Westfield, where the members will assist in the cornerstone laying exercises of Holy Trinity church. All members are urged to be present at the borough church Sunday afternoon at 1:45.

WHOLE FAMILY HELD FOR THE GRAND JURY

Wholesale Theft From Force Store Results in Three Arrests.

Edward Christian and Mildred Corpren, brother and sister, were this morning held in $1,000 bonds to await action of the grand jury in connection with wholesale thefts from the store of A. E. Force & Co., and Sarah Christian, wife of Edward, was held on a $200 bond.

Christian was formerly a porter at the Force store, and yesterday morning he was caught in the act of taking four valuable dresses from the store. After an exciting chase he was arrested by Patrolman Bebout. When he had been locked up in the police station Lieutenant Morris Higgins went to the home and there he found more than $700 worth of stolen goods. As a result of his investigations he locked up the wife and sister.

All three were tried before Judge William DeMeza in police court this morning, and all were held for the grand jury, although Christian and his sister were required to make a larger bond than the wife.

ALL IN READINESS FOR INDIAN LEGEND

Annual Spectacle at Watchung Begins Friday Night—Greater Than Ever.

Arrangements for the annual presentation of the Indian Legend of Watchung are completed for the first performance which will be given on the hillside opposite Wetumpka Falls on Friday night. The second performance will be given on Saturday night. The cast with the exception of one change will remain the same as given heretofore. "Deer Prong," the tribal scout, will be impersonated by Thomas Featherstone, of Watchung, this year. The committee in charge has planned a new lighting effect for the mountainside and the comfort of the audiences will be looked after by a corps of ushers. In previous years attendants have demurred because of their inability to get seats when they arrive. The committee wishes to emphasize the fact that reservation is made for 2,000 people and all who wish reservations are urged to communicate with Miss Teresa Schmidt, of Watchung, 'phone number "Plainfield 2059-M," and get their seats reserved in advance. Parking space will be had for automobile parties.

The role of "One Feather," chief of the Watchung Indians, will be again portrayed by W. de La R. Anderson, the author of the legend, and the other leading role of "Wetumpka," Indian princess, will be impersonated by Miss Teresa Schmidt.

GOOD PAYS PENALTY AND IS RELEASED

Plainfield Student at Colgate Satisfies Court Judgment of $250.

Monroe Good, son of Dr. and Mrs. Ezra Good, of this city, who has gained considerable notoriety at Hamilton, N. Y., where he is a student at Colgate, through his participation in a college prank a year ago which resulted in Walter Eddy, a farmer boy, losing his curly locks, is supposed to be a free man today following a period of confinement within the limits of Wampsville. Good was given a hearing by the court at Wampsville and according to report was fined $250, and in default of payment, he was ordered to remain in Wampsville. During this enforced confinement he boarded a with a family and had all his liberty except that he could not leave the place.

The student's father when interviewed concerning the former's troubles said that all of the student-body of Colgate, as well as the faculty was with Good. He said that several students had offered to pay his fine, but he would not accept the money, preferring to take the consequences.

Eddy is said to have appeared about the college town wearing his hair unusually long, so long, in fact, that it almost touched his shoulders. The students all agreed that the luxuriant growth should be cut, and cut it was. This aroused the indignation of Eddy and the court action followed.

NO COMPROMISE IN SIGHT AS CONVENTION IS CALLED TO ORDER; PERKINS ALONE PREDICTS IT

SUPREME COURT JUSTICE CHARLES EVANS HUGHES.

Hughes Looms up as Strongest of Many Possible Nominees.

HARDING IS KEYNOTER

Declares for Americanism, a Strong Foreign Policy and Protective Tariff—Wilson is Bitterly Criticized.

Chicago, June 7.—With the Republican convention actually in session no movement has been made to draw from the strength of Justice Hughes.

Formal steps looking to an agreement between the Republicans and Progressives, who are also in convention here, are expected sometime today. Both conventions will be asked to appoint committees for a conference. Whether this will be done remains to be decided by the delegates themselves.

George W. Perkins, Roosevelt leader, is confident of a compromise that will make the Colonel the choice of both conventions, but in this he has little support. There is no disposition on the part of Old Guard leaders to even discuss Roosevelt. Mr. Perkins made the following statement this morning: "With the opening of the conventions only a few minutes off, my opinion is that they will approach their work on friendly relations which will auger well for a favorable result."

Hughes men accept this statement as evidence that the Progressives will indorse the Justice if he gets the Republican nomination.

The Republican convention was called to order at 11:27 by Chairman Charles D. Hilles, of the National Committee. After the invocation the call was read by Secretary McReynolds, and the convention went into the election of a temporary chairman.

Senator Harding, of Ohio, was elected temporary chairman and addressed the convention. He declared for true Americanism, for adequate defense, for a protective tariff, and for a strong foreign policy which would protect a citizen of the United States wherever he went. He accused the Democratic administration of insincere and inadequate preparedness measures, of vacilation and weakness in handling foreign affairs and of a tariff and taxation policy which would have meant disaster had not the great war brought prosperity and which will ruin the country when the feverish war boom passes.

Temporary Chairman Harding dwelt for some time on the tariff question, which he said had helped to make Germany great and was probably about to be adopted by Great Britain. He himself preferred protective and productive tariff, which prospers America first. Present prosperity is only, he said, the gold sluiced from the river of blood poured out by the horrifying sacrifice of millions of our fellow men and permanent prosperity could only be based on a sound tariff law.

Adjourns Until Tomorrow.

Chairman Harding finished speaking at 1:09. National Chairman Hilles was then recognized and presented the list of temporary officers as agreed upon by the National Committee. The motion to accept the temporary officers was approved on motion of Governor Eberhart, of Minnesota, without dissent. Announcement of the meeting place of the various committees was then made and at 1:26 on motion of State Senator E. R. Brown, of New York, the convention adjourned until 11 o'clock tomorrow. The delegates left the hall in a hurry, all anxious to find out what was going on at the Progressive party convention.

Senator Harding's speech in full will be found on page 9 of today's Press.

Progressives Get Busy.

Chicago, June 7.—The Progressive party formally put its convention under way at 12:29 o'clock this afternoon. Raymond Robins, of Illinois, presided as temporary chairman and sounded the keynote of the party in a carefully considered speech. Raymond Robins declared here today the Progressives would make a third party fight this year should the Republicans refuse to subscribe to Moose principles. He said this in the course of his keynote speech as temporary chairman of the Progressive convention meeting in the Auditorium.

"PREPAREDNESS" IDEA IN PLANS FOR DANCE

Popular Second Night Club Arranging Social Affair Along Those Lines.

In keeping with the spirit of preparedness which now forms one of the nation's chief topics, the Second Night club, the well known and popular local social organization, is completing arrangements for a "Preparedness Dance" to be held on Monday night, June 26, in the Columbus Auditorium. The large committee selected for the purpose includes many versatile young men who are now racing their brains to devise appropriate features. The details have not been given out as yet as a final meeting for arrangements will be held Friday night but it has been announced that the dance will be of the "shirtwaist variety" with an added military touch to carry out the preparedness idea

The Second Night Club has been in existence two years during which time it has conducted a number of the most successful social affairs given in the city or borough of recent date. Patrons of the club's dances always found some surprisingly new features and the attendances grew each succeeding time until capacity crowds were the prevailing rule. It is safe to predict that the coming affair on June 26 will eclipse all previous efforts as the preparedness proposition permits of a wide scope in planning novelties.

Joseph J. Green has been appointed general chairman of the entire committee and he will be assisted by the following members of the club: Music, Eugene McGarry, John J. Duffy, John J. Casey; decoration, George Howe, David B. Doyle, Walter Wilson, James Whelan, William V. Sullivan, Thomas Harding, Albert H. DesNoyers, Patrick Powers and John J. Varley; refreshments, John T. Caulfield, A. A. Cannon, Bernard Brady, George Linke, James J. McNamee; invitation, John J. Coffey James M. Cullen, James P. Lynch; entertainment, Joseph R. Sullivan, Edmund Fitzgerald, John P. Kyle, Joseph F. Murray, J. Frank Hart, Harry J. Pasch, Thomas Connelly, Miles Wilson, Francis Reardon, George Taylor, Edward J. Harding, Jr., Frank Donnelly and John Traynor; preparedness, Daniel J. McAffee, Thomas L. Bebout, Lewis R. Harding, John J McCarthy, F. Otto Linke, Leo Kenney, Cornelius R. Regan, John Geary, William Russ, Henry J. Bryniarski, James Fitzgerald and John Wilson; reception, George J. SURVIVING TRUSTEES FILE AN ACCOUNTING

New York, June 7.—An accounting by the surviving trustees, extending from January, 1911, to December, 1915, of the $800,000 estate left by Mrs. Rebecca K. Ladew, sister of the late Stephen R. Krom, of Plainfield, was filed in the surrogate's court today. Mrs. Ladew was the widow of Harvey Smith Ladew, for many years a prominent leather manufacturer. She died in Asheville, N. C., April 26, 1905.

According to her will the executors and trustees receive $150,000 in trust, to apply $5,000 yearly out of the income as a life estate for Johanna Krom, the principal, at death, to become part of the residuary estate. Each grandchild receives $5,000. Out of a trust fund of $90,000 the sum of $3,000 annually is to be set aside as a life estate for Stephen R. Krom, and at his death and until the marriage of Stephennie Krom, his daughter, $1,000 yearly is to be given her for life. At the death of brother and the daughter the principal is to become part of the residuary estate. The executors of Stephen Krom's estate are Louis J. Krom, of Plainfield; Stanley J. Krom, of Dunellen, and Frederick Krom, of Somerville.

The sum of $300 yearly is to be set aside as a life estate for Martin Krom, after which the principal is to become part of the residuary estate. The sum of $5,000 is left to endow a free bed in one of the New York city hospitals.

MANY HONOR WESTCOTT AT ELIZABETH DINNER

More than fifty Plainfielders attended the dinner given in honor of Attorney General Westcott in Elizabeth last night. Senator James E. Martine, who is Mr. Westcott's opponent for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator, was among those present. Former Mayor Percy H. Stewart, of Plainfield, acted as toastmaster. Included among the speakers were Senator Martine, former Congressman W. E. Tuttle, Jr., Governor Fielder and Congressman H. Heflin, of Alabama.

FINED $25 FOR DISORDER ON CROWDED STREET CAR

James Crocco, arraigned in police court this morning on a charge of disorderly conduct, was fined $25. It was proven to Judge DeMeza that the man had been disorderly on a street car in the presence of a number of women.

FRACTURES HIS LEG IN ELEVEN FOOT FALL

Arthur Vail Taken to Elizabeth Hospital Following Accident on Railroad.

Arthur Vail, who is employed on the bridge gang of the New Jersey Central, is in the Elizabeth General Hospital with a compound fracture of the left leg sustained yesterday afternoon when he fell eleven feet from a scaffolding under the railroad bridge at Spring street, Elizabeth, and landed feet foremost on the concrete foundation of a new bridge which is to be erected there.

The accident was caused by the planking on the scaffold on which Vail was stationed giving way when a fellow worker got on it. This man saved himself.

HAS NARROW ESCAPE IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Raymond Whitford had a narrow escape from serious injury yesterday when his automobile was side swiped by a motor truck at Mariners place, Plainfield, and nearly up-set. Mr. Whitford, eastward bound from this place, turned his car into Mariners place and just as he did so the truck, coming this way, did the same thing. Neither driver anticipated the intention of the other and although both kept their heads the collision could not be averted. Mr. Whitford's car, with a smashed step and wadguard, is in Waller's garage undergoing repairs.

WOMEN TO BOWL HERE.

WILL ORGANIZE STATE ZIONIST CONFERENCE

Prominent Representatives of Movement Will Address Meeting in Newark.

A conference of the Zionists of the State of New Jersey will be held in the city of Newark on Sunday, June 25, in the B'nai Abraham Synagogue, on High street and Thirteenth avenue.

This conference will organize a New Jersey State Zion Association on lines similar to the various state associations formed by the Zionist organization during the past year There are already in existence state associations in Texas, Virginia, Ohio and Wisconsin

At the conference in Newark on June 25, there will be a mass meeting on Sunday evening, which will be addressed by prominent Zionist speakers and in addition by Rabbi Julius Silberfeld, Rabbi Chas. I. Hoffman and Philip J. Schotland. The chairman of the afternoon will be Leon Kohn, of Newark. The Zionist organization has over 25 cities in New Jersey which will participate in the convention.

REMARKABLE BIBLE CLASS IS ORGANIZED HERE

A Bible class taught by Miss Clyde Burnett was formed last evening in the Waashington School on Darrow avenue. It is one of the many fruits of the Biederwolf campaign and is to be conducted on strictly orthodox evangelical lines. It is unsectarian, and is open to men and women of the entire city. The class meets every Tuesday evening at eight o'clock in the Washington School.

It is to be hoped that many will avail themselves of this exceptional opportunity to learn more of the Word of God, and thereby conserve in their own lives the results of the campaign. They should come prepared with Bible and notebook. Miss Burnett is highly qualified both by nature and by grace to lead such a class. Her profound knowledge of the deep things of God and her rich personal experience make it a season of refreshing as she seeks to unfold the Word of God more perfectly.

ARRANGE FOR INDEPENDENCE DAY CONCERT IN THE PARK

BUSINESS MEN'S ASSOCIATION OF PLAINFIELD — RELIABILITY, SERVICE, VALUE, QUALITY — MEMBER

Above is shown the emblem of the Business Men's Association of Plainfield. About seventy merchants of this city are members of the organization, and most of them display this emblem in a conspicuous position on their windows. It stands, however, for more than mere membership in a commercial body. It stands for business honesty, and it is displayed by the merchants in this city who believe that honesty and fair dealing is worth more to them than any temporary advantage which may be gained by taking short cuts which others think brand them as "shrewd." The emblem will never be found on the window of a "fly-by-night" store that comes here for a few weeks or months to take advantage of holiday trade. The store in front of which this emblem is displayed is not here for a few days. It has probably been under the same management for years, and will continue under that management. It is a guarantee that if you have purchased anything in the store which displays it, and you are dissatisfied, you can go back at any time and have any reasonable complaint properly and courteously attended to.

There are many reasons which can be presented in favor of trading in Plainfield. The emblem shown above is the best one of all. The stores which display it are the ones where purchasers are assured of honest values, for every member knows that he will be taken to task by the others if he tries any shady merchandising methods. Perhaps you will say "that sounds all well enough in an advertisement, but they do not practice what they preach." If any reader of this has any doubt that the members of this organization are not jealous of the emblem, it can quickly be dispelled by attending any regular meeting. The frankness with which the business men discuss each other's faults will no doubt be surprising, but it is just that frankness which is making the business men of Plainfield, allied with this organization, strive to be fair to the public in every way. The meetings are held the 1st Monday of every month in Coward's Hall, on Park avenue, and visitors are always welcome. Our members are given a chance to get acquainted with many of the people of the city, and the kicker is made more welcome than the fellow who is easily satisfied, and comes out of mere curiosity. We know that we can all benefit from what the kicker says, for nine times out of ten his kick is a just one.

"But who are the members of the Business Men's Association?" perhaps you will ask. That is a fair question, for it is only for the members of this organization that these advertisements speak. In the next talk the names of every firm will appear.

O'Hara and Wetmore to Appear On Second Day of Chautauqua

W. T. WETMORE—GEOFFREY O'HARA.

GEOFFREY O'HARA, Irish tenor and song writer, and W. T. Wetmore, impersonator, are coming to Chautauqua with their inimitable Irish songs and impersonations in dialect. Mr. O'Hara is the composer of several songs that have been sung around the world, among them "Tennessee, I Hear You Calling Me," and "Your Eyes Have Told Me." He scored an ovation a few years ago as soloist with the Ottawa Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Wetmore has made successful appearances in the Brooklyn Institute and in many cities throughout the country. His programs consist of literary masterpieces, New England legends, Hoosier dialect, gems of English and American literature, all abounding in the choicest humor.

TYPICAL CONVENTION THRONG IN CHICAGO COLISEUM, WHERE REPUBLICAN NATIONAL CONVENTION WILL BE HELD

ALL IS NOT WORK AT CONVENTION WITH DELEGATES OF THE REPUBLICANS

Interesting Side Lights About Men and Women Who Had Lots of Fun at Chicago.

Only a Third as Many Colored Delegates This Year as There Were Four Years Ago.

AN interesting feature of this Republican national convention is the scarcity of color in the scheme of delegates.

Negro delegates have been seen on every hand at former Republican national conventions for years, but this trip they are few and far between. Such negroes as showed up were greeted with a handshake when they dropped in at the headquarters of the various candidates. They have been received with courtesy, told to come again whenever they felt like it and then have been passed along.

Gone are the days when the negro delegates were entertained lavishly, only to be taken in hand by representatives of each presidential candidate on a raise ante.

Four years ago, at this same Chicago, the negro delegates from southern states enjoyed the best the town could afford, and either the Taft or the Roosevelt headquarters — sometimes both—paid the expenses.

Only about twenty-five negro delegates in all have been elected to this convention—one-third the number in 1912.

This largely is because of the new basis of representation agreed upon by the Republican national committee for this convention, which reduced the allotment to the southern states.

In order to modify the feeling of the negroes, a few were squeezed into the delegations from northern states, but these men are decidedly of a different type from the southern beauty delegate. A sample is found in the New York delegation, where Charles W. Anderson of Manhattan, former collector of internal revenue, is an alternate at large.

Few Pickpockets.

Convention delegates or visitors from rural sections going to Chicago with forebodings of pickpockets and warnings against flimflammers have been treated to a surprise this year. Few cases of pocket picking have been found as yet, but there have been many startling discoveries of pocket stuffing. It was amusing to see several ardent Roosevelt men reach down into their pockets for coin and draw out in amazement handfuls of small blue tickets labeled, "Put on your overcoat and hustle for Hughes." The justice of the supreme court having no official boomer, it was impossible to find out who put the cards into the coats.

The Delegates' Wives.

One of the "convention wives" is nursing no delusions about the convention pleasures. "The convention wife," she said when found in one of the least crowded corners of the Congress hotel, "must have unfailing patience and understanding, more of it even than at home. If her husband forgets all about her, including his appointments with her; leaves her waiting for him in a hotel lobby for hours, neglects his meals and hers, stays out all night at a conference or caucus and lets her find or lose her way alone—well, she must simply accept it as all in the game and never let it ruffle her feelings."

Just then her husband appeared, and she acted naturally, but not as advertised. He was still listening to her when she pushed him out of sight and into Michigan avenue.

Owned Indiana's Vote.

W. H. Miller is of, for and from Ohio. As far as he is concerned Indiana is a barren wilderness somewhere off in the Rocky mountains. Lake Erie marks the jumping off place into the Arctic ocean, and Pennsylvania represents a negligible district on the east. He regards Cincinnati as the last thing on the south of anywhere.

He mopped his brow and dubiously trod the tiles in the Congress lobby. A Nebraska farmer was talking with a delegate from Indiana.

"There," said the Indiana person, pointing, "is W. H. Miller. He owns all the votes in Ohio."

"The dickens you say," observed the farmer, taking Miller in with a comprehensive optical survey. "I'd like to meet him."

"Come on," invited the Indianian. "He's like I tell you—owns all the votes in Ohio."

"Votes!" exclaimed the Nebraskan. "Never mind interducin' me. I thought you said 'oats.'"

Pepper Invented "Days Off."

Charles M. Pepper of the Root contingent is a newspaper immortal. Also he is a tradition and a landmark. He wears the laurel wreath of the gods of gossip, and there is a niche waiting for him in the heavenly gallery of journalistic fame.

Charles M. is the man who invented "days off" for morning newspaper men. Shall he be given three rousing ones and a tiger?

When Charles M. was a Chicago Tribune man thirty-three years ago it was the custom for all editorial employees to work seven days a week. But Charles M. had read somewhere, possibly in the Bible, that the world was made in six days. He tried it on the Tribune staff—the six day thing—and that schedule still sticks on every morning newspaper.

Along in the eighties Charles M. was regarded as the most punctilious person engaged in newspapering. Punctuality was not regarded as an enterprise of any note in those days, but Charles M. persisted.

One day he was an hour late. He apologized profusely, blushed very red and stammered a great deal.

"It won't happen again," he assured the managing editor.

"What was the cause?" demanded the managing editor in mock seriousness.

"Well, you see," stammered Pepper, "I stepped out to get married. It won't happen again."

Mr. Pepper has forsaken newspapering long since and has made fame for himself as United States tariff commissioner and in other capacities.

Looks Like a Rubber Plant.

In the lobby of the Congress there are several huge bronze jardinieres. They are some five feet in height and perhaps four feet in diameter at the center and taper to the floor. They each contain a rubber plant.

A houseman of the hotel approached one of these decorations with a large vessel of water and up ended his vessel into the jardiniere.

There was a shriek from the side lines.

"Hey, Tom, look out!"

The houseman looked around, frightened. An Oklahoma delegate in a settee laughed.

"By gum," said he, "I'd a swore you was pourin' water on Tom Smith. Tom's from McAllister, and he's a dead ringer for one o' them vases."

But in defense of Mr. Smith let it be written that he weighs only 300 pounds and doesn't resemble the bronze jardinieres at all.

Women Ask For T. R.

Mrs. C. H. Wharton, an attractive Seattle woman and president of the Womens' Roosevelt club, circulated among the Republican delegates a petition signed by 1,000 women of Seattle begging the convention to nominate Colonel Roosevelt. Mrs. Wharton has a faculty of keeping her eyes on Colonel Roosevelt's nomination and the delegates she is addressing at the same time. They are dark eyes. She negotiated for the privilege of introducing the petition on the floor of the convention.

Gardner's Comment.

Representative A. P. Gardner of Massachusetts, the original preparedness advocate in congress, who ran as a Roosevelt delegate in his state primaries and was defeated after Mr. Roosevelt announced that he did not indorse Mr. Gardner's candidacy, arrived in Chicago in jovial mood to work in behalf of the Roosevelt movement. Rumor says that he came after a conference with Mr. Roosevelt at Oyster Bay and at Mr. Roosevelt's suggestion.

"How is it going?" Mr. Gardner was asked.

"The whole city is for Roosevelt except the hotels in which the delegates are," he laughingly responded.

"Do you mean the hotels or the delegates are the exception?"

"You'll have to figure that out yourself. I am not going to say much just now after my experience in mussing things up in Massachusetts."

Paged Villa.

There was one mystery unsolved. A hotel page, brimful of good faith, swung solemnly through the crowded lobby and corridors of the congress for fifteen minutes, calling in ear splitting yells, "General Pancho Villa!" After wrestling valiantly during that time with the problem that has given so much pause to the United States army, the boy returned amid grinning crowds and reported to the desk that he couldn't find the general.

Weeks on the Job.

One afternoon two men were seated in the Congress hotel restaurant talking politics. In their conversation they referred to the fact they were convention delegates.

Political scouts working for the presidential boom of Senator John W. Weeks of Massachusetts overheard the conversation and butted into the game. On their invitation the delegates went upstairs to the Weeks headquarters and were entertained and fussed over by Senator Weeks and his colleagues.

"I surely would like to have you gentlemen vote for me in the Republican national convention," suggested Senator Weeks after the delegates had been treated to the fat of the land.

"We'd like to, senator," said one of the delegates, "but the fact is we are here to sit in the Progressive national convention instead."

After Weeks recovered he told his scouts to be sure they were snagging Republicans or else to head for home.

PLAINFIELD PRESS COMPANY,

DISAGREE OVER MEXICAN PLANK

Fall Insists on Intervention Statement.

SURE TO BE BITTER FIGHT

Borah Fears to Bind Nominee of Convention—Senator From New Mexico Says Declaration Would Win Party Thousands of Votes—Agree on Other Main Points.

Chicago, June 7.—It is now certain that there will be a bitter and prolonged fight over the Mexican plank of the Republican platform.

The controversy will revolve around the demand made by Senator Fall of New Mexico that the Republican platform shall carry a straight out declaration in favor of intervention in Mexico.

This proposition will be fought by Senator Borah of Idaho. The two senators are members of the resolutions committee, which will frame the platform.

Opposing the recommendation for intervention made by his colleague, Senator Borah will urge the adoption of a plank expressing it to be the sense of the party that American lives and property should be protected wherever menaced, but specifically setting forth that in seeking to attain these ends in Mexico the United States should not, except in extreme necessity, interfere with the internal affairs of the country.

If the Fall plank is adopted Senator Borah will appeal for a reversal to the convention itself. On the other hand, if it is rejected it is understood Senator Fall will go to the convention for vindication of his judgment.

Nearly all Republicans appear to be in accord in the view that the Mexican policy is in bad odor with the country, but there are differences on the question as to whether it would be wise to declare for intervention in a political platform.

Fears to Bind Nominee.

Senator Borah is of the opinion that an assertion such as he favors is about all the Republican party should say on the subject in its platform. He is vigorously opposed to any declaration that would bind the nominee of the convention in case he is elected to a particular course of action.

Senator Fall makes the argument that intervention is inevitable and that the failure of the president to resort to such a course in his treatment of affairs south of the border presents the only clean cut issue upon which the Republicans can make a plea for the election of their presidential candidate this year. He will make a statement to this effect to the resolutions committee.

Senator Fall will point out that the Democrats will have a plank on "Americanism," a declaration in favor of preparedness and a plank favoring the passage of the administration tariff board bill now pending in congress. In other particulars, according to Mr. Fall, the Democratic code to be drawn at St. Louis will resemble the Republican platform now in the making.

Mr. Fall insists that an expression in the Republican platform recommending intervention in Mexico would win the party thousands of votes.

Agreed on Main Planks.

The general expectation is that the Mexican question as outlined will result in a lively scrap in committee and possibly in the convention. All are agreed that the platform shall say something about preparedness, "Americanism," the tariff and other questions, and there are differences on these only in regard to Mexico as to types to be employed.

In the case of Mexico, however, there is a divergence of opinion on a matter of policy, and each side is tenacious of its view. Statements made in the convention indicate that most Republicans firmly believe that the United States will be forced ultimately to intervene in Mexico, but many express the thought that it would be impolitic to hamper an administration with instructions that might not fit the case when the time came to act.

Blue Serges At Rothberg's

As a perennial candidate William Jennings Bryan has got nothing on a Blue Serge!

But in buying a Blue Serge, don't confuse the fabric with the fit, or the color with the cut—style is what you are after.

Rothberg's Blue Serges $15, $18, $20.

The higher they run, the better they get, of course, but we have no apologies to offer even for our $15 numbers, which are great value in blue serges at that price and give a good idea of what a man can expect at higher figures.

POLICE CHIEFS HOLD CONGRESS

Twenty-third Annual Convention Begins at Newark.

NEARLY 300 ARE PRESENT

Friday to See Contest For Presidency of Association—Long of Newark and Petersen of Oakland, Cal., Are Candidates.

Newark, June 7.—Big chiefs and little chiefs, physically speaking, but their size in many instances believing the importance of the cities over whose destinies in crime prevention they preside, are in session at the Robert Treat hotel at the twenty-third annual convention of the International Association of Police Chiefs.

The session is to last until Friday afternoon, when what promises to be a lively feature of the meeting will be staged. This will be a showdown as to whether Chief of Police Michael T. Long of this city, a comparatively new member of the organization, or Chief W. J. Peterson, first vice president, from Oakland, Cal., is to head the organization during the coming year.

The New Jersey chiefs have declared for Long, but Peterson's friends, busy as bees during the last two days, have been devoting their energies to rounding up all the forces outside of this state. There are more than 300 votes in the association, a majority of which will be sufficient to name the man. Of this number about seventy represent New Jersey's strength in the convention.

The chiefs, many of them accompanied by their wives and families, were more than half an hour late assembling for the opening session. Renewal of acquaintances had kept the delegates busy in the corridors. The international features of the convention were somewhat limited in the convention owing to the European war.

But one delegate came from Canada, the only territory covered by the association that might be classed as in "war zone." He is A. P. Sherwood of Ottawa, the fifth vice president of the association.

With the invocation by Rev. Edward F. Quirk, one of the police chaplains of the city, Chief Long was introduced by former Chief Michael Regan of Buffalo, the president of the organization. The local chief welcomed the delegates on behalf of the Newark police department and presented Police Judge Charles C. Pilgrim as the representative of Mayor Raymond, who is in Chicago.

Judge Pilgrim, after paying tribute to Chief Long, congratulated the chiefs on what he characterized as a change in the police attitude toward society and vice versa. He declared that the prevention of crime today is not so much by means of punishment as by kindness.

The judge said he had acquired sufficient knowledge since his assumption of his duties on the bench to warrant him in saying that the chiefs of police are an important factor in bringing about the more charitable way of handling crime and criminals.

SET TARGET PRACTICE DATE.

Sea Girt to Be Open to Civilian Clubs on July 3.

Trenton, June 7.—Members of civilian rifle clubs and others desirous of receiving instruction in the use of firearms will be given opportunity to do so at Sea Girt rifle range between July 3 and Sept. 16. Arrangements for such practice have been completed by Adjutant General Wilbur F. Sadler, Jr., in accordance with the recommendations contained in his annual report submitted in November to Governor Fielder.

General Sadler has made several trips to Washington with a view to having a company of marines detailed for duty as instructors and to take care of the messing of civilians desirous of remaining in camp, but was compelled to abandon these plans because of the demands upon the marine corps for service elsewhere.

PENNINGTON TERM CLOSES.

Frelinghuysen Addresses Graduating Class of Twenty-four.

Pennington, June 7.—The graduating class numbering twenty-four, the seventy-eighth annual commencement of the Pennington school took place in the Shaw Memorial chapel. The address to the class was delivered by President Joseph S. Frelinghuysen of the state board of education. The salutatorian was Raymond S. Stites of Providence, R. I., and the valedictorian was Justin Cox of Pennington.

The program included an organ solo and a piano solo by Miss Alice Hoffman, an oration by Harry N. Stark of Brooklyn, a farewell address to the graduates by the headmaster, Frank MacDaniel, and the presentation of diplomas by Dr. A. E. Street, president of the board of trustees.

Edward L. Dobbins Dead.

Included among the students of Buffalo University graduated last week is Theodore Champlin, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Champlin, of Union street, this city. Mr. Champlin was graduated from the dental department of the university. The Plainfielder is a graduate of the Plainfield High School, having received his diploma from the local institution in 1912.

THE world's greatest scientists write the strongest arguments advocating BEER as the HOME BEVERAGE. The following is an excerpt from the London Lancet signed by sixteen eminent medical men:—

"Alcohol is a rapid and trustworthy restorative. In many cases it may be described as life preserving, owing to its power to sustain cardiac and nervous energy. We hold the universal belief of civilized mankind that as an article of diet the moderate use of alcoholic beverages for adults is beneficial. This statement represents the opinion of leading clinical teachers, as well as medical practitioners."

Prof. Foster, of London, England, formulated the following statement, which was signed by sixty-two of the most eminent physiologists:—

"The results of careful experiments show that alcohol taken in moderate quantities is oxidized within the body and so supplies energy like common articles of food."

These men know from personal experience that when properly used beer is the one beverage that builds up, conserves, aids, repairs and strengthens the body and is beneficial to the human race.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Where Saunders Stands.

William L. Saunders must have been misrepresented when, a week or two ago he was quoted as saying that he intended to support Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, a Republican, for the United States Senate. What he no doubt said was that he would not support James E. Martine, and the reporters regarded this as a declaration in favor of Frelinghuysen. The story excited considerable comment, because Mr. Saunders himself had been prominently mentioned for the senatorship.

The comparisons made of Senator Martine's course in deserting President Wilson are so apt that no one can fail to appreciate them—the football player who refuses to do teamwork, the baseball player who will take no coaching, and the soldier who refuses to obey orders or who expresses conscientious scruples against firing upon the enemy—these are no worse than the Democratic United States Senator who deserts his party's leader "during an important and serious crisis in national and international affairs."—Trenton Times.

SUFFRAGISTS THREATEN.

Say Convention Must Advocate the Federal Amendment.

Chicago, June 7.—The rival suffrage legions assembled under the banners of the Congressional union, sponsor for the new woman's party, and the National American Woman Suffrage association are ready for their assault on the resolutions committees of the Republican and Progressive conventions.

Mrs. Harriot Stanton Blatch, chairman of the resolutions committee of the new party, voiced in convention a threat of political enmity unless the federal amendment proposing the enfranchisement of women is indorsed by the Republicans and Progressives. The national organization prepared a suffrage plank not quite as aggressive, which they demand the older political parties shall incorporate in their platforms.

EVERYBODY LIKES MUSIC

Ole Theobaldi, Court Musician.

and the COMMUNITY CHAUTAUQUA

Is going to be turned into a veritable musical festival! If you should buy a season ticket, paying the regular price for it, and hear ONLY the music, you'd be abundantly satisfied.

TEN MUSICAL PROGRAMS

LET'S look at the Chautauqua from the standpoint of music alone. There will be ten great musical programs.

THE AMERICAN QUARTET

And Clayton Conrad, Cartoonist, Will Open the Chautauqua

Perhaps the best organization of its kind in existence. They comprise both a singing and an instrumental quartet. Their voices harmonize perfectly. The cartoons by Clayton Conrad, newspaper cartoonist, are a distinct feature of their work. He uses two easels and draws life size pictures of types of men and women as he talks.

O'HARA AND WETMORE,

each a "whole show in himself." Geoffrey O'Hara is a song writer and Irish tenor. Two of his best known songs are "Tennessee, I Hear You Calling Me," and "Your Eyes Have Told Me." You've heard them and perhaps sung 'em. O'Hara scored a great success as a soloist with the Ottawa Symphony Orchestra in Canada. W. T. Wetmore, impersonator, has done big things in musical comedy and has appeared with success in the Brooklyn Institute. Many of his impersonations are in dialect, and most of them are humorous.

THE DUNBAR SOUTHERN SINGERS

in songs of the southland, one of the famous Ralph Dunbar organizations that has won a high place in Chautauqua circles. Charles Frink, banjoist, will delight you with a number of old darky melodies, sung to the accompaniment of his banjo. "Get on Board the Gospel Train" and other old time favorites will be sung.

VICTOR'S FLORENTINE BAND AND NEAPOLITAN TROUBADOURS

If any one day stands out above all the others it is obviously Band Day. The band has made successful tours over the Chautauqua circuit and is one of the most notable organizations appearing among the Chautauquas. The Troubadours, wearing the garb of Italian street strollers, will sing the songs of their native land with tambourine, banjo and other accompaniment. It will be a great event! Remember, the fourth day.

OLE THEOBALDI,

Wizard Norwegian violinist, and his two assisting artists, Mme. Florence Alice Stitzel, operatic soprano, and Mlle. Helen Kelere, pianist. Theobaldi has been court musician to the imperial families of Russia, Sweden and Denmark and has received more than sixty medals and court decorations. The instrument he plays is more than 300 years old and is valued at $25,000.

YOUR SEASON TICKET

will make [illegible] musical numbers cost 20 cents—or less. Average it up for yourself. Besides, there are the lectures and the purely ENTERTAINMENT features that we haven't even mentioned! GENERAL LEONARD WOOD.

Suggested as Republican Candidate For Presidency.

That Theodore Roosevelt will support General Leonard Wood for the Republican nomination if his name comes seriously before the convention is the news that emanated from Oyster Bay. It came from two of the colonel's visitors. He made the statement to them, they said, in the course of a general conversation.

BULL MOOSE TO NAME COLONEL

Delegates Insist on Making Nomination.

ROOSEVELT MAY REFUSE.

Republican Party Leaders Believe Candidacy Will Go to Hughes, Root or Harding—Sentiment For Justice Appears to Be Gaining Strength. Harmony Plans Fall to Ground.

Chicago, June 7.—It now depends entirely upon Colonel Roosevelt whether there is to be a third ticket in the field and a repetition of the political history of 1912.

The leaders of the Progressive party have worked hard to stem the tide in favor of Mr. Roosevelt that has been rising within their own ranks and to bring about a delay in the bull moose nomination until the Republicans have had an opportunity to act. Mr. Roosevelt's lieutenants have failed in their efforts, and they practically have thrown up the sponge.

They have agreed to proceed to the nomination of Colonel Roosevelt in the ordinary course of convention business, which means that the ex-president will be named by the bull moose probably on Friday of this week and not later than Saturday.

As there is little likelihood of the Republican convention making a choice before Saturday, Mr. Roosevelt will probably have been named by the Progressives before the Republican nominee has been determined.

The failure of the bull moose leaders to put off their nomination until the Republicans have acted was only one of several unfavorable developments which upset temporarily at least the harmony program.

Depends on T. R.'s Attitude.

Nobody in Chicago has been authorized as yet to announce what Colonel Roosevelt's attitude will be toward the action of the Progressive convention, but his closest friends were saying positively he will not accept such a nomination. The action of the Progressive delegates in running away from the control of George W. Perkins and other Progressive leaders was the most important development in the general situation.

On the Republican side of the fence Justice Hughes was still leading the field, with his opponents conceding him 270 votes and the Hughes managers claiming at least 350 on the first ballot.

Developments indicate a steady growth of the Hughes sentiment, and unless the so called state favorites can get together on some one candidate the drift is pretty certain to be toward the justice after the first ballot. Hughes managers and some of the old time leaders believe he will be nominated by the third ballot at least.

The feeling among party leaders is that the Republican nomination will be won by Justice Hughes or Elihu Root or Senator Harding of Ohio. If the Hughes strength disintegrates it is likely to go either to Mr. Root or Senator Harding. A strong effort was put forth in the interest of both of these men, but it was acknowledged that little headway had been made for them.

But the fact of the matter is that the old time leaders cannot deliver the Republican convention to Mr. Roosevelt even if they desired to do so. Senator Penrose told George W. Perkins this most emphatically when Perkins sought the aid of Penrose in obtaining the Pennsylvania delegates for Roosevelt.

Feeling Against Roosevelt.

One of the surprising things about this big gathering of Republicans is that there is so little sentiment among the delegates in favor of Colonel Roosevelt. There is no longer any doubt that Colonel Roosevelt's lieutenants have been shocked by this development. There is a strong undercurrent among the delegates against even considering Mr. Roosevelt as the Republican nominee.

Mr. Perkins finds himself in virtually the same position that the Republican leaders are in. They have a convention on their hands, but will be unable to deliver the delegates to Roosevelt even if they so desired. Mr. Perkins also has a convention, but he cannot deliver the delegates. It looks as if both the Republican and the Progressive assemblies this year will be run by the delegates themselves.

Jersey Delegates Act.

Impressive evidence of the disposition of the delegates themselves to take a hand in managing the affairs of the Republican convention was found in the action of the New Jersey delegation. This delegation apparently had made up its mind that the leaders were hopelessly blocked in their efforts to bring about a harmonious understanding with the Progressives and they adopted a resolution requesting the appointment of a committee to confer with a committee from the Progressives on the question of harmonious action.

This independence on the part of the delegates was staggering to some of the old guard leaders, especially to Franklin Murphy, the supposed leader of the Jersey delegation, who had not even been consulted with regard to the action of the delegation.

The attitude of the Republican delegates is shown in more ways than one. The headquarters of old guard, which four years ago were packed daily with men seeking instructions as to how they should vote, are now only moderately filled.

Expect T. R.'s Refusal.

Many Republicans who have been cooperating with Perkins in an effort to bring harmony into the situation, despairing of heading off the nomination of Roosevelt by the bull moose, tried to make the best of it by arguing that after all it might be the best solution of the problem. They contended that Mr. Roosevelt would not take the nomination and that his refusal would give the bull moose convention an opportunity to turn in and indorse the Republican nominee after the colonel had eliminated himself.

Some Republicans were inclined to regard the latest developments in the Progressive camp with suspicion, believing they might be part of the general plan to force Roosevelt's name before the Republican convention. There is no doubt, however, of the sincerity of the effort that Mr. Perkins has made to control the bull moose and of his failure to do so.

If the bull moose delegates adhere to their plan to nominate Mr. Roosevelt before the Republican convention has acted every vestige of a chance that the colonel may have had in the Republican convention will, it is contended, be dissipated. The colonel's advisers in the Progressive ranks and his friends in the Republican party admit that his cause will be absolutely hopeless once he has been named by the Progressive convention.

Republican delegates will not consider becoming the tail to the Progressive kite. William Loeb, Jr., George von L. Meyer and the other Roosevelt lieutenants realize this and used it unsuccessfully as an argument against action by the Progressive convention. Colonel Roosevelt's most intimate advisers, it is said, are certain that he will realize the situation and will come to their support by refusing to accept the nomination or possibly making some move to head it off.

Depended on Penrose.

The Roosevelt people in seeking Republican votes have been depending chiefly upon Senator Penrose. Details came to light in a story told of a conference in a suburb of Chicago which was attended by Senator Penrose, Senator Smoot, ex-Senator Hemenway of Indiana, Mr. Perkins and one or two other Progressive leaders.

At this meeting Mr. Perkins urged that four or five of the big Republican leaders declare for Colonel Roosevelt. He contended that such a declaration would swing the Republican convention to the ex-president. Senator Penrose replied that not even declarations by forty or fifty Republican leaders could swing the convention to Colonel Roosevelt.

Mr. Penrose called upon Mr. Perkins to show him how the seventy-six delegates from Pennsylvania could bring about the colonel's nomination. Mr. Perkins was not able to show more than 135 delegates as the colonel's maximum strength in the convention. Then the possibility was considered of the Republicans and Progressives getting together on some other candidate except Hughes, but Mr. Perkins could not promise a Progressive indorsement.

Details also became known of a conference between the representatives of the allies in an effort to agree on some one candidate from among their number in opposition to Hughes. At this meeting it was conceded that Hughes would have at least 270 votes on the first ballot.

It was pointed out that he would have more votes than any other candidate and that for the allies to accomplish anything they would have to hold their entire strength after the first ballot. It is understood that one of the parties to the conference proposed that they determine by lot which candidate among the favorite sons should remain in the fight after the first ballot, the others withdrawing and throwing their strength to him.

This proposal started a wrangle, which ended, as all conferences of this character recently have ended, in a failure to reach any agreement.

HUGHES HAS SPOKEN!

Hughes has spoken. In an address to a class of schoolgirls Monday he defined his position on the one great topic of the day, and it is purely American. Justice Hughes talked of nothing of political importance, except patriotism, but in his few clear, concise remarks he declared for everything for which a President should stand. The speech will not win him the good graces of the Progressive convention delegates, as they are still for Roosevelt, but it makes those who feel that his nomination is inevitable accept this thought with a great deal of satisfaction heretofore missing.

He said: "The flag is the symbol of our national unity, our national endeavor, our national aspiration. It tells you of the struggle for independence, of union preserved, of liberty and union one and inseparable, of the sacrifices of brave men and women to whom the ideals and honor of this Nation has been dearer than life.

"It means America first; it means an undivided allegiance; it means America united, strong and efficient, equal to her tasks. It means that you cannot be saved by the valor and devotion of your ancestors; that to each generation comes its patriotic duty and that upon your willingness to sacrifice and endure as those before you have sacrificed and endured rests the national hope.

"It speaks of equal rights; of the inspiration of free institutions exemplified and vindicated; of liberty under law intelligently conceived and impartially administered. There is not a thread in it but scorns self-indulgence, weakness and rapacity. It is eloquent of our common interests—outweighing all divergences of opinion—and of our common destiny.

No American can refuse to indorse that, and no man who believes it can go far wrong in the execution of a public trust.

The greatest individual loss of the war has come to England in the death of Earl Kitchener. German submarines struck their hardest blow here, for they removed the British War Lord, the man who raised England's formidable army. But they struck too late. In a way Kitchener's work is done. When the war came England faced a crisis in the inadequacy of her army and the unpreparedness of her able-bodied men. The answer was Kitchener and how he mobilized, drilled and equipped a greater army than the world had ever known before in the past months is already history. It seems that he was not the man to lead this army to victory, and already he had brought about serious misunderstandings and some friction. Now another must be called to use the gigantic tool that the hand of "K of K" has welded. England faces another crisis. When the last one came she produced Kitchener. Is there another man waiting? On the answer to this hangs victory or defeat.

BIG CHORUS FOR Y. M. C. A. MEETING

Biederwolf Songs for Men When They Meet Sunday Afternoon.

Every man in the city, particularly those who were at all interested in the Biederwolf meetings, should make it a point to attend the big men's meeting to be held in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium Sunday afternoon, when John Callahan, chaplain of the Tombs Prison, New York, is to speak. There will also be a number of attractive musical features. The Dutch Arms Orchestra will assist in the song service, while about 150 men of the Biederwolf Chorus Choir will lead the singing. The meeting will begin at 3:30. All men having Biederwolf song books should bring them.

N. P. H. S. NOTES

The junior class has completed all arrangements for the senior banquet which will be held tomorrow evening in St. Vincent's chapel. The third year classmen are preparing to give the prospective graduates one of the best suppers presentable and to accomplish this end have asked the Parent-Teacher Association to serve it. The committee in charge comprises: Katharine Brittings, Lillian Spencer, Robert Daly and Andrew McDonough.

President Dilts, of the senior class, has revised the committee in charge of the class day program, appointing Margaret Ewart as chairman and Emily Pleydell, Bertha Boylan, Martin McDonough and Warren Townley. The class will hold a meeting shortly, at which time the class flower and motto will be selected, while Sherman Chandler will submit the class song, which he wrote, for approval.

A new but practical subject will be added to the school curriculum commencing next fall. Miss Mohring, head of the science department, has decided to teach household chemistry to those pupils who do not elect chemistry proper, but wish to indulge in practical applications necessary in the household.

Deviating from former customs, the graduating class has decided to present the school with the class banner of blue and gold.

The armlets and hats, consisting of the school colors, have arrived and have been distributed among the pupils.

The girls' basketball team of North Plainfield High School and their guests were the hosts of the Misses Edna French and Ethel Barnard, the last named being the coach, at a picnic held on the crest of the Watchung Mountain, Monday afternoon. The mountain was graced with the presence of the twenty young frollickers.

STRAWBERRY FESTIVAL.

The annual strawberry festival of the Band of Workers, Class 2, of Trinity Reformed church, will be held in the Sunday-school room Thursday night, June 15. The Dutch Arms orchestra will furnish the music for the evening.

On the Spur of the Moment

by Roy K. Moulton

Can't Blame Him.

He got aboard the car and chose an isolated place,
And guarded well the basket that he held upon his knees,
Regarding with suspicion every new arrival's face,
And grew extremely nervous when the crowd began to squeeze.
He held his treasure closely, watching over it with care;
It was not a bunch of jewels or a kingly ransom quite,
And he was not custodian of stocks and bonds so rare,
But he was only taking home a pound of steak that night.

Another Diplomatic Entanglement.

Mrs. Jude Johnson has lost seven cats during the last three years, says the Atchison Globe, and has always blamed their untimely deaths on her husband, who hates cats as much as Bryan hates a musket. The last cat was found dead one morning last week, and Mrs. Johnson is very, very indignant. "However," she said to a reporter, "if my husband will disavow the act we will not sever diplomatic relations." After Mrs. Johnson had made her statement the reporter went to Jude's favorite curbstone to get a statement from Jude, and the statement follows: "So Mrs. Johnson demands a disavowal, does she? Well, I'll promptly disavow. I know of nothing easier than disavowing, but if she brings another detested cat on our premises it will become necessary for me to disavow again, by gravy."

From the Pewamo News.

A California man has given the leading university in his State a pearl that is said to be three million years old. That settles it. We are now convinced there is one thing in this world older than the Grand Trunk depot at Pewamo.

A Belding editor has invented a water wheel, which goes to show that sometimes editors know just as much about water as the rest of the folks do.

A fellow was asking us the other day how it comes that Dante could write so entertainingly about hell, when he never had been there. That's easy. When Dan was a young man he ran a country newspaper for four years in a town about the size of Pewamo.

Rare Discrimination.

A thin little man entered one of the stores recently and quietly seated himself on a convenient chair, says the Thomas, Okla., Tribune. One of the clerks approached and asked if he wished to purchase anything. "Oh, no," said the man, "I just dropped in for a few minutes." After half an hour had passed the manager asked what could be done for him. "Why nothing that I know of," said the man. "You see, I have nervous prostration and the doctor told me to stay in a quiet place. Noticing that you do not advertise, I thought this would be about the quietest place I could find."

A Hair——owing Tale.

Sim McCarthy, who runs the village drug store up at Mt. Pleasant, is having trouble of his own these days all because some careless cuss walked in and knocked a bottle of hair restorer off on the floor, and according to the local paper Sim has had to use a lawn mower on the pine boards every day for a week now in order to keep the hirsute adornments down enough to allow him to get around to wait on the village folks when they came in for a package of epsom or a postage stamp.—Pewamo News.

- Proctor's Theatre -

William Collier, in a Scene from Triangle Play, "The No-Good Guy."

AT PROCTOR'S TOMORROW.

Theda Bara, in "The Eternal Sapho," proves to be the headline attraction at Proctor's today. Unlike many of the pictures in which Miss Bara has appeared, this, her latest, has a style all its own, and is a clean and wholesome photoplay that teaches a powerful lesson. One of the big features of this production is the splendid work of little Kittens Reichert, the talented child star, who in her scenes with Miss Bara, acts in intensely human fashion. The child, through her excellent work in this production, will run Miss Bara a close second for headline honors. Most of the interior scenes are luxurious, and harmonize extremely well with the beautiful costumes worn by Miss Bara, a fact which will make the picture more than usually interesting to women. The fifteenth episode of "The Iron Claw" is an added feature today.

Tomorrow William Collier, the popular comedy star, appears in his first five-reel Triangle comedy under the direction of Thomas H. Ince, entitled "The No Good Guy," which fairly abounds in laugh-provoking scenes, and which also contains that artistic touch always prevalent in an Ince picture. This photoplay will appeal particularly to the children and parents are urged to bring the little folks along to see Willie Collier on the screen. In addition tomorrow Harry Gribbon, the Keystone funmaker, is starred in "A Dash of Courage," an uproariously funny comedy.

On Friday the headline photoplay will be a Paramount offering entitled "The Unknown," featuring Lou Tellegen, now the husband of Geraldine Farrar, the noted opera and screen star. If you are looking for a thrilling, rapid-fire romance, then by all means see "The Unknown" for as a true love story this picture stands in a class by itself. It is laid in a romantic locale, and it is enacted by principals who well know how to get the most from their romantic roles. On Saturday Mary Miles Minter will appear in "Lovely Mary," one of the most charming of her picturizations.

NICE DOGGIE

.· Plainfield Theatre. ·.

The Seven Corkers, a company of talented singers and dancers who can put over the comedy and harmony in the manner made famous by Lew Dockstader, Al G. Field and others, will be the headline attraction of the new bill coming to the Plainfield Theatre tomorrow. The Seven Corkers are all experts in their particular line and come to this city highly recommended. Their program is made up of the latest ballads, ragtime numbers, soft shoe and clog dancing and gags guaranteed to make every one laugh.

Beside the headline act there will be five other vaudeville numbers on the new bill together with feature pictures. The program tonight will include the amateur numbers that are the big hit every week. Patrons are advised to come early as seats are always in demand on amateur night.

The feature picture tomorrow will be the continuation of the serial film, "The Iron Claw," while Pathe comedies and dramas will be shown both Friday and Saturday. The fine six-act bill which has been on the boards since Monday and headed by the Zara Carman trio in their rural sketch, "Introducing Sporting Goods," will be the attraction tonight.

--Astor Theatre--

The big attraction at The Astor Theatre today will be "Who's Guilty?" featuring Tom Moore and Anna Nilsson. This will no doubt be one of the greatest serial photoplays ever produced. In addition to this serial we will show "The Code of Marcia Gray," featuring the American beauty, Constance Collier. Filled with scenes of beautiful mansions, luxurious limousines, brilliant parties staged in magnificently furnished rooms of magnitude, beautiful gardens and all the tokens of great wealth, "The Code of Marcia Gray" is a great interest outside of its big plot.

Tomorrow we will offer for your approval "The Catspaw," an enchanting tale of double identity founded on the novel by William Hamilton Osborne. In this wonderful five-part drama the Kleine-Edison Company has featured Miriam Nesbitt and Marc MacDermott. In Milville, Kittredge St. John meets Roxane Bellairs and they decide to "clean up" the town. Kittredge has a scheme, he tells Roxane, which he is going to keep secret from her. He employs a cultured man, the next double to himself, whose duty it is to represent him at social functions as Kittredge St. John. Roxane works her way into the graces of Major Holbrook and Mr. Bonwit, of the Millville bank. Society is entertained at Mrs. Shackelton's ball. The double, in love with Dorothy Paget, leaves after the ball in company with Major Holbrook, for the club for a game of cards. Roxane, who sees what is going on between the double and Dorothy Paget, becomes jealous, imagining that the man is Kittredge. During the night of the ball the Millville bank is robbed, and detectives decide Kittredge St. John is the burglar. The double is arrested, but proves an alibi by Major Holbrook. The story is thrilling from beginning to end and full of intense interest.

PARENT-TEACHER ASS'N IN ANNUAL SESSION

Officers Are Elected, Reports Presented and Musiical Program is Enjoyed.

At the annual meeting of the Franklin - Stillman Parent - Teacher Association held in the Franklin School auditorium Monday evening, the following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Mrs. S. Frederick Smith; vice president, Miss Noel J. Bullock; secretary, Mrs. George A. Horne; treasurer, Miss Reba L. White. Mrs. S. Frederick Smith presided during the session during which reports of the past year were submitted. The report of the luncheon committee showed that 18,214 pupils had been provided with lunches, from 105 to 190 children taking luncheon daily. The gross receipts for the year were $776 and the expenditures $608, leaving a balance in hand after paying the initial loan to the Mothers' Association of $93.

Announcement was also made that the furnishing of the rest room for teachers is still incomplete, lacking about $13. Parents of pupils are asked to contribute 25 cents each in order to finish this work as soon as possible.

At the conclusion of the business session, a musical program was enjoyed the following taking part: Edward McCarthy, piano selections; Irving Manley, soprano solos; D. C. Patterson, W. J. Tallamy, E. A. Sproul and Joseph Martin, quartet selections and piano solo by Miss Elizabeth Martin. S. Frederick Smith accompanied the soloists on the piano. Refreshments were served at the conclusion under the direction of Mrs. C. H. Russell.

FRUIT GUILD MEETING.

The Plant, Fruit and Flower Guild will hold its monthly meeting Friday night in the Friends' meeting-house at Watchung avenue and Third street. The Young People's Society of Trinity Reformed church, under the leadership of Miss Myra Dunavan, will lead in the devotions. Rev. Henry Mesler, pastor of the St. Stephen's church, will deliver the address. The musical portion of the program will be in charge of Mrs. Evans assisted by the Guild quartet.

OPPORTUNITY CLASS SALE.

The opportunity classes of the public schools will hold a sale of their handiwork—sewing, pottery, basketry and woodwork—at the Stillman School at Arlington avenue and Fifth street, tomorrow and Friday, June 8 and 9, between 9:00 a. m. and 5:00 p. m. The receipts will be used to pay for materials.

PRAYER MEETING TONIGHT.

Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie will have charge of the prayer meeting at the Crescent Avenue church at 8 o'clock tonight, when he will speak on "Keep Yourselves In the Love of God." The Biederwolf campaign hymn-books will be used and it is hoped that there will be a large attendance.

CHILDREN'S DAY.

Children's Day will be observed by the Sunday-schools of the city and borough on Sunday, when special programs will be presented according to the annual custom.

IMPORTANT MEETING AT FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

The service this evening at the First Baptist church promises to be one of the most memorable in its history. There will be the postponed parish meeting, with election of trustees, to be followed by the postponed annual church meeting, with election of deacons, and the discharge of other important business. There will also occur the installation of the recently elected Bible school office with appropriate exercises.

At this time, Miss Jewell, the cornetist, of the school, will be present. Mrs. Robert Giddes will also sing. Following the exercises of the evening, opportunity will be given still others who are seeking admission into the church to appear before the pastor and deacons. All interested in this church are invited to be present, and are assured of a most cordial welcome.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

How a Wonderful Nightingale Sang For an Emperor.

The Emperor Was Charmed.

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

WHEN the children climbed up in daddy's lap he told them the Chinese story of the emperor who sent all his courtiers to find a nightingale that sang beautifully in the royal woods. "Soon as they found the nightingale it asked, 'Shall I sing for the emperor?' The agreeable bird thought the emperor was there in the woods.

"'My precious little nightingale,' answered the highest courtier, 'I have the honor to command you to come to court tonight and sing for the emperor.'

"'It sounds best among the trees,' said the nightingale. But it went to the palace gladly because it knew the emperor wished it.

"Now, the palace had been all brightened up for the concert. All the china walls and floors shone in the lights of thousands of gold lamps. Most beautiful flowers, with little silver bells tied to them, stood in the halls, and when the breezes blew the bells tinkled. In the middle of the large hall where the emperor sat a golden rod had been fixed for the nightingale to perch on. The whole court was there, and a little kitchen maid, who had led the courtiers to the spot in the woods where the nightingale was found, was allowed to stand behind the door.

"Then everybody kept very still, and all eyes were turned toward the little gray bird at which the emperor was nodding. The nightingale sang delightfully, and tears came into the emperor's eyes. Then the nightingale sang more beautifully still, so that its notes touched all hearts. The emperor was so charmed that he said the songster should have a gold slipper to wear around its neck. But the nightingale thanked him and said it had been rewarded enough by the tears of the emperor. Then it again burst into its sweet, heavenly song.

"'That is the most delightful music I have ever heard,' said the court ladies. And they took some water in their mouths and tried to make the same gurgling, thinking so to equal the nightingale. Even the lackeys and chambermaids said they were satisfied with the song. And this is saying a great deal, for they are most difficult people to please. So the nightingale was to stay at court now, have its own cage and the liberty to walk out twice a day and once at night. But when it went out to have a good time now it always had twelve footmen, with each one holding a ribbon which was tied around its leg. There was not much pleasure in an outing of that sort, was there, Jack?" daddy asked.

And the children gave him two kisses for his bedtime story.

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

Ethel Deceives Her Husband in the Matter of a $60 Suit.

"How do you like my suit?" Ethel Gordon preened herself before the glass and tried to make herself think she was not nervous. She had put the new suit on while at the Forsyths, that Ralph might get used to the fact that she had one while he was in a strange house and could not express his mind freely.

"Mother insisted on my having it," she adde, for her husband said nothing.

"I wish you had not allowed her to get it for you," said Ralph, jumping at the conclusion she had intended him to reach. "In the first place you did not need it. Your travelinging suit is a beauty and is all you could possibly use, going as little as you do."

"I suppose it is hard for mother to realize that I do not need as many clothes as ever," purred Ethel.

"That is one reason I am displeased. She is bent on making you think you need clothes whether you do or not, and the sooner you cease to depend on her judgment and use your own head the better."

"Well, I may as well enjoy it now that I have it." Ethel secretly resolved that she would pay for the suit and Ralph should never know her mother had not given it to her. "It is not my fault that he thinks so. I never told him that she bought it."

Ethel was trying to coax herself into believing that she was innocent of deceiving her husband. "It is not my fault that I have no money to get the necessaries of life; nor my fault that he makes a scene whenever I spend a penny. Women are not to blame that they deceive their husbands. They have to to avoid trouble." She felt a queer little shiver go down her spine when she though what he would say if he knew that she had contracted a debt of sixty dollars. "Well, he can't kill me." She shook herself free from her fears. "We have been married six months and he has not bought me a dress, so I do not see how he can complain very much. Besides, he is not going to know anything about it."

Ralph meanwhile was belaboring himself secretly for having spoiled the pleasure of his little wife in the suit her mother had bought her. "I ought to be glad she has someone to get her things as long as I cannot compass it," he reflected bitterly. "It is just because I cannot bear to have the baleful influence of her mother continued, I suppose. This visit certainly has been an eyeopener to me." Aloud he said, "Are you ready to go down? You certainly look very fine; the suit is becoming."

Ethel brightened at this word of praise, and put up her mouth to be kissed.

"I am so glad my boy likes it," she breathed. "Someway he never cares for what I have on any more."

"It is my wife that I care for, not her plumage, and I really think she has always spent too much time and thought on her clothes. Now that she is grown up and married, don't you think she should have more weighty things to think of?" he said as he kissed her. Ethel pouted.

"I think it is a woman's chief business to make herself attractive to her husband. Don't you?" She looked archly up at him.

"Attractive, yes, but you are so beautiful physically that I wish you would put your efforts on adorning your mind and character." Ethel greeted this speech with a look of surprise. Ralph sighed softly and suggested that they go to the living room.

DUTIES OF A LOCAL BOARD OF HEALTH

Letter Defining the Action of Body Sent Out by Dr. J. C. Price.

Trenton, June 7.—A letter defining the duties of a local board of health sent out recently by Dr. J. C. Price, State Director of Health contains much that is of interest to the public. The specific question considered is whether a local board of health should act only upon complaint or should take the initiative in abating nuisances dangerous to the public health.

In its broader aspects the question involves the whole attitude of a local board of health toward the performance of its duties. Should a board of health always wait to be prodded into action, or should it be alert, aggressive and continually on the offensive in the battle against disease? Dr. Price takes the latter view, for he says in his letter, "It is not only the duty of local boards of health to abate nuisances prejudicial to the public health when brought to their attention, but it is also their duty to examine into all nuisances and all causes of disease, and to cause their removal or abatement."

In support of this point the doctor cites many portions of the law which give a local board of health wide discretionary powers in passing ordinances, abating nuisances or causes of sickness, and performing other duties for the protection of the public health. It is pointed out also that a board may delegate any portion of its power to a member of the board or to an officer, to be exercised only when the board is not in session.

In view of the broad powers granted to local boards of health, Dr Price does not believe that the legislature ever intended for the activities of the local boards to be restricted to the abatement of nuisances merely upon complaint. "On the other hand," he says, "it is unquestionably contemplated that they should exercise their broad powers to seek out and remedy unsanitary conditions existing within their jurisdiction, before sickness actually results therefrom." That this is the correct view is shown by the further provision of the law that local boards of health shall examine into "all causes of disease which may be known to them or brought to their attention."

In addition to these provisions of the original act creating the State and local boards of health, numerous supplemental and amendatory acts have greatly extended the discretionary powers of local boards, and have imposed certain mandatory duties upon them. After considering these points at some length, Dr. Price concludes that, "It is the plain duty of a local board of health to enforce the health laws of the State and the State Sanitary Code; to enact and enforce ordinances for the prevention of disease and the promotion of the public health, and any local board of health that fails to do these things fails to discharge its obligations to the public, which it has been created to serve."

Thus, according to Dr. Price's view, a local board of health is not doing its duty if it waits for complaints to be made before taking action. The ideal local board of health is one to whom no complaints are made, for the reason that it is so active and aggressive as to remove all causes for complaint before there is opportunity for citizens to make complaint.

Electric Power Reduces Friction Loss Increases Profits

TALKS ON POWER, NO. 4

A Year's Experience

Public Service Electric Company,
Newark, N. J.

Gentlemen:

In reply to your inquiry as to the service rendered, please be advised that during the year in which we have been operating under your power, we have had no criticism or complaints to make. Your service is entirely satisfactory and a considerable relief from the occasional annoyances which we experienced in our old plant, where we generated our own power.

Thanking you for your interest, we beg to remain

Yours very truly,
J. W. BEARDSLEY'S SONS.
Per G. A. B.

In our last talk on power we told of a factory operated by a one-hundred-horse power engine and belt transmission

—On which tests proved that the average load was seventy-five horse power —And the friction loss was fifty-eight horse power or 77.3 % of all the power used.

Only 17 horse power was used to operate the machines.

Then Public Service power was installed, cutting out some of the shafting and belting.

The total installation in motors was seventy-five horse power.

The friction load on electric drive was 18¼ horse power, or 25% of the seventy-five horse power.

After deducting the friction loss the useful electric power available for operating machinery was 56¼ horse power or 75% of the total power.

The installation of Public Service power produced an increase in useful power of 39¼ horse power or an increase, as compared with engine and belt drive of 230.88%.

—And the use of Public Service power reduced the average monthly cost of power $84.36.

—An annual saving of $1,012.32.

More than 10,000 power users are being supplied with electric power from our great inter-connected system of 22 generating stations and 61 sub-stations.

Some use several thousand horse-power each—for instance:

Edison Storage Battery Co.,	3953 H. P.
Lewis T. Nixon	3884 H. P.
Manhattan Rubber Co.,	2300 H. P.

All have, day or night, an abundant and elastic supply of reliable power.

Let us make a test of your plant at no cost to you. We may be able to reduce your power costs. Telephone our agent for information.

HOLY NAME SOCIETIES WILL PARTICIPATE

Laying of Cornerstone of Parochial School at Westfield to Take Place Sunday.

The laying of the cornerstone of the parish house and parochial school of Holy Trinity church, Westfield, will take place Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, after a parade led by the Westfield Band, in which the men of various parishes in Union county will participate. The cornerstone will be laid by Rt. Rev. Monsignor Charles H. Mackel, D. D., of Elizabeth, with the impressive and fitting ceremonies of the Catholic church. He will be assisted by Rev. H. J. Watterson, master of ceremonies, and other clergy of the diocese.

The Rev. Francis McHugh, L. L. O., professor at Seton Hall Seminary and College, will deliver the spiritual address and Edward J. Sweeney, of Bayonne, past deputy of the Knights of Columbus, will deliver a short address on the "Catholic Church and the American Flag."

The Holy Name Societies of St. Mary's, Immaculate Conception, St. Patrick's, Sacred Heart and St. Michael's, of Elizabeth; St. Mary's and St. Joseph's, of Plainfield; St. Michael's, of Cranford; St. Mary's, of Rahway, and Holy Trinity, of Westfield, have been invited, as well as the members of the Knights of Columbus in the diocese, the Mayor and officials of the town of Westfield, its citizens and the people of Union county generally. James T. Bates will be grand marshal of the parade and will have as aides Captain J. J. Thomas, S. Mulden and John Whelan.

The parade will start at 2:30 at North avenue and Elm street, through Elm street to Broad, to Euclid, to Lenox, to Central avenue, to Park street, to Westfield avenue, to First street, passing the grand stand upon which will be assembled the reverend clergy and the guests and the children of the parish, who will sing patriotic songs and hymns befitting the occasion, accompanied by the Westfield Band.

The customary box under the cornerstone will contain copies of the records of the church; names of the societies and their officers; names of the town officials; copies of the local newspaper, etc.

The committee in charge of the matter consists of Rev. H. J. Watterson, director, and Messrs. George H. Riley, Joseph Whelan, Louis L. Coudert, Jr., Frank Tully, Matt Muller, Albert Hand, Charles Gottlick, James Field, James T. Bates, Capt. J. J. Thomas, S. Mullen, John Whelan and George E. Hayes, president of the Holy Name Society.

The committee in charge requests the residents of Westfield to display the American flag on June 11.

When you rent a room of your home to someone, you secure a "guest-tenant." Your "roomer" is a guest of your house, on a business basis—but still a guest, somewhat in touch with your home, and this makes it highly important that the person should be of the right sort.
In advertising a furnished room it is a simple matter to indicate that the tenant-to-be must have reasonably convincing credentials as to character. You will thus have applications from a desirable class of people while a door sign or window card would merely bring to you the chance passer-by.

LOCAL SCHOOLBOYS IN NATIONAL MEET

Monster Athletic Festival at Weequahic Park Next Saturday.

Newark will be the scene of the interscholastic track and field championships of America next Saturday, several entries being counted upon from Plainfield High School. The cream of the scholastic runners, jumpers, pole vaulters, hurdlers and weight throwers will strive for honors in the meet to be held at the Weequahic Park track. This will be one of the principal meets on the sporting calendar in conjunction with Newark's 250th anniversary celebration, the biggest scholastic athletic competition in point of importance ever conducted in Newark. The public will be admitted to the grounds free of charge, and it is expected that 20,000 will be in attendance.

The games will be started at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Sixteen events are scheduled, namely: 100-yard dash, 220-yard dash, 120-yard hurdle, 220-yard hurdle, 440-yard run, half-mile run, one-mile run, two-mile run, running broad jump, running high jump, pole vault for height, twelve-pound hammer throw, twelve-pound shot-put, discus throw, javelin throw and one-mile relay for teams of four boys, each to run 440 yards. Gold, silver and bronze medals of special design will be awarded to first, second and third in each event. The school scoring the greatest number of points will receive the trophy emblematic of the interscholastic track and field championship of America.

The entries include the best athletes of such major prep schools as Phillips-Exeter, Mercersburg, Hill School and Lawrenceville. It will be interesting to note how the athletes of the high and prep schools of this section, who have been consistent winners in meets hereabouts, fare in competition with the stars of the country's leading preparatory schools.

SPORT NOTES

Johnny Dundee and Benny Leonard will furnish New Yorkers with a thrilling ten-round bout tonight. The last time the boys met in Gotham they furnished one of the best encounters of the season.

Plans for a new National Golf Association to rule the game in the United States have been announced. This movement has been in the wind for several years, but it is now growing stronger with the growth of the game.

For the benefit of Bob Burman's widow, the Burman racing car will be driven in the auto Derby at Chicago next Saturday.

Jack Dillon and Sailor Grande have been matched for a fifteen-round bout at Bridgeport for the 14th.

The metropolitan amateur championship is the big golf event of the week around New York. Despite a raise in the fee, a big field is out in the preliminary trial today at Nassau Country Club.

Three big trapshoots for State championships are under way today. The Oregon marksmen are at Portland, the Maryland gunners at Baltimore, and the Ohio cracks are lined up at Toledo.

Dan Patch, world's champion pacer, with the mark of 1:55¼, is expected to be on exhibition at the Twin City race meet Thursday, Friday and Saturday, at Hamline, Minn.

The summer horse racing season is spreading out this week. Iowa and Ohio circuits are now open, and the Sunny South circuit is having its first meet at Shreveport, La.

The Harvard-Yale boat race will be held at New London this year, on June 23. The intercollegiate races are set for the 17th at Poughkeepsie.

The Douglas Park meet will close on Monday next. On Saturday the Speculation Stakes will be run, and the final event is the Spring Trial Stakes.

The modified marathon of the Millrose A. A. will be run through the streets of New York on Saturday.

Ever Hammer and Johnny Dundee have been matched for a bout in East Chicago on July 4, under the auspices of the Elks.

The Twin Cities' motorboat enthusiasts are planning to attend the tryout of "Miss Minneapolis," which will take place next week. The boat will be the pride of the Mississippi Valley regatta, which will be held in St. Paul on July 4.

Ted Meredith is winding up his college athletic career in a blaze of glory. The events in which he set new marks at Harvard Stadium, the 440 and the half, are the most difficult of all track races, and in those contests he was opposed by the greatest field of middle distance men ever to compete.

QUEEN CITY RIDERS SEEK AMATEUR TITLE

Series of Races Will Start Tonight at Newark Velodrome.

At least three members of the Queen City Wheelmen, a local cycling organization, will compete in the amateur champoinship competition which will be started at the Newark Velodrome tonight, when the first night meet of the season will be held. The winner of the title this year, in addition to the championship medal, will receive a handsome silver trophy put up by L. Bamberger & Co.

As in the professional class, the amateurs will ride a series of six races to determine the championship. The first will be at a quarter of a mile and the remaining races at one third-mile, half mile, one mile, two miles and five miles. Tonight's meet will be designated as Prudential night, with the Dryden Derby as the principal professional race.

TED GAVETT ELIMINATED IN TENNIS TITLE EVENT

T. O. Gavett, of Plainfield, defeated C. C. Chambers, by default, in the second round, and lost to L. Cooper, 6-4, 6-0, in the third round of the annual tournament to decide the tennis championship of New Jersey yesterday afternoon on the courts of the Morristown Field Club. There are only three of the prominent players entered—George M. Church, Harold A. Throckmorton, and G. Carleton Shafer—and only the first named of these is in the first-ranking division. The entry list is not large, and, to deplete it to lesser proportions, a number of defaults were recorded in the two rounds which were played late in the afternoon.

N. P. H. S. SMASHED BATTIN'S WINNING STREAK AND WON WELL PLAYED GAME

North Plainfield High School broke the spell which Battin High School has had over it for the past five years by trimming that aggregation yesterday afternoon at Elizabeth by the score of 3 to 2. The victory was sweet for the boroughites, as they succeeded in capturing one of the best played contests of the season, while they also broke the winning streak of Battin, which had won six straight contests from Newark and suburban high schools, while they also lay claim to the Union county championship.

Dilts delivered the goods in his customary style, allowing seven hits, while sixteen Battinites were fanned to strike in vain, this making thirty-four strike-outs he has registered in the past two contests. The Elizabeth players scored their two runs in the fourth, the only time they bunched hits from the local heaver, on three hits and a sacrifice, one being a two-base blow. The boroughites tied the score in the next session on singles by Kirch and A. McDonough, the telling punch being delivered by Dilts on a triple to right field. The score remained deadlocked until the nineth session. With one out, Dawe singled and stole second while Van Mater was fanning, he scoring the deciding run when Townley doubled to centre.

One of the pleasing features of the game was the advent of Dawe into the hitting department, the local shortstop recovering his eye with a vengeance, connecting for three pretty singles. Mair also had an inclination to hit the ball on two occasions, one of the wallops going for two bags.

WILL T. GLENNEY STARTS IN METROPOLITAN AMATEUR

According to the official list of entries for the metropolitan amateur championship, which begins today over the Nassau Country Club links, there were sixty pairs sent off the first tee between 7 a. m. and noon. William T. Glenney, of Plainfield, and David Wagstaff, at 50, started at 11 o'clock this morning. Past, present and future champions unnumbered will fight for the title which Walter J. Travis is relinquishing without a struggle.

Among the more prominent players entered are Oswald Kirkby, New Jersey State champion; Max Marston, former holder of the same title; John G. Anderson, twice runner-up in the national amateur championship; Phil Carter, North and South amateur champion; Reggie Lewis, the new Westchester champion; Hamilton Kerr, Connecticut title holder; Frank Dyer, Pennsylvania champion; Fred Herreshoff, Gardiner White, Henry J. Topping, and a host of others with low handicaps.

P. H. S. SPORT NOTES

The annual baseball scrap of the Seniors and Faculty is scheduled for 3:30 on Parker Field tomorrow afternoon. The two lineups are not certain as everyone will get a parting shot, in one case at their pupils and again at their instructors.

Although the regular baseball schedule of the P. H. S. was completed last Saturday with the N. P. H. S. game, Manager Stelle may schedule a game with Battin High School. The Elizabeth game was supposed to have been played early in the season, but rain intervened.

The big P. H. S. inter-class meet, originally scheduled for tomorrow, has been postponed to Friday afternoon, when it will be held on Parker Field. Gold, silver and bronze medals and ribbons will be awarded, and the meet should result in some keen competition between Field and Daniels, the two P. H. S. stars.

The P. H. S. tennis team will next get in action Saturday afternoon when the Barringer High School racquet wielders appear on the local courts. After winning four meets without a defeat, the locals are after county and State honors, and a meet with N. P. H. S. for the city championship may be arranged, although two postponements have already been made.

CITY LEAGUE NOTES

Thinking that there would be no game Saturday on account of the threatening weather, quite a number of the members of the respective teams which played failed to show up, necessitating substitutions. At Dunellen Manager Scott, of the Tabs, who was minus DeNitzio and Kyle, was forced to put McFadden, one of his pitchers, out in right and to play Hanson, of the Netherwoods, first base. Manager Apgar, of the Dunellen, who was minus the services of Norman Harney and Bergen, also wanted Hannon, so the two managers decided the question by throwing up a coin. Hannon played a great all-around game for the Tabs, saving Teeling, who threw Brown's bunt high, from an error, and getting two clean hits, one of which was a two-bagger.

The absence of Bergen compelled Manager Tommy Apgar, of the Dunellen team, to catch Dixon. When Umpire Jimmy Montross, in announcing the batteries, said, "For Dunellen—McLaughlin and Dixon," there was loud acclamation from the Dunellen fans, for it reminded them of Central League days.

Center Fielder Gunzelman, of Tommy Apgar's team, is out of the game with a hand sprained in sliding to second at Dunellen Decoration Day afternoon. This sack is getting to be a hoodoo. Trust threw his shoulder out there Decoration Day afternoon, and on Saturday Teeling was laid out for a while in sliding to that station, when he received a blow on the side of his neck.

That Warry McLaughlin hasn't lost his batting eye was attested when he received two hits and was robbed of another out of three times up.

Not only did Bill catch sensationally, but his hitting was hard and timely. He is going now at a .320 clip.

METROPOLITAN AMATEUR GOLF FEATURE THIS WEEK

Local A. A. U. officials have been notified that there will be no radical changes in the basketball rules for next season, for at a meeting of the joint committees of the Young Men's Christian Association, Amateur Athletic Union and National Collegiate Athletic Association at the Hotel Imperial it was decided that the regulations need no important doctoring.

The members of the joint committee are: William H. Ball, Y. M. C. A.; George T. Hepburn, Charles A. Dean, E. C. Gibney and Harry Henschel, A. A. U.; Dr. Joseph Roycroft, Princeton; Ralph Morgan, University of Pennsylvania; Dr. James Naismith, University of Kansas, and Oswald Tower, of Williams College, representing the National Collegiate A. S.

HARDING STATES REPUBLICAN POLICIES IN KEYNOTE ADDRESS

Would Forget 1912 and Unite In Effort to Give the Nation Proper Military Preparations For Defense.

Advocates Protective Policies Which Make Americans Best Paid Workers In World. Wants Square Deal For Business.

Following is the Republican keynote address, delivered before the convention by Senator Warren G. Harding of Ohio, temporary chairman:

Gentlemen of the Convention: It is good to greet this representative body of that American Republicanism on which is centered the high hopes of the republic. I can believe—nay, I know—that a vast majority of the people of our United States is expecting the party sponsors here assembled to write anew the sacred covenant of Republicanism and reconsecrate the party to the nation's service and the people's advancement. That same majority expects you to select a standard bearer who shall not only typify our expression of faith, but shall so enlist the confidence and trust of our American citizenship that the work of this convention will be confirmed overwhelmingly at the ballot box next November.

The country, wearied afresh by a disappointing and distressing Democratic administration, is calling for Republican relief, and there is every inspiration, every encouragement, every confidence that the light of Republican conscience, set aflame in this convention, will illumine the way to the country's restoration.

WARREN G. HARDING.

Let Us Forget 1912.

We did not do very well in making for harmony the last time we met. The country has regretted, let us forget—and make amends to our country. We did not divide over fundamental principles, we did not disagree over a national policy. We split over methods of party procedure and preferred personalities. Let us forget the differences and find new inspiration and new compensation in an united endeavor to restore the country.

The essential principles of Republicanism are unchanged and unchanging. The lofty intent, the indestructible soul and the unifying spirit of Republicanism are as dominant today as in the destined beginning sixty years ago or at any time during the intervening years, and they are emphasized today by the proof recorded to Republican credit in the matchless chapters of American progress.

Principles Are Abiding.

No political party ever has builded or ever can build permanently except in conscientious devotion to abiding principles. Time never alters a fundamental truth. Conditions do change, popular interest is self asserting, and "paramounting" has its perils, as the Democratic party will bear witness, but the essentials of constructive government and attending progress are abiding and unchanging. For example, we ought to be as genuinely American today as when the founding fathers flung their immortal defiance in the face of old world oppressions and dedicated a new republic to liberty and justice. We ought to be as prepared for defense as Washington urged amid the anxieties of our national beginning and Grant confirmed amid the calm reflections of union restored.

Party Solidarity.

It is not my understanding that the remarks of the temporary chairman are to be taken as an expression of the party faith. Such expression must come from this convention, made up of delegates who believe in popular representative government through the agency of political parties. You come directly from the people, commissioned to speak their hopes and aspirations, to utter their patriotic desires and pledge their abiding faith. Out of the convictions and judgment and wisdom as expressed by the majority will come the sacred and sincere covenant of the Republican party.

We are a voluntary organization and must find our strength in the enlistment of volunteers who find the nearest or best expression of their individual convictions in our party declarations, and there can be no treason in withdrawal if our declarations fall short in their appeal.

No Forswearing Required.

Gentlemen of the convention, the first and foremost wish in my mind is to say that which will contribute to harmony of effort and add to the assurance of victory next November. I wish that because we believe Republican success to be for the best interests of our common country. The allied hosts of the believers in Republican principles are in a vast majority in this country—when the banners of harmony are unfurled. We have witnessed the come back of our party in various states. We have seen the reenlistment of those who believe in Republican doctrines, and victory has followed, and rejoicing has attended. No apology has been asked, no forswearing required. This is not the time for recrimination, it is the day of reconsecration.

Rededicating here and now the Republican party to the progress and glory of the republic, let us bury party prefixes with the administration which our differences put in power. I do not believe there is a really reactionary Republican bearing credentials to this convention. If there is he will depart, after our deliberations, solely and proudly a Republican, with heart aglow with the party spirit of 1916. And the welcome delegate who emphasizes his progressivism is expected to do his part in making our party a reflex of the best thought and best intent of sincere committal to the uplift and progress of the American people, thereby strengthening party purpose instead of magnifying individual belief, and he, too, will find new rejoicing in being a Republican. No party can endure which is not progressive.

Representative Government.

In building the surpassing temple of the republic, which we have been doing to the astonishment, sometimes the envy, sometimes the admiration of the world and ofttimes inspiring others by our example, there ever will be modifications and additions to meet the public need and conform to popular ideals. We do not fear to imitate nor fail to originate, but there can be no discord about underlying foundations or essential walls or proved arches or stately columns. Mine is a deep conviction that the founding fathers were divinely inspired, and the wisdom of representative popular government is proved in the surpassing achievement.

It is not alone the miracle of accomplishment which deepens our reverence; it is not alone the conviction that we have builded the first seemingly dependable popular government on the earth and exalted all its citizenship, which adds to our faith, but we are the oldest of existing civilized nations, with one passing exception, continued under one form of government, and under that form we have developed the highest standard of living in all the world. Surely we must be right.

Recalling that the mightier forward strides have been taken under a half century of Republican control, after we led in fixing the indissoluble ties of union, the retrospection, the contemplation and the anticipation combine to fill the Republican breast with pride and hope and trust and faith and magnify our obligations in this crucial year of our national life.

Much of the discussion of the hour is hinged upon a world at war. We need not wonder thereat, because the enormity of the conflict and the influences of its horrors have set mankind in upheaval. The traditions of civilization have been broken, and the international laws have been ignored. There is a tidal wave of distress and disaster; there are violent emotions and magnified fears. There are the extremes of incalculable sacrifices and measureless new fortunes, not all American. There are new wonders and new hindrances in commerce, changed balances of trade, new marvels in finance and utterly changed economic conditions. These have attended embarrassments in our foreign relations as difficult as those which the individual citizen experiences whose every neighbor is involved in deadly quarrel. Everything is abnormal except the depleted condition of the federal treasury, which is characteristic of Democratic control and the facility of the administration for writing varied notes without effective notice.

Unarmed America.

Amid these conditions has stood this unarmed giant, typifying the American republic, neutral and sane, to whom the neutral nations have turned for leadership. Our national unselfishness had been proved, our devotion to humanity had been established, our committal to international justice had long been proclaimed. The world had previously heard the voice of American fearlessness, and all the conditions single us out for leadership among the neutral powers, but the administration at Washington spoke with more rhetoric than resolution, and we came to realize what the warring powers soon came to know—that the official American voice lacked the volume of determined expression that once demanded international heed, and we lacked the strength of confidence in our own defenses.

It is too early to estimate the debit and credit account of the European war with civilization. Out of measureless cost and inestimable heroism must come a rebirth of individual spirituality, reawakened national hopes, new liberties and new baptisms in patriotism which must prove some compensation.

For National Defense.

Perhaps it is a reminder more than a discovery, but there has come to us a conviction that this great nation, rich in resources and strong in patriotic manhood, has been negligent concerning its own defense. We have dwelt in fancied rather than real security. Pride mingles with regret in this because it suggests the mind of a nation so free from intended offense that there was no cultivated thought of needed defense. Our righteousness of purpose is portrayed in our trust in unarmed safety. But there is a warning in bleeding Europe, and there is call today for prudent, patriotic and ample national defense. There is no mistaking the sentiment. We are not thinking of the hysterical. We need not be moved by a preparedness which is partisan in conception. We need not believe in a defense propaganda inspired by those who aim to wax fat in the production of arms and munitions because there is none. I deplore the teaching that an anxiety about our national defense is inspired by greed. We rejoice in free speech and untrammeled opinion, but patriotism is illy promoted by the imputation of false motives, whether aimed at those who believe in defense or those who doubt its wisdom. Such a teaching rends the concord of citizenship, which may develop a worse peril from within than from any enemy without.

Though we do not pretend to be exclusive in our devotion, we Republicans believe, sincerely and soberly, in adequate national defense. We have always believed in an ample navy, as invincible in modern might as John Paul Jones builded in our freedom's earliest fight. We have in mind a protected commerce on the waters and a seacoast secure in strong naval defense. We were building a high rank among naval powers when the Democratic party interrupted, and we subscribe to a stronger committal now because of a new realization of the envy which our wealth and our commerce invite and a new appreciation of our commanding place in the affairs of the world. I shall not say that it is ours to have the greatest navy in the world, but, noting the elimination of distance and the passing of our one time isolation, we ought to have a navy that fears none in the world and can say any time and anywhere, "These are American rights and must be respected."

Economy In Security.

It is not for me to specify the provisions for naval defense. Since modern warfare is in large part a conflict of brains, so must naval defense be devised in highest intelligence. Let us strengthen every arm—aerial, submarine, fleet cruisers and great dreadnaughts. Let him who is anxious about the cost remember that Republican policies afford the ample means without conscious burdens upon the people. Every forehanded American citizen, whatever his activity, knows that the cost of insurance against accident, theft, fire, flood or thunderbolt, assessed as a fixed charge upon his income, is worth its cost in peace of mind, though loss never attends. Moreover, under any system security is economy itself.

There are manifest differences about our developments for military defense. The president made a trip from the coast to the valley of the Missouri to tell the American people the need of preparedness. It might have been more seemly to tell the story to congress, for that body was in session and empowered to act, and seemingly ever ready to testify obedience. However, congress undertook to provide an army for defense, and the majority wobbled between pacification and preparedness until the Republican minority in the senate put something real in the pending measure. We Republicans made a rational response to the call of the land, but Democratic insufficiency and inefficiency are recorded in the conference amended act and a federal nitrate plant to supply powder to the patriots and pap to the paternalists and federal fertilizer to the farmers in competition with private enterprise is the great constructive offering of a Democratic majority.

Until the civilized world is pledged and repledged to peace, and until civilization commits nations to the nobler practices of the individuals who constitute them, in which I would have America lead, this republic will have need for a basic army and a ready provision for military defense. We proclaim justice and we love peace, and we mean to have them—and we are not too proud to fight for them.

No Curse of Militarism.

Let no one apprehend the curse of militarism in this fair land. We declare unalterably against it. Our free citizenship, walking confidently, absorbed in the triumphs of peace, would tolerate no such blight on American institutions. There is to be no surrender of cherished ideals. With that yearning for peace which has marked our continued development, with that same committal to justice which has given us front rank in the onward march of civilization, with that rare unselfishness which led us to unsheath the sword for humanity's sake and put all territorial aggrandizement aside, with that belief in the square deal, individual, national and international, which is the foundation of American faith, we mean to go on, an exemplar of peace to all the nations, an arbiter of justice to all the world, a promoter of righteousness to all the people of the earth.

The Protective Policy.

Subsistence is the first requisite of existence, and we have the higher American standard of living because of the Republican protective policy which makes of Americans the best paid workmen in all the world. Out of the abundance of employment and higher compensation, together with the beckoning opportunity which offers every reward, we Americans have attracted the laborers of the earth and set new standards here.

It is not for me to put the stamp of relative importance on pending issues. The intelligent voters will determine that for themselves. But I know what they are thinking, and they believe that the protective policy which made us industrially and commercially eminent is necessary to preserve that eminence. I know they want it restored and maintained. For myself I prefer a protective and productive tariff which prospers America first.

Moreover, I like the abiding consistency of our unchanging position upon this policy. The Republican convention of 1860 which gave to the nation and all history the nomination of Lincoln made this simple and ample utterance:

"That, while providing revenue for the support of the general government by duties upon imports, sound policy requires such an adjustment of these imports as to encourage the development of the industrial interests of the whole country, and we commend that policy of national exchanges which secures to the working men liberal wages, to agriculture remunerating prices, to mechanics and manufacturers an adequate reward for their skill, labor and enterprise and to the nation commercial prosperity and independence."

We might fittingly reiterate that utterance today. The failure of revenues under existing Democratic policy, the necessary resort to the imposition of direct and offensive taxation—war taxes on a people at peace—to meet deficiencies which ever attend Democratic control, the depression and disaster which followed Democratic revision which were relieved rather than caused by the European war, all these argue the Republican restoration.

Temporary Prosperity.

No one disputes a temporary prosperity in our land today. But it is sectional in its factory aspect, abnormal in its feverish rush, fictitious in its essentials and perverting in its tendency. Worse, it is the gold sluiced from the river of blood, poured out by the horrifying sacrifice of millions of our fellow men. God forbid that we should boast a prosperity wrought in such waste of human life. We had rather rejoice in the prosperity of peace. We had rather boast our good fortune won from the world as it stands erect, in a fair contest, where men openly contend for the laurels of industry and the garlands of trade. I do not mean that we must "sharpen our wits in competition with the world," for we tried that and involuntarily turned the blade to cutting our production and severing thousands from American payrolls. There was no cut in the cost of living, but a visible hack at the capacity to live.

The Democratic party is always concerned about the American consumer. Our Republican achievement is the making of a nation of prospering producers. Far better a high cost of living and ability to buy than a lowering of cost attended by destruction of purchasing capacity.

The Cost of Living.

It is worth while to recall the magnified importance given to the high cost of living four years ago, first, to emphasize Democracy's failure to reduce it, though it risked and almost accomplished the ruin of our good fortune in attempting it; second, to declare there is no such thing. What was thought to be the high cost were only the higher demands and the larger capacity to buy, which were the natural reflexes of the higher standard of living reared under Republican protection.

The one notable advance in cost has profited the American farmer, for whose befitting share in good fortune we have stood unfailingly and sincerely. His reward is a Republican achievement, and we prefer to cling to the conditions which brought to agriculture its delayed but deserved reward and hold it secure in Republican maintenance of a home market unmatched in all the world. More, we want our basic prosperity to be home created and home sustained and not dependent on conditions abroad.

Democratic Repentance.

The nations abroad and the Democratic party at home are bearing witness to Republican wisdom. German industrial self reliance is the sequence to her adoption of a Republican protective tariff, and England's manifest conversion to this fostering plan will magnify the prophetic wisdom of Republican protectionists. Even the Democratic party is penitent now and makes confession in action if not in words. The proposed destruction of American sugar has been repealed, and simulated grief about the American breakfast table has been put aside. With that facility for changing position which has been made manifest from Baltimore to Vera Cruz, the party in power proposes to restore the tariff commission which it had hastened to destroy.

This change of attitude is not because of its great and manifest love of commission alone, but because failure is written across every paragraph of Democratic revision, and fear is haunting the White House slumbers. The Wilson administration has sensed the country's anxiety about industrial conditions when the revelry in munitions and the immunity granted by war are ended. It has made a reflective estimate of the perils of 1914, once called psychological, and means to apply a stolen remedy, with more concern about the effects than the ethics involved. We do not oppose a tariff commission. We favor it. It is a Republican creation.

Square Deal For Business.

No honest business in this country is too big to be good and useful or too little to be protected and encouraged, and both big and little deserve the American shield against destruction by foreign competition and protection from the raiders, political or otherwise, at home. Business and its agencies of transportation are so inseparable from each other and from the common weal that the political party which does not pledge them a square deal, no more no less, does not deserve the confidence of the people. The strength of the business heart shows in every countenance in all the land, and the weakness of that heart holds a nation ill. We must strengthen the heart of American business in government cooperation rather than official opposition.

It is not inspiring to recite Democratic failures. I shall not dwell on that party's insincerity or incapacity. The country indicts and the record convicts. It proclaimed the sacredness of its pledges, and then profaned them. It professed economy and is staggered by its own extravagance. It has turned adequacy of revenue under indirect and unfelt taxes to insufficiency and direct taxation. It has espoused the freedom of the seas and wrought only the freedom of the Panama canal.

Our Widened Relationship.

One century of marvelous development has led us into another century of international sponsorship. This mighty people, idealizing popular government and committed to human progress, can no longer live within and for ourselves alone. Obliterated distance makes it impossible to stand aloof from mankind and escape widened responsibility. If we are to become the agency of a progressive civilization and God's great intent—and to believe otherwise is to deny the proofs of American development—we must assume the responsibilities of influence and example and accept the burdens of enlarged participation. The cloistered life is not possible to the potential man or the potential nation. Moreover, the Monroe doctrine, stronger for a century's maintenance, fixes an obligation of new world sponsorship and old world relationship. Our part must not be dictatorial; it must be trusted leadership in a fraternity of American republics.

Our Strength at Home.

To meet the obligations we must first make sure of maintained mental, moral and physical health at home. It is good to recall that ours is the only major political party ever formed in this country on a great moral issue. Our first proclamation was human liberty, to be glorified by the spiritual and material development of a free people. We opened the way to higher human attainments and emphasized human rights under the guaranties of civil liberty. We need only to go on, imbued with the spirit which has thus far pointed our way. The light of a moral people is the halo of liberty itself. Let us be honest not only in proclamation, but in practice; not alone in campaigns, but in incumbency of office; not only before altars of worship, but in our daily affairs and in every human relationship. If popular government is to be held dependable and command the confidence as well as the loyalty of its citizenship political parties and their platforms and their spokesmen must be honest and sincere.

The American Spirit.

In the travail of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness the American soul was born. Set aglow at Bunker Hill, it was reflected in the faces of the patriots of a fearless republic, where men dedicated themselves to the solemn and momentous task which was traced by an infinite hand. They were not all Americans by birth, but they were dedicated Americans in the baptismal rites of a new republic and a new patriotism. They could not all sign the Declaration of Independence, but they committed all Americans to it for all succeeding time. They could not all join in making the constitution, but they pledged the succeeding millions of Americans to its everlasting defense.

There were stalwart Americans then—Americans from Great Britain with British ideals and their devotion to orderly government. There were Americans from the land of Napoleon and Lafayette to give of the enthusiasm and heroism of France in establishing new freedom. There were Americans from Germany to fight the battles of the republic and blend their sturdiness and thoroughness in the progress of a new people, not a new race. There were Americans from the green fields of Ireland, with a passion for liberty; Americans from southern Europe to battle for opportunity. There were Americans who came from oppression and stood erect in the freedom of the republic. They all made common cause. There was lack of homogeneity of race, but there was kinship of soul, and that soul was American. The gates to our ports have swung inward ever since. There has been a welcome to the foreign born whom we asked to drink freely of the waters of our political life and find their places in the sun of American opportunity. They are an inseparable and important and valued part of American citizenship, and the few zealots of any origin who violate our neutrality do not and can not impugn the loyalty or the American patriotism of that great body which adds to the swelling chorus of My country, 'tis of thee,

Sweet land of liberty.

It is not surprising that in their hearts there is sympathy or partiality for the land of their nativity when it is involved in a life and death struggle like that which saturates Europe with the blood of their kinsmen. Search your hearts deeply, my countrymen. One must be human to be an American, but he must have human sympathies and human loves, and I should pity the foreign born and the sons of foreign born whose very souls are not wrung by the cataclysmal sorrow of the old world. But sorrow is the test of soul and the very altar of reconsecration. This is the momentous hour for the blazing soul of American allegiance. The spirit of the fathers is calling, and the safety of unborn Americans is demanding and the security of the republic is requiring that now and here and everywhere, under the stars and stripes, we proclaim a plain, simple, glad and unalterable Americanism. It must be the offering of loyalty and devotion and love and trust, and life, if need be, to these United States, now and everlastingly.

Submersion of Local Views.

The Americanism which indexes these United States must be more than the consecration of the individual. In the great fulfillment we must have a citizenship less concerned about what the government can do for it and more anxious about what it can for the nation. There must be the submersion of local and sectional views and the standards of rationality reared in their stead. Holding to the ideals of just American rights, the government must protect these rights at home, on our borders, on the seas, in every land and under every sky.

Our Foreign Relations.

Seeking to practice the very Americanism I preach as Republican gospel, I am reluctant to speak of a division of American sentiment relating to our foreign affairs. One must be an American first and a partisan afterward, though we believe Republicanism is the culture of highest Americanism. But it must be said, for the truth's sake and clearer understanding, we have hungered in vain for that unflinching Americanism at Washington which is needed to exalt the American soul. There is no geographic modification of American rights. They are the same in Mexico that they are on the high seas; they are the same in Europe that they are in Asia and are sacred everywhere, and the American spirit demands their fullest protection.

Whatever the ultimate solution may be, history will write Mexico as the title to the humiliating recital of the greatest fiasco in our foreign relations. Uncertainty, instability, Mexican contempt and waning self respect will be recorded in every chapter, and the pitiable story of sacrificed American lives and the destruction of lawfully held American property will emphasize the mistaken policy of watchful waiting and wabbling warfare.

Our civilization has evolved the rules of right conduct and written them into forms of government by law. They were conceived in justice and developed in righteousness. They have become instinctive in our American life and are cherished as a part of our people's inheritance. Our people do not understand any suspension; they are impelled to march on, confident and unafraid. When the spirit of American accomplishment, or the mercies of American ministration, or the inclinations of American teaching, or the adventures of American development take our people abroad under the compacts of civilization they have a right to believe that every guaranty of American citizenship goes with them. When it does not we have forfeited the American inheritance.

Our Course With Europe.

No political party can draw a variable chart for our ship of state amid Europe's warring ambitions, lust for power or battles for self preservation. Justice points the way through the safe channel of neutrality. There are dangers, seeming or real, looming on every side, but we should feel secure along the course marked by international law and our own conscientious convictions of American rights. "Straight ahead" shall be the command, and when peace comes the sober judgment of the world will exalt us ever higher and higher as a people strong in heart and noble in the espousal of justice and justice's humanity. In that worldwide respect and confidence which needs only to be preserved we shall have a lofty place in the great reconstruction, and we reasonably may hope to see this mighty republic again ministering to the reestablishment of peace and all its precious blessings.

My countrymen, Americanism begins at home and radiates abroad. The republican conception gives the first thought of a free people and a fearless people and bespeaks conditions at home for the highest human attainment. We believe in American markets for American products, American wages for American workmen, American opportunity for American genius and industry and American defense for American soil. American citizenship is the reflex of American conditions, and we believe our policies make for a fortunate people for whom moral, material and educational advancement is the open way. The glory of our progress confirms. The answered aspirations of a new world civilization acclaim. We have taken the ideal form of popular government and applied the policies which had led a continent to the altars of liberty and glorified the republic. We have justified pride and fortified hope. We need only to preserve and defend and go unfalteringly on. Power is the guarantor of peace and conscience the buckler of everlasting right. Verily, it is good to be an American. And we may rejoice to be Republicans.

SIDELIGHTS ON THE CHICAGO CONVENTION

Chairman Hilles called the Republican Convention to order at 11 a. m. One hour later the Progressives heard the gavel that opened their second national convention.

Republicans have 1,982 delegates and alternates; Progressives, 1,791.

Victor Murdock, of Kansas, wielded the gavel at the Auditorium at noon.

The organization of both conventions will take but a few hours, when adjournment will be taken until tomorrow.

The suffragist parade, to be held rain or shine, is the big event of the afternoon.

The make-up of the Republican platform will include planks on Americanism, preparedness, protective tariff, merchant marine, and an arraignment of the Democratic administration.

The credentials committee gets busy promptly today and will have its report ready for tomorrow's session.

Oklahoma has sent an Indian delegate to the Republican Convention. He is E. W. Frey, and lives at Sallisaw, Okla.

Governor Frank Willis, of Ohio, will nominate Theodore E. Burton, the Ohio favorite son, for the Presidential nomination.

John Wanamaker, of Philadelphia, and Senator Wadsworth, of New York, are among those who gave a fancy price for private residences during convention week.

Senator Sherman, of Illinois, will have the solidly cast 58 votes of the Illinois G. O. P. on every ballot, it is claimed.

New York has the largest number of delegates from any State, as usual, numbering 87. Pennsylvania has 76.

"Let us forget 1912" is the slogan of both conventions, and there is a general feeling of good fellowship among representatives of both wings of the party.

Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank is grand marshal of the suffrage parade today. Carrie Chapman Catt and Dr. Anna Howard Shaw will be escorted by prominent women.

The Coliseum has had three previous Republican National Conventions, and it was there that the Progressive party was born four years ago.

The building is 405 feet long, 170 feet wide, and there are 22 exits. The seating capacity is 12,400, and every seat was filled this morning.

On the back wall of the speakers' stand is hung a large oil portrait of Abraham Lincoln, which has been in six Republican National Conventions.

Senator Warren G. Harding, of Ohio, as temporary chairman, is the man at the helm at the Coliseum, and it is predicted he will be made permanent chairman.

The name of Senator Weeks, of Massachusetts, will be placed before the convention by the veteran orator, Senator Lodge.

Leading politicians liken the present Republican Convention to that of 1800, which nominated Garfield, because of the uncertainty as to the nominee.

SUFFRAGE PARADE AT G. O. P. CONVENTION

Mrs. E. F. Feickert Will Lead New Jersey Women in Big Demonstration.

One of the most picturesque suffrage demonstrations ever planned in this country will be staged at Chicago today during the Republican National convention. There will be a parade, but it will differ from the former suffrage parades that have been held in this country because in addition to visualizing the nation-wide demand on the part of American women—the demand for an equal suffrage plank in the Republican National platform.

The New Jersey delegation will be lead by the State President, Mrs. Edward F. Feickert, of Plainfield, and among the New Jersey women in line will be Mrs. E. G. Blaisdell, of Glassboro; Miss Esther G. Ogden, of Elizabeth; Mrs. Francis deLacey Hyde, of Plainfield; Miss A. E. Cameron, of Glen Ridge; Mrs. William Birdsall, of East Orange; Mrs. Joseph H. Marvel, of Atlantic City, also Mrs. Wilson D. Lyon, of Glen Ridge.

A unique feature of the Chicago parade will be the mobilization of the thousands of women who are to take part in it along the Lake Shore in Grant Park. In no other cities have the paraders ever been able to take advantage of so vast an open space in which to mobilize. Usually the procedure has been for the various groups to form along side streets leading to the main parading thoroughfare, and to fall in line from these street cartances. In Chicago, however, Grant Park affords acres of open space adjacent to Michigan Boulevard, and when the women assemble there this afternoon this acreage will be converted into a vertiable suffrage garden, for the dull brown earth will be blotted out by the white gowns of thousands of women. These gowns, garnished with sashes of suffrage gold and set off at intervals by the gleaming banners of the paraders, promise to furnish one of the most wonderful and splendid suffrage pictures ever seen.

Then at four o'clock this afternoon with yellow banners flying and bands playing the women will advance across the viaduct leading to Michigan Boulevard and parade to the Coliseum, where the men who are to choose the Republican candidate for the National Presidency will be in session. In the white and gold lines that will sweep down Michigan Boulevard there will be working girls marching beside women who have been born to fortune; women who have toiled all their lives in sweatshops, mill and factory, and in this picture will be embodied the whole democracy of the suffrage movement. But whether working girl or society woman, each marcher in line will be keeping step to the beat of a single thought—that of impressing upon the masculine voters of this country the necessity of having the National Republican convention insert an equal suffrage plank in its national party platform.

The women in line will not depend upon their presence alone to convey this thought to the Republican delegates. Marching in the ranks with them will be two "gentle hints," weighing a ton apiece and carrying a suffrage plank between them. The "gentle hints" in question will be perfectly good "G. O. P." elephants, and the plank which they are to carry will symbolize the suffrage plank which the National American Woman Suffrage Association wants incorporated in the Republican party's National platform.

EARL KITCHENER WAS POPULAR IDOL, LOVED BY ALL THE BRITISH PEOPLE

"Man of Iron" Won Fame by His Daring Feats In India and Africa In Quelling Rebellions.

Named Secretary of State For War on Outbreak of Present Struggle and Had Directed Armies.

WHEN Earl Kitchener, British secretary of state for war, lost his life as the armored cruiser Hampshire sank the popular idol of the English people was taken away.

Kitchener had won his popularity by daring feats in India and Africa and on the outbreak of the present war succeeded Premier Asquith as head of and directed the affairs of the war office in London. Kitchener made frequent trips to the firing lines in France and was in close touch with all military operations. The Germans had been after Kitchener since the war started, and they knew that he made frequent trips across the channel, but until the other day they always failed.

The "man of iron"—that exactly sums up the character and career of Lord Kitchener. Thorough, resolute and possessing that virtue of virtues—silence—the work Lord Kitchener accomplished stamps him as one of the greatest soldiers and administrators Britain has ever produced. Work, not talk, was his motto.

Take the Boer war, for instance. Kitchener went to South Africa in the black days, when Great Britain had suffered a succession of defeats—Stormberg, Magersfontein, Colenso—and British military supremacy was in grave danger. And how the "gentlemen" of the ranks and others hated his methods! Soon letters were arriving in England complaining of his arbitrary ways. He was "making himself hated everywhere," "insulting voluntary officers of noble birth daily," "ruining the organization" and so on. But never a word from Kitchener until he broke the silence with the laconic dispatch, "Send me more men." And with these he won through.

"I understand," a friend remarked to him as he was about to sail for South Africa, "that you intend to reorganize the transport as soon as you arrive."

Takes Boer Capital.

"Reorganize!" replied Kitchener. "I am going to organize it." And he did, with the result that the army was able to march on the Boer capital.

It was a cousin of Lord Kitchener who told the story of how the famous field marshal got his first chance. A tall, overgrown lad, nearly six feet one inch in height, he managed somehow to scramble into Woolwich. He was not high in the lists, and no one thought anything about him. After leaving Woolwich young Kitchener was gazetted to the corps of Royal engineers and appointed on the Palestine survey—because he knew how to photograph. The authorities at that time wanted some one to go to Palestine to take photographs, and it was his knowledge of photography which led to young Kitchener's appointment and gave him his chance.

His False Prediction.

Curiously enough, Lord Kitchener was a fatalist and on several occasions had expressed some very strong convictions as to his future. During the Soudan campaign he was once warned not to expose himself so recklessly to the enemy while in action. To this remonstrance he replied: "I shall never be killed. When my time comes I shall die peacefully in my bed."

His capacity for work was amazing, and he had no patience with a man less energetic than himself. It was characteristic of him that his first question when he entered the war office as secretary for war was, "Is there a bed in the building?" "No, sir," replied an official. "Then get one," said Lord Kitchener. Then the official knew that day or night would find Lord Kitchener at his post.

During the South African war he seldom had more than three or four hours' sleep a day, rising regularly at 4 or 5 o'clock in the morning and working hard until night. Officers knew that Kitchener always meant business. He had no use for regimental ornaments; practical soldiers were what he wanted. One officer in command of a column had not been heard of for some days. Telegrams were sent in all directions to find him bearing two questions: "What are you doing? Have you taken any Boers and how many?"

His grim, laconic humor was well illustrated by his reply on one occasion to the war office authorities who were pressing a certain weapon.

"Keep the gun," he wired. "I can throw stones myself."

No man had a greater faculty for estimating a man's capabilities at a glance. Men did the impossible at a word from him.

"Twelve hours in which to carry this dispatch?" he remarked to an officer on one occasion. "You must do it in six." And the officer, who had asked for twelve hours, did it in five.

Time to Kitchener was everything. While engaged in building a bridge for the advance upon Pretoria the engineering officer, apprehensive of danger to his workmen, hinted his fears to Lord Kitchener, explaining that a different mode of construction would be much safer than the one employed, which might, indeed, cost the lives of twenty to thirty men. Kitchener listened patiently and then asked, "How much longer would it take to do the work by this safer method?" "Not more than an hour longer, sir." "Very well, do not change the plans. You will continue the work as it is begun."

LIKED SINGLE SOLDIERS.

Although in his sixty-sixth year Lord Kitchener had the vigor of a man ten years younger. He was straight as a dart, stood six feet two inches, his black hair only slightly tinged with gray. His penetrating gray eyes and stern, cold expression were the terror of army loafers who either "get on or get out!"

Lord Kitchener was a bachelor. Society he detested. For women he had no time. He dedicated himself to his work and did not believe in the domestic joys for the soldier. All his officers when he commanded the army in Egypt had to be bachelors. He did not want to have men around him sighing for home and wife and children. Those things were not for him.

EARL KITCHENER AND THE CRUISER HAMPSHIRE.

Don't you think, judging by the interesting store advertisements printed today, that a visit to some of the stores just now might be interesting as well as profitable to you?

It is proper that the housewife should know as much about the business of buying for the home as her husband knows about the business in which he earns his income.

Buying for the home cannot be done wisely and economically unless the "buyer" is a student of the advertisements—no more than a store may be made prosperous without advertising.

SYNOD TO MEET AT HOLLAND, MICH.

Important Questions to Be Discussed at Gathering of Clergy and Laity.

CONVENES NEXT WEEK

Rev. George Hauser, of German Reformed Church, Will Be Local Delegate—Rev. J. Y. Broek and Edgar F. Sheppard Are Alternates.

The one hundredth and tenth regular session of the General Synod of the Reformed Church in America, which will convene at Holland, Mich., on Thursday, June 15, will be one of unusual interest and importance. In connection with this meeting of synod, the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Hope College will be celebrated. Hope is the Western college of the Reformed Church and grew out of a school that was established in 1851. The college began its work in 1866 and is under the direction supervision of The General Synod, in fact, it is the only college that Synod does now so control for Rutgers College has been independent of Synod for several years. With Hope College is the Western Theological Seminary also under the control of Synod, so it is most fitting that Synod should be present at this celebration of the fiftieth anniversary. Hope College has gown to be one of the leading colleges of the Middle West and numbers among its graduates many men and women who are prominent in the life and work of the present day.

There are several important questions that will come up before this Synod. The amendments to the constitution of the church that were sent down to the classis last year for consideration have been adopted by the required number of classis and Synod will probably declare them passed and put them into operation. Several new amendments will be considered and disposed of. There is to be a report concerning the possible union of the Reformed Church in America with the Reformed Church in the United States, commonly known as the German Reformed Church. The chairman of this committee is the Rev. T. H. McKenzie, of Flushing, N. Y.

The matter of establishing another college in the West will also be taken up by this Synod. Central College of Pella, Iowa, formerly under control of the Baptist denomination, has been offered to the Reformed Church. The reason for this offer is that the Baptists have another college only sixty miles away and they wish to unite the two as neither have been altogether successful, being so near each other. There is apparently a need for another Reformed college further West and the Board of Education have investigated this new site and will recommend that Synod consider it.

Another question that may come up is the property rights of classis in the church property of an organization that ceases to exist. This question has recently been much discussed in the classis of New York, which has lost three or four churches and their property in the last two years.

The year has been a most successful one in the denomination, all the Eastern Synods except Albany have made large advances. The report of the Western Synod is not yet at hand, but report says that it also has made an unusual advance and this is only what is to be expected for the Western Synod has in recent years made greater advances than all the Eastern Synods put together.

Synod will convene in the assembly room of the Ottawa Beach Hotel on Thursday, June 15, at 2:30 p. m. At this session the officers will be elected, the report of the committee on nicrology read and in order to give the evening to young people's work the president, contrary to custom, will preach the synodical sermon at this time.

In order to give Friday evening to Hope College, the public meeting in behalf of young people's work will be held Thursday evening in Hope church, Holland. Addresses will be made by the Rev. T. F. Bayles, secretary of the Board of Publication and Bible School Work, and the Rev. G. W. Richards, D. D., professor of history in the Theological Seminary of the Reformed church in the United States at Lancaster, Pa., who will speak on "Religious Education, Its Aims and Methods. There will be a short business session after the public meeting for the appointment of committees and such matters as are necessary.

All day Friday will be given over to Hope College. The academic procession will form at Winant's chapel at 9 a. m. At 10 a. m. the exercises commemorating the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Hope College will take place on the campus, or in Carnegie Gymnasium. At 2 p. m. there will be an excusion on one of Graham & Morton boats down Macatawa Bay and out into Lake Michigan. At 6:30 p. m. the alumni banquet, with the General Synod as guests, will take place at the Ottawa Beach Hotel.

Saturday, which is usually a rest day, will be given to business entirely. Dr. and Mrs. Venema will give a reception from 3 to 5 in the afternoon, and at 7:30 the senior class of the college will give a historic pageant on the college campus.

The President of Synod will preach before Synod on Sunday morning, and the sacrament of the Lord's supper will be administered without other addresses. In the afternoon there will be a special meeting in recognition of the centennial of the American Bible Society. On Sunday evening the baccalaureate sermon of Hope College will be preached in Hope church. At the other churches there will be special services celebrating the college anniversary, and the general theme will be the influnce of Hope College during the half century.

Monday and Tuesday will be given over to business. On Monday there will be a public meeting in Hope church on behalf of foreign missions, and on Tuesday evening a public meeting on behalf of domestic missions. Tuesday will also be ladies' day at Synod, and meetings will be held all day in Hope church. The Woman's Board of Domestic Missions will have charge of the morning session, and the speakers will be Rev. William Worthington, of Annville, Ky.; Rev. G. Watermulder, of the Winnebago Indian Mission, Nebraska; Mrs. C. V. R. Gilmore, vice-president for the Particular Synod of Chicago, and Mrs. John S. Allen, secretary of the Board The afternoon session will be under the charge of the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions, but their program is not yet ready

Synod will probably conclude its sessions some time Wednesday, and the commencement of Hope College Wednesday evening will be the last affair the delegates will attend

There are 203 delegates, and the visitors, wives of delegates, officers of Synod and the Board's speakers, etc., will probably bring the number of those present up to over 400 Those in the vicinity of New York city will go by a special train on the Lehigh Valley Railroad, those from Albany and vicinity by a special on the West Shore Railroad

The Ottawa Beach Hotel, which will be opened for the use of Synod, will be one of the most delightful places that Synod has ever had for a temporary home

The following will represent the Classis of Newark at Synod; Rev. George Hauser, of the German Reformed church, North Plainfield; Rev. O. M. Trousdale, Rev. C. H. Stewart, Rev. Albertus T. Broek, Elders Romor Thoenig, Fred J. Henry and Giles VanDuyne, of Newark, and Elder David Kay, of Glen Ridge. Rev. J. Y. Broek and Elder Edgar F. Sheppard, of Trinity Reformed church, are named as secundi delegates.

160 DEAD IN STORM ALONG THE MISSISSIPPI

EXHIBIT TO BE CONTINUED.

The manual training and arts exhibit which has been shown at the Plainfield High School during last week will be continued all of this week. County Superintendent of Schools Dr. Johnson visited the school this morning and highly commended the various departments on their displays. He expressed a wish that the teachers of the entire county might have an opportunity to view the exhibition and a result the time was lengthened. The Plainfield public is also invited to view the articles.

CYCLONE DOES DAMAGE TO A KENTUCKY TOWN

Memphis, Tenn., June 7.—Reports received today from the storm sections of Tennessee, Mississippi, Southwest Missouri, Arkansas and Western Kentucky show that the death list will exceed 160. This includes the thirty reported missing when the steamer Eleonore was capsized in the Mississippi River, 17 miles north of Memphis, at 10 o'clock Monday night.

Lexington, Ky., June 7.—More than a score of homes were destroyed and many persons were picked up in their beds and blown hundreds of feet into the open fields by a cyclones which swept Graves county, Kentucky, last night, devastating a section four miles wide and twenty miles long. Tobacco and other crops were heavily damaged. The loss is estimated at $50,000.

COLLINS IS COMPTROLLER.

According to a court decision received yesterday, General Dennis F. Collins, of Elizabeth, was declared the legal possessor of the office of comptroller of that city succeeding J. S. Sauer, who has held it for some time. The matter has been in dispute some time and was finally taken to the courts for settlement.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. Henry R. Maxson, of West Seventh street, has been confined to her home by illness during the past week.

John V. Todd, of New London, Conn., has returned home after a few days' visit with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Todd, of West Front street.

GEN. ROBERTSON TO BE WAR MINISTER?

Generally Believed He Will Succeed Kitchener.

London, June 7.—There is much speculation regarding Lord Kitchener's successor. It is recognized that in view of the demands of the war the appointment of a new secretary cannot be long delayed, and it is assumed that an audience which Premier Asquith had with the king was connected with this question.

During Lord Kitchener's intended visit to Russia General Sir William Robertson, chief of the imperial general staff, would ex-officio have taken charge of the army, and the conjecture is pretty general that he will succeed Lord Kitchener as secretary for war.

The appointment is, of course, a question for the cabinet, whose decision will be submitted to the king for approval.

General Robertson was received in audience by King George to report on the situation on the British front in Belgium and France.

The parliamentary correspondent of the Daily News writes:

Some time ago the claims of General Robertson to the secretaryship of war were canvassed, and one of the members of the house of commons privately made known his readiness to vacate his seat in favor of General Robertson if the latter in the course of events should succeed Lord Kitchener. But great as have been Sir William's services, it is not by any means generally felt that he would be the best man to handle the civil side of the duties of secretary of state for war.

The vacancy reopens the question, on which there long had been a good deal of feeling, whether the secretary for war ought not to be a civilian appointment, just as Mr. Balfour is the civilian first lord of the admiralty. If this view is taken the cabinet claims of various ministers may be discussed, and some are already speaking of Mr. Lloyd George in this connection. But the minister of munitions has his hands full with the Irish question just now.

ADDRESSED EAST END ASS'N.

Arthur B. Jones and C. L. Riley, of the Public Recreation Committee, were in attendance at the monthly meeting of the East End Civic Association last night and addressed the members on the work of the committee and the value of community center activity. The East End Association has been interested in matters of this kind and are preparing plans to promote them fully when the new Emerson School is completed, the auditorium of the building to be used for the purpose. The remainder of the meeting was devoted to business of a routine nature.

GOES TO SOMERVILLE.

Clarence Higgins, eighteen years old, of Stone street, was taken to the Somerset jail this morning in default of $1,000 bail to await action by the grand jury on the charge of appropriating an automobile one night recently from a garage of a Grove stret residence and using it in taxi service for his own account. It is alleged that Higgins did a profitable business and then restored the machine to the garage in pretty bad shape.

SEVERELY REPRIMANDED.

Irving DeLawater, who drives a garbage wagon through the borough and city for Freeman Stait, of Warren Township, was severely reprimanded by Recorder Hand in the borough court this morning for leaving his team, which is inclined to wander about and bark trees, unfastened. He was warned if this happened again that his permit would be taken away.

SURVIVORS DESCRIBE NAVAL BATTLE; GREATEST IN HISTORY OF WORLD

Fight to Death With Both Sides Holding on Like Bulldogs Until the Germans Retired to Their Base.

How the Big British Ships Were Sent to the Bottom. Warrior Abandoned After Fight to save Her.

AMONG the British sailors who on their return told of the North sea naval battle one describes a duel worthy of the Nelson tradition between the Invincible and a big German warship, the identity of which is uncertain.

"The two ships," he said, "fought like bulldogs, all guns firing at once and most of them hitting, with such an enormous weight of metal pouring out that the duel was bound to be short. It lasted less than thirty minutes.

"It was a fight to death, and both ships died. The German vessel burst into flames and sank. Almost immediately afterward the Invincible followed her to the bottom. Both sank with their flags flying. The water was strewn with men dead and alive. But in the midst of the fierce fight it was impossible to agrest the activities for the purpose of saving life.

"The Queen Mary was in the thickest of the fight and did heavy damage. She then became the center of the converging fire of several powerful German ships. She broke in two and went down.

"The lot of the Indefatigable was very similar. She was in a smashing fight at close quarters. Then the life was blown out of her. The Warrior had to be abandoned at high sea after being towed for ten hours.

"The Warspite, which was one of the earliest vessels to return to the base, dashed between the Warrior and her enemies and received a salvo meant for the badly hit Warrior. She did not save the Warrior, but probably saved the Warrior's crew."

Big Shells at Short Range.

A survivor of the Warrior told this story:

"We got to very close quarters, less than 5,000 yards, I should say. It was fair weather, but misty. A westerly gale had subsided. The entire German navy seemed out against us and all ships were firing as fast as they could serve their guns.

"The whole sea looked like one bloody battlefield. At such short range you could scarcely miss. Great 14.2 inch shells were coming at us all the time. Some smashed clean through the ship, killing every man they touched. We engaged ship after ship. We accounted for two light cruisers and a destroyer.

"We saw the Queen Mary blow up as a result of concentrated fire. It looked as if a magazine exploded. She broke in two and went down like a stone. It was all over in a couple of minutes.

"Right in the hottest of the battle it was impossible to pick up men out of the water.

"The Indefatigable went down much the same way. She had given the enemy a pounding, and they gave the same to her. Our losses on the Warrior were few. We were badly holed. One of her engines was smashed, and the others stopped.

"One of our ships took us into tow and drew us out of the line—a grand bit of work in the middle of shell fire and torpedo attacks. We should have reached the base, I think, if the sea had not gone up. We shifted ships without any loss of life.

"All we want is another ship and another 'go' at the Germans, for they are jolly worth fighting."

Describes the Battle.

Another survivor tells this story of the battle:

"The battle cruiser squadron was shoving through the water at twenty-five knots, destroyers and light cruisers in their appointed places. The sea was as smooth as a mill pond, the day was warm, and a slight haze hung over the water. For well nigh sixteen hours the squadron steamed steadily on, then the destroyer screen reported the presence of enemy craft—small craft, but significant perhaps of the presence of bigger vessels. A smart little destroyer action was begun. A light cruiser dashed up to assist, and soon the first phase of the battle was in full swing.

"Later the battle cruisers joined, and when the enemy appeared with the full strength of his battle cruiser squadron all the elements of an evenly contested battle were present.

"But the readiness with which the Germans accepted the challenge must have set Admiral Beatty to thinking hard. The Germans—and from their point of view it may be sound enough tactics not to fight unless they are there in superior force—do not fight as the British do, always and at any cost. For the first time since the war began they stood up to Beatty and his ships, and from the impressions gathered from Beatty's men who have come through the fight the Germans suffered heavily during that phase.

"It was a running fight. The Lion, as on the memorable day off Dogger bank, led the line, followed by the Tiger. Both performed marvels of speed, and there should be further honors for the engine room staffs. Opposite them at long range was, among others, an old enemy in the Derrflinger. In the Dogger bank fight the Derrflinger sent a shell into the wardroom of the Tiger.

"It was therefore with peculiar relish that the crew of the Tiger proceeded to demonstrate to their old enemy that they were very much alive. From the Tiger there went a shell which, as those in a position to observe reported, got one of the Derrflinger's turrets and wiped out a gun crew. Others were planted with equally deadly effect on the enemy, and unless the Tiger's men are greatly out in their calculations there is not much more likely to be heard of the Derrflinger.

"The battle raged with tremendous violence. The air was filled with white hot steel, dust and slivers. Ears were deafened by the tremendous crash and clatter. If all the opposing forces remained as they were the result was inevitable.

"The battle cruiser action was fought with the enemy lying close to neutral Danish waters off Jutland. Everything was going well with Admiral Beatty when the four superdreadnoughts came up and rushed in to cut off the enemy from his southern base. Admiral Beatty was then to drive in from the northeast and either force the Germans to shelter in neutral waters or to compel them to accept the challenge of the heavy battleships.

Germans Re-enforced.

"The strategy was excellent, but it was applied too late. From the south came re-enforcements which provided the explanation of the phenomenon of the Germans accepting Admiral Beatty's challenge. From the south came the major portion of the German grand fleet. The Warspite got the brunt of the first attack. It is said that she became isolated from her consorts and got surrounded by half a dozen ships. She made a brilliant fight. She disposed of more than one of them and by clever maneuvering showed a clean pair of heels. The other superdreadnaughts retired to the assistance of the battle cruisers, which were then faced with the dreadful ordeal of tackling unsupported the flower of the German navy. It is this phase of the fight which will go down as one of the most gallant deeds in British naval history.

"In naval construction you choose between speed and protection. Battle cruisers are built primarily for speed and are not intended to face up to a prolonged fight against heavy armored and heavily gunned ships. Admiral Beatty knew the risks he was to run, but he had to hold the enemy at all costs. He knew the grand fleet was not far behind, and he knew what it meant if he could hold on until Vice Admiral Sir John Jellicoe arrived. What Beatty and his men went through during those hours of inferno no one but themselves can ever realize. Strong men, physically strong and strong of nerves, men who had looked death in the face in naval actions before, shuddered as they thought of it.

"'It was like forty thunderstorms rolled into one,' said one of them.

"'It was as if all the ammunition in Great Britain and Germany had been let off in one half hour,' said another.

"'It was hell,' was the commonest description of it."

Kept Record of Battle.

A correspondent of the Glasgow Herald writes:

"One man of the fleet who was in the thick of it possesses an odd relic of the fight of his own making—a time table of the battle giving the hours of the different occurrences and written on the back of a treasury note.

"It had all the appearance of one of those elaborate time tables that sporting writers give at the end of their description of some important game, when a dashing three-quarter goes through to score a brilliant 'try' which makes the grand stand rise as one man.

"At present and doubtless hereafter that treasury note will not be exchanged. It is not a scrap of paper with certain monetary value, but a historical document.

"It was soon after 3 o'clock that the battle opened at a distance of 7,000 to 9,000 yards. The German boats, hurrying along at full speed, were mere blots on the surface, moving under their canopy of smoke.

"Among the British battleships which were associated with the battle cruiser squadron in the first phase of the fight none took a more prominent part than the recently completed Warspite. She did not have the same disadvantage as the battle cruisers in the face of the enemy's battle fleet, and she took her full share and more in fight. It is said that to her is due the destruction of at least two German vessels. The measure of protection which she and her three consorts endeavored to afford our battle cruisers by tackling as many German battleships as would face them may account in some measure for the extraordinarily slight damage sustained by those of the battle cruisers which came out of the action.

"To another of the battleships, understood to be the Valiant, is ascribed the sinking of an enemy submarine. The U-boat appeared almost across the track of the battleship after having fired without effect at another British vessel. The Valiant, racing at full speed, rammed the submarine, which sank at once."

RECREATION NOTES

The swimming classes are scheduled for tonight in the High School pool as follows: Men, 7:30 to 8:30; Girls' Friendly Society, 8:30 to 9; and men, 9 to 10.

The Washington School will be closed on Thursday nights during the summer. The boys' club which has been meeting in the school on that night will meet hereafter on Friday night.

William Finnegan, a former resident of this city, but now a traveling salesman with headquarters at Baltimore, is spending a few days with local friends.

Mrs. William C. Kinney, of Arlington avenue, was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital Monday night for medical treatment and possibly an operation.

CHANCE FOR PRESS ADVERTISERS TO ATTRACT THE ATTENTION OF THE ENTIRE COUNTY.

As the result of an agreement between the Plainfield Daily Press and the Elizabeth Evening Times any advertiser placing a classified ad in the Press may have that same ad inserted in the Elizabeth Evening Times upon the payment of one-half more than is charged for the Daily Press insertion alone. Thus, if an advertisement in the Daily Press costs forty cents, the same advertisement may be placed in the Elizabeth paper for an additional twenty cents.

The Elizabeth Evening Times has a circulation of 9,000 and is widely distributed throughout Union County. Thus if an advertiser places his advertisement in the Plainfield Daily Press and Elizabeth Evening Times he places it before the eyes of thousands of readers at a very small cost.

Most advertisers welcome the opportunity to attract the attention of the whole county to their offerings and with the co-operation of the Elizabeth Evening Times the Plainfield Daily Press is now able to make this possible. The Elizabeth Evening Times has earned a reputation for itself as an advertising medium, especially along the classified line, and it is a well known fact that its influence extends into other counties besides Union.

PATRONESSES FOR INDIAN LEGEND

Prominent Society Women Will Attend Annual Outdoor Perfomance.

HISTORY OF THE PLAY

W. de La R. Anderson Dramatized the Story as Given to Him by Old Settler—Natives to Comprise the Cast.

Ideal weather is all that is needed to successfully present the Indian Legend at Watchung, tomorrow night, when the first presentation will take place on the mountainside opposite Wetumpka Falls. The participants have been coached for some time past and indications point to a far better production than in previous years. The entire Legend will be repeated Saturday night.

The list of patronesses for the event includes the Mesdames Champlain L. Riley, Arthur B. Jones, Augustus G. Hooley, William Causbrook, A. E. Force, J. M. Charles, Henry L. De Forest, William M. Sandford, Frank C. Ard, Ernest R. Ackerman, William S. Tyler, Arthur M. Harris, E. Walter Van Wagner, Charles A. Reed, Harold D. Corbusier, William L. Smalley, Joseph Smith, Edgar Boyd, U. G. Tingley, Isaac Runyon, George Mantz, Walter Manning, W. H. Williams, Henry C. White, Edward V. Cox, Charles L. Petze, Wadsworth Parker, of Plainfield; Mrs. J. V. D. Field, of Bound Brook; Mrs. Runyan Field, of Bound Brook; Mrs. William Brewster Humphrey, president of the American Indian League, of Chicago; Mrs. Richard G. Moldenke, of Watchung, and Mrs. William de La R. Anderson, Mrs. Walter Veysey, Mrs. Ora B. Coates and Mrs. Charles A. Eaton.

W. de La R. Anderson dramatized the story in pantomime just as it was handed down to him by an old settler. The theme of the presentation is as follows:

It came to pass, early in the month of June, that One Feather (W. de La R. Anderson), the young chief of the Watchung Indians, assembled his tribe in camp on the banks of the mountain stream, which boils through the gap in the first ridge, and proposed here to make his headquarters for the annual hunting and fishing expeditions. But his plans were brought to naught by the information received from Deed Pronge (Thomas Featherstone), the tribal scout, brought in just as preparation of the first meal was under way, that an armed band of Whites from the German Valley were close upon them. One Feather, seeking to act with all wisdom, assembled his braves and wise men about him in council.

Some few counseled forbearance but the many were eager for the bloody trophies and booty which was to be obtained. So it was that a crafty plan of entrapping their victims was laid. Deer Prong went forth to light the signal fire when the Whites arrived, and it was he who by the light of his signal fire was discovered and fired upon by one who acted as advance guard of the settlers, whom he fought to the death on the top of the cliff, and hurled the body down from the height.

Then it was that One Feather directed his crafty plan of attack to success. Booty was taken and many captives were brought into camp for torture and burning. It chanced that Capt. Michelson (Lewis Snoden), leader of the settlers, was first at the torture post, and that Wetumpka (Miss Teresa Schmidt), a half bred Indian princess, who at Amboy had saved the live of One Feather, and whom he loved, was among the captured Whites. It was with Indian craft and quiet that she stole away in the shadows and creeping up, set Michelson free, then disclosing herself to the Indians, pleaded for her friends, the Whites.

In grand council assembled, the lands were then divided, the Whites the West, the Reds the East, and One Feather and Wetumpka met again, as fate would have it, joined their hands in Indian wedlock.

ASSEMBLYMAN RUNYON TO PRESIDE AT MEN'S MEETING

The religious work committee of the Y. M. C. A., of which George E. Hall is chairman, announce that their plans for the big meeting for men at the association building on Sunday afternoon at 3:30 are about completed. The auditorium will be tastefully decorated and everything done to make it attractive and in harmony with the spirit of the occasion. Assemblyman William N. Runyon will preside, and with the committee is arranging a strong program.

In addition to the rousing song service, led by the big men's chorus, some unusual features in the line of music will be introduced. The address, "From Bar Room to Pulpit," by John Callahan, chaplain of the Tombs, New York, should bring out every man and boy over sixteen years of age in Plainfield and vicinity.

The doors will be open at 3 o'clock, and it is suggested that those desiring seats should come early and bring with them the Biederwolf song books.

WOMEN "TAGGERS" TO TAG FOR MUHLENBERG

All Are Enthusiastic Over the Plan to Raise $5,000 for the Hospital.

Now that "Rose Tag Day," for the benefit of the Women's Auxiliary Board of Muhlenberg Hospital, is only a little over a week away, it is a pleasure to be able to state that all plans are nearly completed for making that day a red letter day in the annals of Plainfield's charity giving days.

Every person, on all the numerous Tag Day Committees, has worked tirelessly and indefatigably towards making this first annual "Rose Tag Day" a wonderfully successful event. Each members of these committees has absolutely submerged their own interests in order to give the best in themselves to help the sick and suffering of this city.

Those people who are not directly connected with this Tag Day cannot possibly realize the thousand and one details that have to be seen to beforehand in order to make the machinery run smoothly on June 17. The bulk of the credit for making the machinery run smooth should be given to Mrs. F. D. Warren, the able president of the Women's Auxiliary Board, and no small measure of credit should go to the hundreds of women of Plainfield who have given and are going to give so much of their time and energy to help out the Women's Auxiliary.

A great big factor also in the "Rose Tag Day" campaign, remarked one of the committee, has been the magnificent support the local papers have given in publishing all articles, sent to them, in positions in the paper that would not fail to gain the attention of all their readers.

The women "taggers," of whom there will be between 400 and 500, have entered into the spirit of the occasion to the fullest degree. Without any hope of reward, it can be safely said, that these women would have evinced the same enthusiasm but now that the committee in charge are offering eight orchestra seats at any New York theatre the winning "taggers" may choose, to the three women who collect the most money during the day, the rivalry and enthusiasm is all the more keen and intense but always good natured, as all of them are working toward the same end, namely, to relieve as much pain, sickness and suffering in this city as possible.

These "taggers" will start very early in the morning on their rounds. Those at the railroad stations will cover every train that leaves or comes into Plainfield from 6:59 a. m. to 7:30 p. m. The city will be divided into districts and each district will be covered, as with a fine toothed comb, by a house-to-house canvass. To those people who contribute any money will be given a rose to pin on their dress or coat as a sign they have been "tagged."

When night finally falls on June 17 and the committees have all reported and counted up the receipts of the day, it is to be earnestly hoped that all Plainfield will have most generously responded and that the $5,000, that the Women's Auxiliary ask for and need to carry on their work, will have been secured.

VOTERS TO DISCUSS FREEHOLDER CHANGE

Meeting of Citizens to Be Held at Jefferson Democratic Club Saturday Night.

Those who are interested in the special election next Tuesday when the voters of Union county will express their opinion regarding the proposed change in the Board of Freeholders from the present body of twenty-one to one of seven, will meet at the rooms of the Jefferson Democratic Club Saturday night for a discussion of the subject.

County Clerk Abram B. Morris, of Elizabeth, will be among the speakers and he will tell of the alleged extravagance of the present Board of Freeholders and show why in his opinion a change would be desirable. There will be several other speakers who are well versed on the subject. It is hoped that there will be a large attendance.

Jurging from the present indications there is little or no interest in the matter at this end of the county and in view of the importance of the election it is urged that all voters acquaint themselves with the question to be voted upon and then be sure to cast a ballot either one way or the other so that a fair expression of opinion may be secured.

PLAY AGAIN POSTPONED.

Owing to the continued rain, the Hartridge School will postpone the performance of "Twelfth Night" until tomorrow afternoon. It will then be given on the lawn at "Oakwood" at 4:30 o'clock if the weather is good. In case of rain the play will be given in the school auditorium at the same hour. The alumnae meeting will be held at "Oakwood" at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon before the play. In case of rain the meeting will be held in the recitation hall at the school at 3 o'clock.

JERSEY STUDENTS RECEIVE DEGREES

Many Plainfielders Included Among This Year's Graduates From Colleges.

PRIZES ARE AWARDED

Local Young Men and Women Complete Educational Courses with High Honors—Smith College Has Largest Plainfield Representation.

New Jersey is well represented in the lists of those receiving degrees today from New York University and Columbia University. The former institution is conferring diplomas upon 743 men and women, the list including eight honorary degrees, 694 degrees in course and forty-one certificates. Columbia is giving degrees in course to 2,212 graduates, together with a number of honorary degrees. The N. Y. U. commencement exercises opened yesterday morning.

At the Columbia School of Medicine there have been thirty-eight students from New Jersey, of whom seven are graduates, including Thomas H. Leggett, of Plainfield. Included in the remaining members of the Columbia Medical School student body are the following Plainfielders: Lewis A. Bingman and Samuel Silbert. In the schools of mines, engineering and chemistry of Columbia the following local men won their degrees: Civil engineering, Cornelius F. Schenck; chemical engineer, Alan F. Randolph. Among the graduates of the school of commerce are J. Wilbur Tovell and Edson A. Woodhull, of this city.

In addition to the students at Columbia University and N. Y. U. there are many other Plainfield men at other colleges. A large number of these have yet to receive their diplomas. Among the thirty-three graduates at Yale, two are from Plainfield. These are Norman R. Finch and Charles Hyde.

At Dartmouth there have been forty-seven students from New Jersey, of whom six are candidates for degrees. Included in the latter is William A. R. Gould, of Plainfield. The other Plainfielders are Arthur D. Stout and Gibson W. Fairman, Jr.

Frederick R. Chamberlain and Edward B. Ryder are in the student body at Brown, and the Misses Anna C. Moore, Anna P. Swann, Janet Lane, Pauline Sandford, Augusta L. Burke, Bessie R. Jewett, and Margaret W. Miller are students at Vassar.

During the past year 120 young women from New Jersey have been enrolled at Smith College. Of this number thirty-five are candidates for degrees, the following five coming from Plainfield: Misses Louise Bird, Eleanor Hatch, Nora C. McDonough, Helen Louise Ryder and Helen C. Strong. Additional Plainfielders at the college include the Misses Margaret R. Bonnell, Mary G. Stanton, Mary McDonough, and Marjorie Cubberley.

David S. Roberts, Samuel B. Roberts and William A. Thomsen are among the Jerseyites at Stevens Institute of Technology, and Elmer H. French, Lawrence W. French and Pierre D. Van Mater are students at Rutgers College.

MRS. JAMES M'ELROY GIVEN A SURPRISE

Sewing Circle of St. Mary's Church Show Appreciation for President's Work.

In appreciation of her services as president of the sewing circle of St. Mary's church, Mrs. James McElroy was tendered a surprise yesterday afternoon by the members of the circle. The affair was held in the parish convent on Liberty street. During the afternoon a sterling silver rosary was presented Mrs. McElroy by the Rev. Father Hennessey, as a taken of esteem from the women of the circle. Following the presentation and response by Mrs. McElroy, Miss Sadie Lee, of Scotch Plains, sang "The Rosary" in a manner which delighted the gathering. Refreshments were served and a social hour concluded the session.

Mrs. McElroy is a member of one of the oldest Catholic families of this city and the first mass that was said in this section was celebrated in the Verdon barn, on upper Somerset street. Mrs. McElroy was formerly Miss Verdon, and her father was largely instrumental in getting the erection of the old St. Joseph's church in the borough. Mrs. McElroy has been president of the St. Mary Sewing Circle for a number of years.

MRS. ARTHUR RINEHART.

Mrs. Arthur Rinehart, of Lebanon, died in Muhlenberg Hospital this morning. She was twenty-two years old and had been at the institution under medical treatment only a few days.

AUSTRIAN LOSSES TOTAL 100,000

Russians Continue to Take Long Rows of Trenches in Advance.

GERMANS TAKE VAUX

French War Office Admits Loss of Important Verdun Fort — Berlin Now Tells of Sinking of Two More Cruisers in Jutland Battle.

Petrograd, June 8.—The Austrian positions captured by the Russian troops are composed of fourteen rows of barbed wire entanglements with walls of concrete and massive oak trunks. The Russian artillery did terrible execution. It is estimated that the Austrians have already lost 100,000 men in killed and wounded. The German line farther north is threatened by the retreat of the Austrians on the Styr river, and the enemy is fighting with great stubbornness.

Vaux Has Fallen.

Paris, June 8.—The capture by the Germans of Fort Vaux, a key position of the French, northeast of Verdun, was officially admitted by the French War Office today. The fort had been demolished by heavy shell fire before it was given up, the communique says.

Two German Cruisers Sunk.

London, June 8.—It is admitted by the German Admiralty that the German cruiser Lutzow and the cruiser Rostock sank from shell injuries received in the battle with the British fleet off Jutland, according to the following Central News despatch, dated Berlin, which was received today:

"For military reasons the loss of the battle cruiser Lutzow and the cruiser Rostock has not yet been made known to the public, although it is known in official circles that both sank while proceeding to their harbor for repairs."

Another One Reported Lost.

London, June 8.—The German battle cruiser Seydlitz sank off the coast of Denmark while being towed to her base by destroyers and torpedo boats, according to a despatch from Copenhagen to the Star today.

Beg Concessions of England.

Washington, June 8.—Despite reports from London that no further permits will be issued by the British government for the importation of German goods into the United States through Rotterdam, the State Department will send a man to London in an effort to gain further concessions along this line.

Russians Bombard Burgas.

London, June 8.—The Russian Black Sea fleet bombarded the Bulgarian port of Burgas on Saturday, destroying a German submarine, says a despatch from Bucharest today.

GIVE CHARMING "SHOWER" FOR TWO BRIDES-ELECT

A charming double shower was given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. M. B. Stutsman, in honor of her sisters-in-law, the Misses Elinore and Mabel Stutsman. The brides-elect received many handsome gifts. Miss Elinore Stutsman's marriage to Burton L. Casner, of Kensington avenue on June 20 will be a very quiet affair because of the recent death of Miss Stutsman's father, J. S. Pray. Miss Mabel Stutsman's marriage to Howard R. Palmer, of East Ninth street, will take place in the fall.

JOHN A. HORN DIES IN EIGHTY-EIGHTH YEAR

John A. Horn, aged eighty-seven years, died last night at 11 o'clock at his home, 26 Stone street, following an illness of several weeks resulting from a stroke. Mr. Horn came to this city from New York about thirty years ago and for a long time he had lived a retired life. Previous to moving to Stone street, his home was on Craig place. Despite his advanced age, his health had been fairly good until his last illness began.

Beside his wife, Mr. Horn is survived by several sons and daughters, all of the latter residing in New York. The funeral will be held at the late home Saturday afternoon, and burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

JUNIORS WILL ATTEND.

Benevolent Council No. 256 Jr. O. U. A. M., will attend in a body the flag presentation and parade of the Jr. O. U. A. M., in Westfield this evening, leaving Plainfield on the 7:30 o'clock trolley from the Watchung avenue station. The council will be accompanied by its fife and drum corps. A large delegation is expected.

There is still a possibility that Senator Root may become a compromise candidate. Republican delegates are far from a decision on the nominee and Root supporters continue to keep his name to the front.

MAYOR OPPOSED TO FREEHOLDER BILL

Calkins Sees Defects in Act to Be Voted on June 13.

Mayor Calkins is opposed to the small Board of Freeholder act of 1912 on which voters of the county must pass in the special election of June 13. In a signed statement given out this morning the Mayor said that while he favored small working committees as opposed to large, unwieldly boards, he was not satisfied that the proposed changed would be beneficial. His statement follows:

"While I favor, generally speaking, the principle of small working committees as opposed to largely unwieldy boards, yet I have not been able to satisfy myself that the small Board of Freeholder act of 1912, in its present form, would be an improvement over the existing law, or should be adopted until certain defects are eliminated. I am opposed to changes in form of government or organization, except on the clearest kind of a showing that the changes will be beneficial."

FESTIVAL PROGRAM GREATLY ENJOYED

Seventh-Day Baptist Church Event Featured by Musical Numbers.

Owing to the inclement weather which prevailed last night the attendance at the annual strawberry festival and musical of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church Woman's Society for Christian Work was smaller than usual but nevertheless fully successful and greatly enjoyed. The program was fully appreciated, especially the work of Miss Lillian Lamson and Miss Irma Good, who contributed delightful literary and musical numbers.

The program in full was as follows: Solo, "Who Knows," by Charles P. Titsworth; duet, waltzes by Mrs. Theodore G. Davis and Miss Mabel A. Maxson; songs, "The Nightingale," and "Down in the Forest," by Miss Irma Good; reading, "Peg o' My Heart," by Miss Lamson; solo, "The Gypsy Trail," by Charles P. Titsworth.

The program committee was headed by Miss Mabel A. Maxson and Mrs. Marcus L. Clawson was in charge of the refreshment committee.

ORDER RESTORED IN CITY OF CHIHUAHUA

Carranza Troops Put Down Anti-American Rioting There.

El Paso, Tex., June 8.—A telegram to Juarez says that order has been restored in Chihuahua City by Carranzista troops after the violent anti-American outbreak last night. Gen. Jaciato Trevinto is in command there. Much property was destroyed and the Foreign Club was stoned by a mob which took it for an American establishment.

U. S. Not to Arbitrate.

Washington, June 8.—Secretary of State Lansing today declared he had heard nothing of the reports that the American Government would propose arbitration of its difficulty with Mexico to General Carranza. He indicated that the reports had no foundation in fact.

BAR ASSOCIATION IN YEARLY SESSION

Plainfield Lawyers Elect Officers and Transact Important Business Matters.

At the annual meeting of the Plainfield Bar Association held in the District Court Chambers, at 149 North avenue, yesterday afternoon, these officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, William A. Coddington; vice-president, Walter L. Hetfield, Sr.; secretary, Vincent W. Nash, Jr., treasurer, Asa F. Randolph; trustees, William M. Stillman, George W. V. Moy and Francis J Blatz.

It was decided to have a dinner during the next few months in the form of either a shore dinner or a banquet at one of the local hotels President Coddington appointed the following committee to take charge. Harry C. Runyon, Vincent W. Nash, Jr., and Martin B. Stutsman.

A permanent library committee was appointed consisting of Martin B. Stutsman, Harry C. Runyon and Winfield S. Angleman. This committee will shortly interview the Public Library law committee with a view towards keeping the library opened later at night or transferring the law library to the City Hall when completed, so that the same can be of benefit to the lawyers.

The committee will also interview the Common Council with a view toward securing the law and equity reports, digests and statutes for the use of the local District Court, Plainfield having the only District Court in the State wherein the municipal government has failed to provide a working library for the use of the court and Common Council. The committee will also take up the question of the upkeep of the law library at the Public Library. President Coddington appointed Winfield S. Angleman, George W. V. Moy and Samuel S. Republican Platform Declares for Universal Equal Suffrage.

MOOSE FIX PLATFORM

Declare for Suffrage and Other Reforms—Hughes Men Claim 430 Votes on the Second Ballot—Fight on for Progessive Chairman.

Chicago, June 8.—The question of a man has practically narrowed down to Hughes. All that stands between a combination of the Republicans and Progressives now is the selection of a platform.

Col. Roosevelt has announced that he will not go to Chicago. In response to an invitation from Sen. Jackson, of Maryland, his secretary gave out a statement in Oyster Bay this morning in which the Colonel's determination to remain at his home was reiterated. This, in the belief of Republican leaders, is adequate proof that he is in the mood for compromise, because they admit that his presence would stampede the Progressive convention, eliminating all possibility of an agreement.

In order to get the support of Roosevelt and his Progressive delegates the platform will have to be almost identical with that of the 1912 Progressive convention, it is believed by the leaders, and they are prepared to accept this proposition. George B. Cortelyou has acted as peacemaker. It was his advice that started mediation between Old Guard leaders and Roosevelt and he has conveyed to G. O. P. heads the information, on good authority, that Col. Roosevelt, if he cannot be nominated himself, will support Hughes if the platform suits him. Roosevelt, however, has not lost all hope.

As a result of conferences last night between mediators the following committees have been agreed upon to meet on joint harmony. They will be named by the two conventions sometime today:

For the Republican—Senator Boies Penrose, of Pennsylvania; Senator H. C. Lodge, of Massachusetts; Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho; ex-Senator W. Murray Crane, of Massachusetts, and Samuel A. Perkins, delegate from Washington.

For the Progressives—George W. Perkins, of New York; Victor Murdock, of Kansas; William Hamlin Childs, of New York; William Allen White, of Kansas, and as the fifth man, either E. A. Van Valkenburg, of Philadelphia, or Walter Brown, of Ohio.

The platform committee was in session all night, and Senator Borah, of Idaho, who has Progressive leanings, is understood to have made suggestions, in a friendly way, which will meet with the approval of the Colonel if they are incorporated in the resolutions to be presented to the convention. The Colonel's ideas and those of the platform builders were not far apart this morning.

While the Hughes campaign managers are pleased to learn, even though the information does not come to them direct, that Col. Roosevelt will support Hughes under certain conditions, they are taking no chances. They are working harder today in the way of rounding up delegates than at any time since they came here and put the Hughes boom on its feet.

They claim at least 325 votes for Hughes on the first ballot and 430 on the second ballot. If their claims are good, of course there isn't likely to be a third ballot.

This is the condition prevailing in the great political movement in Chicago today. Meantime the air is full of rumors.

Senator Smoot, from the committee on credentials, was recognized and moved that the two delegates from Porto Rico, and the two from Hawaii, and the two from the Philippine Islands be given votes in the convention. This had been recommended by the National Committee and the convention concurred in the recommendation. Another wait was then precipitated as the committee on the rules still was waiting to frame rules for the convention.

The Progressive Platform.

The Progressive platform provides for full Woman Suffrage, a navy second only to England, and only a standing army of 250,000 men, universal training, but not service with the training paid for out of the Federal treasury, a reserve force that will be distinctively Federal and not National Guard, and a protective tariff. The platform couples the issues with the man who is to lead and says that the Moose will support any man who measures up to the platform. A sub-committee of the resolutions committee is now in session to make final revision of the draft.

Fight Over a Chairman.

A fight has developed in the permanent organization committee of the Progressive party over the naming of a permanent chairman. It is conceded by a majority of the members of the committee that Raymond Robins, temporary chairman, will not be named. This action is not meant as a slap at Robins, it was stated, but more to recognize some other leading light in the party. The permanent organiza-

Scotch Plains and Fanwood

INTEREST KEEN IN BIG SCHOOL CONFAB

Joint Committees From Fanwood and Scotch Plains Will Meet Wednesday.

Within another week something will be done that will have a definite bearing on the local school question, because at the June meeting next Wednesday of the Board of Education two committees, six Fanwood people and six Scotch Plains people, will meet with the members of the Board for a thorough discussion of the problem.

Up to the present time two meetings have been held by Fanwood residents to see what could be done about securing the erection of a school in Fanwood. However, meetings could be held every night in the week, but would have no direct result, as before a general election of the voters of the district can be called the Board of Education has got to have definite plans made out for whatever they have got to do. If the Board is going to ask the voters for an appropriation for the building of a new school or an addition, they have first got to have the plans drawn and approved by the State inspector before the election can be called. Since this is necessary, the discussion at the coming joint meeting should allow the Board to decide whether or not they will submit plans for a new school besides those for the addition.

Town Topics

In the death of Thomas Morton this community has lost one of its most valuable and respected citizens. Living in Fanwood, Mr. Norton naturally took a great interest in the affairs of the borough, but he also was prominent in the township. His advice as president of the Borough Council for two terms, and his ability in handling the committee of audit and finance during the same length of time, were more than could be desired, and in the short time he had been on the Township Board of Education he had made an excellent record. In his sudden demise, Mr. Norton leaves a gaping place in the ranks of local men that will be difficult to fill.

After reports of unusual building activities that were to take place in the township and borough the present season, things seem to have slipped back into their old position, and but little is being done in the construction line. A number of the borough people lay the inactivity in Fanwood to the lack of a school in that place, and it seems as if the realty men could back them up in the statement. They admit that they have lost a number of possible transactions because the prospective buyers felt the need of a school. Nevertheless, local people should act as boosters if they expect new people to locate here, and instead of knocking whenever the occasion offered, might a great deal better try to help matters along.

Those people in both the borough and township who are interested in the present school question are now beginning to realize the necessity of avoiding any "personal feeling" if the objects desired are to be gained. Although some are inclined to believe that none of the so-called "feeling" exists, the majority realize that it does, and for the first time seem in favor of trying to end it. Every person that spoke at the borough school meeting last Friday made a plea to stop it, and when the rest come to see the better results that can be obtained by the two places working in unison a really noticeable change will come in the conditions between the two places.

LAST SAD RITES FOR THOMAS H. NORTON

Rev. J. Madison Hare Eulogized Late Resident of Fanwood.

Funeral services for Thomas H. Norton, who died suddenly Monday morning, were held yesterday afternoon at his late home on Martine avenue, Fanwood, the Rev. J. Madison Hare, pastor of the Baptist church, officiating. Over a hundred relatives and friends attended, and there were many floral pieces. The bearers were Harry P. Robinson, R. H. Pelz, Burton P. Hall, Charles F. Norton, and interment was held privately this morning at Cypress Hills, Brooklyn.

In conducting the funeral service, the Rev. J. Madson Hare not only paid a tribute to the character of the man, but vividly told of the good he had done in the community and how great would be the loss.

Mr. Norton was a member of the firm of Chase & Norton, wholesale paper dealers, with offices on Water street, N. Y., and besides being prominent in business circles in that city, was a trustee in the Baptist church. He served for two terms as a member and as president of the Borough Council, and was recently elected a member of the Board of Education. He was a veteran of the Twenty-third Regiment of Brooklyn, of which his brother, Frank H. Norton, is the present colonel.

Besides his wife, Mr. Norton is survived by his daughter, Miss Christine Norton, and two brothers, Chas. F. Norton and Frank H. Norton.

PARTY GIVEN IN HONOR OF MISS PEGGIE HOUSTON

Miss Peggie Houston, of Elizabeth, was tendered a party last night by sixty of her friends at the home of Miss Ethel Gilbert, of Westfield avenue, to celebrate her return from boarding school. Miss Houston spends the summers with her parents at their cottage on Mountain avenue, and has many friends in this vicinity.

Music, dancing and games were enjoyed throughout a pleasant evening, and later refreshments were served. Guests were present from Plainfield, Westfield and Elizabeth, as well as the township and borough.

LOCAL AUTOMOBILE CASE SETTLED OUT OF COURT

After being aired in the county court for several months, the case of Louis Sutterline, of Plainfield, but formerly a local resident, against Walter H. Tavernor, of Westfield, has been settled for $200. Mr. Tavernor's lawyer will probably now withdraw his appeal from the case tried before Borough Recorder Sheelen in April, when he was found guilty of breaking one of the Fanwood ordinances and fined $10. The suit was for $3,900.

The argument grew out of an accident that occurred on Martine avenue last March, when Tavernor drove an automobile into a horse and wagon driven by Sutterline. After the smashup the Westfield man tried to make a getaway, but Sutterline got his license number, and he was apprehended. Sutterline claimed he was permanently injured as a result of the accident.

RUTGERS NEILSON HONOR STUDENT AT UNIVERSITY

Rutgers Neilson, of Martine avenue, Plainfield High School 1913, received the degree B. C. S. this afternoon at the eighty-fourth annual commencement exercises of New York University, held in the College Auditorium at University Heights. He completed the four-year course in three years, with a high average. He is president of the "Scoop Club," the fraternity of the journalism students, and also a member of the following: The "Triad League," the N. Y. U. unit of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, the "Fifty-Fifty" Club, and "Local-Color" Club. He was one of the founders of the "Washington Square Dealer," the college weekly paper and served on its editorial staff.

"Commencement Week" functions of Rutgers and his classmates include the following: Baccalaurette service on Sunday afternoon, shore dinner at Feltman's, Coney Island, and festive celebration on Monday evening; class day exercises and 1916 dance on Tuesday evening; theatre party, "Katinka," at the Lyric Theatre and cabaret supper at Wallick's on Wednesday evening; commencement exercises this afternoon and the annual senior-alumni dinner at the Hotel Breslin this evening.

WOMEN COLONISTS SCORN IMMODEST DRESS; WEAR TROUSERS AND SANDALS

Tales of the "single-tax" about four miles from here toward New Providence have been going the rounds for several days, and are creating quite some interest, especially as no one knows at what time some of the women campers are going to drop in town dressed in pants and a soft shirt. The men of New Providence have become so afraid of the women in their attire that they have passed resolutions asking them to wear skirts, but the only answer is "Bosh," and now Berkeley Heights is rubbing its eyes after a visit, while this place expects to have them next.

Dressed in belted knickerbockers and a soft shirt, barefooted and unblushing, one of the feminine colonists said recently: "We wear these costumes because they give us greater freedom in our work. They are not one-tenth as immodest as the suggestive costumes worn by the girls in New York. We are merely living close to nature and enjoying life."

The scandal started when a girl domestic from the colony wandered into Berkeley Heights wearing sandals, bloomers and blouse. The colony was founded by Bolton Hall, a New York lawyer. It embraces seventy-five acres and numbers among its residents business men, actors, collegians, writers and a physician.

The colonists say they are getting tired trying to make people believe they are neither "free thinkers" nor free lovers.

LAST HORSE DRAWN HACK DISAPPEARS

Fanwood Depot Now Has Complete Array of Taxis for Service.

Fanwood and Scotch Plains are rapidly getting rid of the horse and placing the automobile in noticeable step in that direction in many a day is the disappearence of the last horse-drawn hack from the local railroad station. After doing business at that stand for over fifteen years, Peter Ritter, Jr., has made the announcement that he will no more try to compete against the taxicabs, and so in the course of one short year the automobile is left in sole possession of the hack stand, where the horse but a few years ago reigned supreme.

Considering the size of the place, Fanwood station has more liverymen than any other town on the Central line, but the automobile never tried to invade the local livery business during the years since its invention until a year ago, but when it did it came in a hurry. Things were moving along in the same tenor as commuters had been used to for years, until one afternoon a newcomer made his appearance among the fellows lined up at train time calling for fares. His business grew with a rush while the old-timers stood and stared, and in a week another car was added to his outfit. A consultation of war was held by the old guard, and the next day one of them had a taxicab at the station. Then in rapid succession the others followed suit, in most cases importing a driver rather than risk the change from the horses themselves, until at last the only one left that had not gone back on the horse was Ritter.

Day after day he would stand by his horse's head and see fares go by, and the old black horse that had trod the dusty roads hereabouts for well over a decade grew restless at his inactivity. He has hung on as long as he can, but the odds have been too great, and so "Pete" is going to put his horse out to pasture and turn to something else for a livelihood.

GATHERED AT RANDOM

After playing in "Alone at Last," one of the winter musical comedy hits of New York, Miss Virginia Clover has accepted a contract to appear in "Very Good, Eddie," another musical comedy that opened at the Casino Theatre, New York, Monday. Until her entrance onto the stage about a year ago Miss Clover resided in the borough, and was one of the popular members of the younger set.

The monthly business meeting of the Epworth League of the Methodist church was held last night, when routine blusiness was transacted.

The younger set of the borough will conduct an ice cream and strawberry festival on the lawn of the residence of Mrs. Burton P. Hall, of North avenue, on the afternoon and evening of Friday, June 16, the proceeds to be for the benefit of the Fanwood Tennis Club.

The members of the World Wide Guild of the Baptist church are making arrangements for the holding of an ice cream and strawberry festival on the lawn of the church on the evening of June 13.

GRADUATES FROM VASSAR.

Tomorrow will mark the closing of the commencement festivities at Vassar College that have lasted through the present week. Included in one of the largest classes that has ever graduated from the college is Miss Dorothy Beeken, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred D. Beeken, of North avenue. Miss Beeken received her degree after establishing an honor record in a four years' course. She prepared for college at the Seminary, Plainfield, and is the only local girl to graduate from college this year.

RECREATION NOTES.

The Washington School will not be open this evening, and the Boys' Club, which usually meets in the school on Thursday nights, will meet hereafter Friday nights, commencing tomorrow night. The Dunbar dance will be held tomorrow night.

HEATED DISCUSSION AT COUNCIL SESSION

Sewer Question Brought up at Fanwood Meeting Last Night.

With the probability in mind that the State Board of Education will take action at any time on the complaints of several residents, the Borough Common Council held a heated discussion at its June meeting last night about the overflow problem in Fanwood.

As the borough has no sewer system, it is up to each property owner to provide his own overflow. In many cases the residents use the gutters along the streets, and it has now come to that point where those residents who provide their own overflow, but get the benefit of existing conditions, have applied to the State for relief.

The problem seems to be too large in its scope for the local Board of Health to successfully handle, and in an effort to try and remedy matters until the coming of a sewer system will entirely eliminate the trouble, the Council is to take the affair in hand. The chairman of the police committee is to obtain the names of those residents who contribute to the nuisance, and at the next meeting steps will be taken to make them conform with the sanitary code.

The condition of the local sidewalks also came in for considerable discussion as a meeting of the street committee has been called for next week to discuss means of making delinquent sidewalk owners repair them. It is probable that notices will be sent to those property owners whose sidewalks need repairing, and if after thirty days nothing is done the borough will step in. After the urgent need of better lighting facilities in front of the Borough Hall had been discussed, it was agreed that the police committee should make a thorough investigation and report at the next meeting.

Bills were audited and paid aggregating $617.90.

WILLIAM A. LEONARD ANNOUNCES CANDIDACY

Will Seek the Democratic Nomination for County Clerk This Fall.

Former Assemblyman William A. Leonard, of Elizabeth, today announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for county clerk. He makes the following statement:

"To me this seems an opportune time to say to the Democrats of this county that I shall be a candidate for the nomination for county clerk in the coming primary election. I was nominated by my party for this office in 1914, when the office was last vacant, over four other candidates, and when my successful opponent at the general election, the late Mr. Calvert, died several months ago, the majority of the rank and file of my party felt as I did then and still do, Governor Fielder should have appointed me to fill the vacancy caused by Mr. Calvert's death.

"My present candidacy will give to the Democratic voters of this county the opportunity to again express their choice for this office, and I feel certain from a thorough canvass of the county, as well as from assurances freely and voluntarily communicated to me during the past few months, I shall again be honored with my party's nomination. Recent developments justify the criticism of the conduct of this office voiced by me in the 1914 campaign for county clerk. I shall have more to say on this subject during the campaign.

"For the several endorsements which I have received from my party in the past I am duly grateful, and whatever the result of the coming primaries, its choice of candidates will receive my full and ungrudging support."

PASSES EXAMINATION.

Alfred M. Korff, of Watchung avenue, the borough, who recently underwent a three days' examination under the New Jersey State Board of Architects at Trenton, has been notified that he has passed the same and is licensed as an architect.

FIRST BAPTISTS RAISE $28,000

Encouraging Reports Are Presented at the Annual Parish Meeting.

NEW OFFICERS ELECTED

Howard Runyon Elected Trustee to Succeed late W. A. Conner—Mrs. Charles Conover and Mrs. W. W. F. Randolph Chosen as Deaconesses.

Presentation of excellent reports, the election of deacons, deaconesses and trustees, together with the installation of church and Sunday-school officers were among the features of the annual parish meeting of the First Baptist church last night. Despite the disagreeable weather there was a large attendance of members. J. Herbert Case presided during the forepart of the meeting when financial matters were discussed.

John G. MacLaughlin, treasurer, presented his report which showed with the other financial reports that during the past year about $28,000 was raised for church and other purposes. It was reported that through the envelope system, there was received about $8,000. The report of F. W. Jones for the deacons' fund showed that there is a trust fund of $2,600 and an emergency fund of $900 and amount $850 was expended during the year.

John G. MacLaughlin and Thomas S. Armstrong were re-elected trustees and Howard Runyon was elected trustee to succeed the late William A. Conner. These four deacons were re-elected for the full term of five years: Ruben Knox, Samuel P. Case, Arthur M. Harris and James L. Manning. The board of deaconesses was increased by two, Mrs. Charles Conover and Mrs. Wilbur W. F. Randolph being chosen. The church house committee was also increased by two, Mrs. Daniel R. Douglas and Mrs. Wilbur W. F. Randolph being added. Mrs. George F. Brown's resignation as deaconess was accepted.

Following the election of officers, they were publicly installed, Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, the pastor, making an installation prayer, while Deacon E. L. Bonny made a few remarks on behalf of the board of deacons and Arthur M. Harris, as superintendent of the Bible school, made a short address on behalf of the school.

After the business meeting the pastor and deacons remained to confer with a large number of applicants for church membership as the result of the Biederwolf campaign. The names of eleven new members were read by the pastor and accepted by vote of the church.

IT'S A BOY.

DUNELLEN

All the Happenings of the Day in Plainfield's Hustling Suburb.

Mrs. Charles Bishop and son, of Brooklyn, are spending a week in the borough the guests of Mrs. Bishop's mother, Mrs. G. Elston Lowrie.

Mrs. Charles Fritz, of Penfield, place, is entertaining her sister, Mrs. G. A. Wiedenmayer, of Newark.

Borough Engineer and Mrs. L. T. Churchill were visitors in New York city yesterday.

Walter S. Craig has been detained at his home this week by a severe cold.

Richard Van Ness is entertaining his wife from Jersey City. As soon as Mr. Van Ness' daughter has graduated from a Jersey City school, which will be the latter part of this month, the family will move here.

BOWLING MATCH TONIGHT.

The date of the bowling match between Plainfield and local women has been changed from tomorrow to tonight. The match will take place on the Presbyterian alleys. A large crowd it anticipated.

TICKETS FOR GAME.

Tickets are being sold in advance for the City League baseball game between the First Baptist and the local on Maurer Oval, Washington avenue and Third street, at 3:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

Fowler Vail entertained his sister from Hampton Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Le Roy Jennings is ill at her home.

Mrs. William H. Clum has returned from Trenton, where she visited her daughter, Mrs. Robert Todd, for several days.

Mrs. Charles Mattis substituted for one of the teachers of the New Market School yesterday.

Le Roy Smith, of Front street, visited John Barnes, a former resident of the borough, in New York last evening.

The heavy rain of yesterday prevented the meeting of the M. E. Ladies' Aid Society at Mrs. M. E. Harris' yesterday afternoon.

Daniel Moody, one of the borough's prominent painters, is contemplating purchasing an automobile.

MRS. RATTI IMPROVING.

Mrs. Paul Ratti has been getting along nicely since her return from the Somerset Hospital, where she submitted to a serious operation and is now able to be up and about her home.

ARTHUR VAIL'S CONDITION.

Arthur Vail, who sustained a broken ankle in an eight-foot fall at Spring street, Elizabeth, Tuesday afternoon, is resting comfortably in the Elizabeth General Hospital.

The Public Service Railway Company is going to relay its southerly track through the borough this summer, and Street Commissioner Paul Reusch is of the opinion that the Council should take action at once towards having the work of improving North avenue done at the same time, instead of waiting for a year or so as is believed to be the present intention of the ruling body. He thinks that a grave mistake will have been committed if this is not done.

Westfield.

The Council has decided that in view of the amount of money that will be spent this year for the park improvement, it would not be wise to ask taxpayers to stand any expense in connection with the railroad improvement at Broad street and Westfield avenue. Therefore, it will ask the railroad that the improvements be deferred for a year.

The sum of $500 has been raised by subscription in the interest of open-air concerts this summer.

Miss Annette Gladwin and John E. Gaefell, of New York city, will be married Saturday at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Gladwin. Rev. J. A. Smith, of St. Paul's Episcopal church, will officiate. Only intimate relatives and friends will be present at the ceremony.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

SCULLY FOR SENATOR.

While the report from Middlesex that Representative Scully will enter the Senatorial contest lacks confirmation, few will be surprised if it shall prove true. In which event Senator Martine's gracious act of renunciation in retiring from the race for delegate-at-large to the Democratic National Convention will have been made in vain.

It is more than probable, however, that had Senator Martine remained the sole candidate for the Senatorial nomination Mr. Scully would have been content to continue in the lower House. The entrance of Attorney General Wescott as a competitor changed the situation materially, so far as Mr. Scully is concerned. For very good reasons the latter might hope for success in a three-cornered fight, while holding the adverse odds too formidable to face in a contest confined to himself and another. These reasons are well understood in political circles, and have been freely discussed among party politicians.

Viewing the situation from an unbiased standpoint it must be admitted that in a triangular contest Mr. Scully would have more than a possible chance. The one danger is that it might introduce an element of discord that would react disastrously on Election Day.—Newark Evening News.

Recommend Suffrage Plank.

By a vote of 26 to 21 the resolutions committee voted to include the votes for women plank in the convention platform. Senator Smoot, in making his speech, was in a reminiscent mood but came out of the past long enough to attack sharply the Democratic foreign policy. He congratulated the country on thus far having kept clear of the European war.

Will This Suit Roosevelt?

Senator Warren G. Harding, temporary chairman, was made permanent chairman. The other temporary officers were also elected as permanent officers of the convention. After an all night session the sub-committee on resolutions drove the last nail in the final plank of the platform. Preparedness and Americanism naturally are the chief subjects subscribed to. The domestic and business reforms deemed necessary for the benefit of American commerce are covered fully and recommendations are made for changes in existing law to permit combinations of American business in striving for the foreign trade. The tariff is taken up at length. The party reaffirms its belief in protective tariff calculated to protect American industries from the competition that is sure to follow the war. The committee also recommended that the platform be adopted before nominations can be made. It also recommended that the roll call be not dispensed with at any time when nominations are made. The committee also recommended that unless error was apparent the vote of a State must remain as recorded until another ballot is taken. It perfected a plan to have Michigan vote for Henry Ford on the first ballot and then swing to Hughes before announcement was made. The rules also provided for the seating of all national committeemen elected under primary laws. The committee was given power to unseat any national committeeman who refused to support the party nominee and to fill the vacancy thus created. After completing the reading of the report Chairman Harding moved that it be adopted.

The chair called upon Senator Depew, of New York, for a speech, after he concluded Uncle Joe Cannon made a few remarks.

Burton Boom Collapses.

Chicago, June 8.—Leaders of the boom for Senator Burton, of Ohio, practically admitted defeat today and declared they would turn their efforts to landing ex-Governor Herrick in second place on the Republican ticket.

FEDERATION OF LABOR WILL MEET IN ORANGE

The New Jersey State Federation of Labor, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, will hold the thirty-eighth annual labor congress in Central School auditorium, Orange, beginning Monday, August 21 and concluding Wednesday, August 23. The headquarters of the executive board will be at the Cowan Association room, 342 Main street, near Canfield street, Orange. Mr. Auten has been engaged in the hotel business for many years and is thoroughly experienced in all its branches.

SWEAR MRS. PARKER WAS OF GOOD SOUND MIND

After hearing the defense in the caveat against the will of the late Mary Van Order Parker, Judge Daly, in the Orphans' Court of New Brunswick, yesterday afternoon passed the case until June 20, when a decision will be rendered. In this case a grandson is seeking to set aside the will on the grounds of insanity. Included among the many witnesses who testified that Mrs. Parker was perfectly sane was Mrs. Amy Fraser, of Oak Tree; Mrs. Eva Conover, of New York, and Charley Henry, of Plainfield.

HEALTH BOARD REPORTS SANITARY CONDITION GOOD

Reports received at the monthly meeting of the Plainfield Board of Health last night showed the sanitary condition of the city to be good. There were nineteen cases of communicable disease reported as follows: Tuberculosis, 6; scarlet fever, 2; measles, 6; whooping cough, 2; German measles, 2. Two cases of tuberculosis, one of scarlet fever and one of measles were found among people living out of the city. There were 24 rooms disinfected in fifteen buildings and 21 cultures were examined of which only two were positive. These inspections were made:

Milk supply, 142; food supply, 164; nuisances, 206; communicable diseases, 15; disinfections, 20; general work, 1,198; plumbing, 159. There were 116 returns in all received during the month as follows: Births, 69; still-births, 1; marriages, 19; deaths, 27.

SOCIETY WEDDING AT ST LOUIS.

St. Louis, June 8.—One of the most prominent of the early June weddings is that of Miss Elizabeth Overton, daughter of Mrs. Charles Pope O'Fallon, and Lewis D. Dozier, which takes place today at "Athlone," the summer home of the O'Fallons, twenty miles out of the city. Miss Matilda Overton, a sister of the bride, will be maid of honor. A large party of relatives and friends have come from Memphis, the home of the bride's grandparents. The bride is a daughter of the late John Overton, 3d, of Memphis. She has been one of the most popular society girls in this city for several seasons.

PLAINFIELDERS URGED TO ATTEND BAZAAR

Local Women Will Have Charge of Booths at Grand Central Palace, June 12.

Plainfield people who have planned to attend the Allied Bazaar, now in progress at the Grand Central Palace, New York, are requested by the local Belgian Relief Committee to be certain of attending on Monday, June 12. That date has been designated as "Plainfield Day" at the New Jersey booth and delegations from societies in this city will have full charge of the booth on that occasion. These attendants will be from the Mercy Committee, the Prince of Wales Relief, the King's Daughters and the Belgian Relief.

The New Jersey booth is one of the largest and most attractive at the bazaar and is located on the second floor directly next the elevator. Those patronizing it will find a great assortment of articles to select from, the list including 300 garden hats, 300 porch pillows, beautiful tapestries, which will be disposed of below cost, a painting from the brush of Jonas Lie, the former Plainfield artist; a bicycle, a talking machine and one hundred records, a diamond and sapphire bracelet, a beautiful hall tapestry, a silver mesh bag, a silver lorgnette, three hundred pounds of delicious macaroni in pound packages, a large quantity of creamery butter and also a pedigreed pig, the last named having been contributed by a Plainfielder.

All the articles mentioned will be disposed of on the share plan and those wishing to purchase shares in advance or seeking information regarding Plainfield Day are requested to call 'phone 1611. The Plainfield Belgian Relief Committee has taken a very active part in the bazaar up to the present time and it remains for the local people to provide the patronage on "Plainfield Day" to make the organization's efforts a complete success.

ELECTION BOARD OFFICERS HAVE MISUNDERSTANDING

Because of a misunderstanding among some of the officers of the local election boards different methods were employed in revising the registries in this city on Tuesday and despite an appeal to the county clerk for an opinion, the matter apparently has not yet been cleared up to the satisfaction of these officers.

Three sets of books were supplied to each board, one of which is to be used on election day. Another book was intended for registry purposes, each voter being required to sign his name therein. Where the mixup came in was in the transfer of the names from the registry book to the third book which provides for proper ward classification.

It was contended by some officers that they did not have the right to transfer at this time new names added to the registry book, but others thought differently and made the transfer. The matter will undoubtedly be put up to the proper authority for a final decision.

BUSINESS MEN TURN ACTORS.

Detroit, Mich., June 8.—The thirteenth annual Board of Commerce cruise to Grand Island and return is under way, the host of business men embarking this morning on the City of Detroit. One of the features of the cruise will be the production of a modern allegory written by a member of the Board. A cast of amateur actors from the business men of the city will present the skit, which depicts the difficulties of a Detroit business man in getting home from work. Movies aboard ship will be a feature each evening. The cruise will end on Tuesday.

SCHOOL CHILDREN SING.

Pittsburg, Pa., June 8.—Massed upon a great outdoor stage in Forbes Field, where Richard Wagner's "Siegfried" will be produced by a Metropolitan Opera cast, a thousand public school children of Pittsburg will sing with the operatic stars on Saturday afternoon. Mme. Joanna Gadski, Mme. Lila Robeson and Clarence Whitehill will sing with the children in the festival concert, and the famous Metropolitan House Orchestra will play for the school choruses.

HORSEMEN AT HAMLINE MEET.

Minneapolis, Minn., June 8.—Horsemen from all sections of Minnesota and from nearby States have gathered at the State Fair grounds at Hamline, where the three day race meet of the Twin City Driving Club opens this afternoon. Five races a day are on the program, and there are two hundred horses stabled at the track.

A SUGGESTION.

I wish I could find a cheap substitute for gasoline.

Have you tried car tickets?

MORE IMPORTANT.

Has your son picked out a career for himself yet?

Heavens, no! It takes all that boy's time picking out socks and neckties.

Above is shown the emblem of the Business Men's Association of Plainfield. About seventy merchants of this city are members of the organization, and most of them display this emblem in a conspicuous position on their windows. It stands, however, for more than mere membership in a commercial body. It stands for business honesty, and it is displayed by the merchants in this city who believe that honesty and fair dealing is worth more to them than any temporary advantage which may be gained by taking short cuts which others think brand them as "shrewd." The emblem will never be found on the window of a "fly-by-night" store that comes here for a few weeks or months to take advantage of holiday trade. The store in front of which this emblem is displayed is not here for a few days. It has probably been under the same management for years, and will continue under that management. It is a guarantee that if you have purchased anything in the store which displays it, and you are dissatisfied, you can go back at any time and have any reasonable complaint properly and courteously attended to.

There are many reasons which can be presented in favor of trading in Plainfield. The emblem shown above is the best one of all. The stores which display it are the ones where purchasers are assured of honest values, for every member knows that he will be taken to task by the others if he tries any shady merchandising methods. Perhaps you will say "that sounds all well enough in an advertisement, but they do not practice what they preach." If any reader of this has any doubt that the members of this organization are not jealous of the emblem, it can quickly be dispelled by attending any regular meeting. The frankness with which the business men discuss each other's faults will no doubt be surprising, but it is just that frankness which is making the business men of Plainfield, allied with this organization, strive to be fair to the public in every way. The meetings are held the 1st Monday of every month in Coward's Hall, on Park avenue, and visitors are always welcome. Our members are given a chance to get acquainted with many of the people of the city, and the kicker is made more welcome than the fellow who is easily satisfied, and comes out of mere curiosity. We know that we can all benefit from what the kicker says, for nine times out of ten his kick is a just one.

"But who are the members of the Business Men's Association?" perhaps you will ask. That is a fair question, for it is only for the members of this organization that these advertisements speak. In the next talk the names of every firm will appear.

PLAN TO ARBITRATE MEXICAN TROUBLES

Wilson to Resort to Old Treaty to Settle Row.

Washington, June 8.—A proposal to General Carranza that the United States and the Mexican de facto government submit the whole subject of their relations to an international commission is being considered by the administration today.

Such a proposal, if it be made, will serve as a reply to the Mexican note demanding withdrawal of the American troops and may contemplate adjustment of many unsettled differences that for years have caused accumulating embarrassment in the relations of the two nations.

Settlement by a commission is provided for expressly by the treaty of 1848, which provides further that, "should such a course be proposed by either party it shall be acceded to by the other unless deemed by it altogether incompatible with the nature of the difference or the circumstances of the case."

Coming down from bygone years are unsettled questions as to portions of the international boundary. Out of the Vera Cruz incident arose new problems which must be cleared up, including disposition of the customs revenues collected by General Funston, amounting to more than $1,000,000 and now deposited in this country.

KAISER PRAISED K. OF K.

Telegram Followed Close on Own Sovereign's Order of Bath.

New York, June 8.—"When the beloved Kitchener was created Baron Kitchener of Khartoum and the Grand Cross of the Order of the Bath was bestowed upon him, I remember distinctly the first telegram of congratulation he received.

"It was from Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany, the man I believe responsible for Kitchener's death."

Pearson J. Kenyon, who served under Kitchener at Khartoum, made this statement shortly after his arrival in New York from London. When Mr. Pearson was first informed of his old chief's death he broke down and wept.

TRY SKEFFINGTON CASE.

Physicians Testify Executioner Was Mentally Unsound.

Dublin, June 8.—A plea of unsound mentality was offered at this session of the court martial of Captain Bowen-Colthurst, who is accused of manslaughter for having caused the execution during the recent rebellion of F. Sheehy Skeffington, editor of the Irish Citizen. Thomas Dickson and Fred McIntyre, physicians, who had examined the defendant, testified he was mentally unstable.

WILSON GETTING THE NEWS

Wire From Chicago Looped Into White House.

Washington, June 8.—President Wilson is following the news reports of the Chicago convention. The Washington end of the wire has been looped into the White House executive offices, thereby giving the president opportunity of getting "hot off the wire" the news of the day. The president will be on the Washington end of the wire throughout the Democratic as well as the Republican convention.

RUSSIANS GAIN AS FRENCH LOSE

Czar's Army Captures 40,000 Austrians, Says Petrograd.

GERMANS OCCUPY VAUX.

Lines Now Within Few Miles of Verdun and Teutons Expect City to Fall Shortly—Still More Fortifications to Be Captured Before Way Is Opened, However.

Petrograd, June 8.—In their new offensive movement the Russians have captured more than 40,000 men, it was announced officially here. The statement says:

"The successes of our troops in Volhynia, Galicia and Bukowina are developing. The total number of prisoners and trophies captured in the fighting, which resulted in the enemy being dislodged from his powerfully fortified positions, continues to increase.

"Since the beginning of the recent actions General Brussiloff's armies have captured 900 officers, more than 40,000 rank and file, 77 guns, 134 machine guns and 49 trench mortars, and, in addition, searchlights, telephones, field kitchens, a large quantity of arms and war material and great reserves of ammunition. A number of batteries were captured intact by our infantry with all their guns and limbers.

"In the recent fighting the enemy had actual proof of the increase in our war material. The actions have strengthened our confidence that as this material develops the enemy's fortified lines will be more effectively destroyed.

"The valor and dash of our troops were proved by the results achieved in only three days' fighting.

"Prudence does not permit us at present to divulge the names of the valiant battalions, which fought some time with the loss of all their officers. It is equally impossible to publish the names of the brave general officers killed or wounded or the localities where the combats occurred."

More Forts Bar Germans.

Paris, June 8.—The occupation of Fort de Vaux by the Germans gives the latter possession of the advanced line of fortifications of a permanent character on the right bank of the Meuse, save for the intrenchments and batteries still held by the French at Cote de Froide, between the Fort de Vaux and the river. Fort de Vaux is five and a quarter miles northeast of the town of Verdun.

The advanced permanent fortifications on the right bank of the Meuse consisted of Forts de Douaumont and De Vaux, whose approaches were protected until the middle of April by the lateral fire from the west on Talou hill and Pepper hill, respectively the Cote de Talou and Cote du Poivre whose approaches in turn were protected by Hills 295 (Le Mort Homme), 265 and 304 on the opposite side of the river. Now, on the right bank in this first permanent line only the Cote de Froide remains, while it is a question whether its approaches continue to receive protection from the parts of Hill 295 and Hill 304, which are still held by the French on the left or western side.

The Douaumont fort at the supreme altitude of 388 meters, after changing hands twice, was left in possession of the Germans on Feb. 27, six days after the general offensive began. On March 2 the Germans captured Vaux village, lying between Forts de Douaumont and De Vaux and erroneously reported that they had captured the fort.

WILSON PREPARES PARTY'S PLATFORM

America First to Be Keynote at St. Louis Convention.

Washington, June 8.—President Wilson has been at work for several weeks upon the Democratic platform. Today he has practically completed a preliminary draft of the party utterance, and it is believed that the platform committee of the St. Louis convention next week will be asked to adopt the planks on international affairs and business legislation substantially as he has framed them.

The president has consulted frequently with members of his cabinet and congress leaders upon the platform. The last cabinet meeting was practically given up to a discussion of the plank dealing with foreign affairs. The president already had gone over the subject with Senator Stone of Missouri, chairman of the senate committee on foreign relations, who is expected to head the committee on resolutions at St. Louis.

The foreign affairs plank which has been prepared by the president is understood to employ the phrase "America first" and to commend the Wilson administration's conduct of the international affairs of the government on the ground that it has followed this principle.

ROOSEVELT READY FOR QUICK MOVE

Colonel May Yet Decide to Go to Chicago.

IS SILENT BUT HOPEFUL.

Will Not Withdraw, Compromise or Accept Justice Hughes—Still Playing Political Game For All That's In It—Worries Old Guard Leaders by Refusing to Indorse Any One.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., June 8.—With the fight at the Republican convention narrowed down to a contest between Colonel Roosevelt and Justice Charles E Hughes, there were many reports here that developments in Chicago might force the colonel to hurry to the convention city to take personal charge of his campaign. There was nothing definite to indicate that he would take such a step, yet the reports persisted and served to add to the tenseness of the situation.

Colonel Roosevelt is holding to the position that he will not go; that his lieutenants will be able to direct the fight better with what aid and advice he can give them over the telephone On the other hand, it was said, reports that reached here were that a sterner leadership was needed to keep the Progressives in line in connection with the campaign that had been mapped out. At any rate, it is understood that all arrangements have been made for a quick departure if conditions arise to warrant such a move.

T. R. Keeps Silent.

In reply to almost all the questions put to him concerning developments at the convention the colonel remained silent. When told that there was a report that he had held long conferences with Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania and Senator Borah of Idaho over his private telephone to Chicago the colonel simply smiled and made neither a direct denial nor any remark in confirmation.

It was evident that he wanted to remain silent on those points as well as on others connected with the convention and permit his leaders there full opportunity to conduct the campaign as they thought best and without verbal and public interruption from this end, until the time should come when a crisis made necessary a decisive step on his part.

In this connection he told a favorite story about a mate of a whaler who told his captain, "I want nothing but silence out of you and mighty little of that." After relating this tale the colonel smiled again and refused to discuss reports which, he ventured, might be counted by the hundreds before the convention decided upon its candidate.

Colonel Roosevelt by adopting this attitude does not discount the fact that the fight to make him the nominee of the Republican convention has reached a critical stage. He knows as well as his leaders in Chicago do that within two days the convention must act and that the developments within forty-eight or sixty hours may decide whether Mr. Hughes or he himself will be selected. He is simply taking heed of all the reports he receives from his leaders and adopting the course which these developments indicate to him is the wisest.

He is not adopting the attitude of a man who is prepared for a compromise. There is nothing to indicate that he is in sympathy with the movement to nominate Mr. Hughes or that he would passively accept Hughes. He refuses to comment upon the question of a third ticket if Hughes is nominated and at the same time is doing nothing to still the reports from Chicago that there is a real danger of a third ticket in such an event.

One thing is definitely established—Colonel Roosevelt is in fighting trim at present, at any rate has no time for thought or talk of withdrawal. He does not feel that today any candidate put forward by the old guard Republicans has measured up to the platform which he (Roosevelt) has placed before the country in his statements concerning this country's position in the face of the world's war both in writings and public speeches.

COLDEST CONVENTION.

Depew, Most Ancient Goer, Finds G. O. P. Gathering Chilly.

Chicago, June 8.—"This is the coldest convention—inside and outside—I've ever known," remarked ex-Senator Depew at the conclusion of Keynote Harding's speech as he sat shivering with the New York delegation. "There never was one quite like this."

"I must say, though, that it is certainly a fine tribute to Senator Harding that his admirable speech, so admirably constructed and so admirably delivered, served materially to make up a great deal for lack of a heating system."

ROOSEVELT AND PENROSE.

Colonel Denies Report of Telephone Conversation.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., June 8.—Colonel Roosevelt has denied through his secretary that he had held a telephone conversation with Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania. The story as published represented Roosevelt as making overtures to Penrose, but it is entirely unfounded.

CHARLES E. HUGHES.

BULL MOOSE INSIST ON NAMING ROOSEVELT

Second Day's Enthusiasm Equal to That of the First.

Chicago, June 8.—The opening session on the second day of the Progressive convention was fully exciting as the first, when cheers for Roosevelt could not be suppressed for one hour and thirty-three minutes. It now seems that the bull moose will refuse to accept any other candidate, and if the Republicans fail to nominate the former president he will run independently.

The Progressives are still shouting "We want Teddy."

At the opening this isn't all they said or did in the second longest splurge on record that exploded with the naming of the colonel by Temporary Chairman Raymond Robins.

They marched and stamped and sang and danced around the Goddess of Liberty; they romped through every antic known to the old prompt book of convention "demonstrations" and invented several lines for a new one. It was a wonderfully picturesque show and was essentially spontaneous.

And the gist of it all, the message flung from the Auditorium to the Republicans at the Coliseum by the fire tried band, which revived the "Onward, Christian Soldiers," fervor of 1912, was, "We want Teddy, Teddy." In fact, one of the banners most riotously approved proclaimed that the Progressives were going to nominate Roosevelt regardless.

The demonstration for Roosevelt by the 3,000 in the Auditorium broke the endurance record set by the Democratic convention at Denver in 1908, when the mention of Bryan's name by the temporary chairman was followed by a hullabaloo that lasted one hour and fifteen minutes. By keeping it up that long the Democrats beat the demonstration at the Republican 1908 convention, which lasted exactly forty-nine minutes, after Senator Lodge, the temporary chairman, mentioned the colonel's name and there began the organized attempt to stampede the convention for Roosevelt as against Taft.

23 WOMEN DELEGATES.

Democratic Convention at St. Louis Will Include Both Sexes.

St. Louis, June 8.—Twenty-three women will have seats as delegates or alternates in the Democratic convention, which will meet next Wednesday in the Coliseum. They will be only a sprinkling among the delegates, however, as there are to be 1,902 delegates and as many alternates seated on the arena floor.

Of the women fourteen are delegates and will cast their ballots in presidential and vice presidential nominations as well as in the approval of the Democratic platform. Nine are alternates.

Eight of the eleven states which have granted full suffrage to women are sending women to the convention. The lists of delegates from Oregon, Nevada and Montana, equal suffrage states, do not contain names of women delegates.

National Democratic Committeeman Edward F. Goltra returned to St. Louis from Chicago and said that a comparison of arrangements at the Coliseum here with the arrangements in Chicago convinces him that St. Louis is much better prepared to take charge of delegates and visitors.

FRENCH DESTROYER SUNK.

The Fantassin Goes Down After Collision.

Paris, June 8.—The French torpedo boat destroyer Fantassin sank on Monday as the result of a collision, it has been officially announced. Her crew was saved. A German torpedo boat has been sunk by a mine off Zeebrugge, according to the Telegraaf of Amsterdam.

The Fantassin displaced 446 tons and had a speed of 30.6 knots. She was built in 1909.

ORPET JURY IS COMPLETED.

Murder Trial Is Adjourned Owing to Illness of Attorney.

Waukegan, Ill., June 8.—Selection of a jury to try Will H. Orpet on the charge of murdering Marion Lambert, his sweetheart, has been completed. Just as David R. Joslyn of the prosecution began the opening statement to the jury the defense asked that court be adjourned owing to the sudden illness of James H. Wilkerson, senior counsel for the defense. Court was adjourned.

Sixteen venires, totaling 1,236 men, were called before a jury was obtained. The trial started on May 15.

Lincoln Held for Trial.

London, June 8.—Ignatius T. T. Lincoln, self styled "international spy," who was extradited by the United States government, was remanded in the Bow street police court for a week on a charge of forgery. It is charged that Lincoln uttered two checks aggregating $5,000. He gained much notoriety in New York by his escape from custody.

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, JUNE 8, 1916.

THE WORK OF JOHN LEAL.

Man lives only as he serves others. The most successful life of selfishness can only pile up "a few handfuls of yellow dross to cast upon the threshold of eternity." One life brightened, one way made easier, one soul brought nearer its eternal happiness, will be pay and pay enough for all the long, cold years among men, and to have done this is not to have lived in vain.

Tomorrow John Leal ends thirty-four years of such service. For almost a half-century—more than the average life of man—he has been doing the greatest work that an Infinite God has entrusted to human mind and human heart—he has been making men. That he has done his work well is attested by hundreds of clean-cut, manly, Christian young men who were educated under his guidance. To those who know John Leal, who know his noble character, his delightful personality and his love for his work in moulding the character of future citizens, it is no wonder that his "boys" invariably "made good." He has achieved beyond the power of his brothers to understand, but Plainfield should honor itself by paying honor to him on the last day of his life as a maker of men.

• • • • • •

ARE YOU A MAN?

• • • • • •

Whether or not Plainfield men, both young and old, want clean, wholesome entertainment on Sunday afternoons will be pretty well demonstrated next Sunday by the audience at the Y. M. C. A. mass meeting. A speaker of ability and character has been secured for the initial meeting, and he has a peculiarly manly message to deliver—one straight from the hearts of the unfortunates that run afoul of the law and pay the penalty exacted by man and society. He is chaplain of the Tombs in New York, and is therefore a confidant of its inmates. These meetings are open to all men and elder boys. There will be nothing offensive to any class, and the speaker for each will be a man with a man's message. If you are a man there is where you belong on Sunday afternoon.

The Trenton Times would make of our government a monarchy. The editor is responsible for the following criticism of Senator James E. Martine:

"The comparisons made of Senator Martine's course in deserting President Wilson are so apt that no one can fail to appreciate them—the football player who refuses to do teamwork, the baseball player who will take no coaching, and the soldier who refuses to obey orders or who expresses conscientious scruples against firing upon the enemy—these are no worse than the Democratic United States Senator who deserts his party's leader 'during an important and serious crisis in national and international affairs.'"

Since when has the government of the greatest and freest country upon the earth become a mere game of "follow the leader?" Men are sent to the United States Senate to voice their own thoughts as they can best mirror the sentiment of those whom they represent. They are not manikins to perform upon a string at the will of he who may happen to be President as a result of a strange trick of political circumstance. If the Times theory should be put into practice there would be no need of a Senate or a Congress, except to do the clerical work of the successful Presidential candidate.

• • • • • •

Each day our respect for the political sagacity of the Equal Suffrage leaders increases. They are parading daily before the delegates at the Republican and Progressive conventions to show how much sentiment is represented in their demands, and the same tactics will be used to force recognition at the hands of the Democrats.

• • • • • •

Most of the important thoroughfares of Plainfield are included in improvement ordinances and resolutions now pending before the Common Council. May the good work prosper. Street work is never extravagance in a city with the traffic of Plainfield.

• • • • • •

The Police Chiefs of America are in Newark collecting evidence of New Jersey's hospitality, and from last reports they had made out a pretty good case against Chief Long, Chief Kiely and some others in this State.

• • • • • •

After reading Senator Harding's keynote speech at the Republican convention those who didn't go are convinced that the delegates would not have a long search should they begin to look about for a "dark horse."

If the other members of the Council, who smoke, are to have city-bought ash trays, they ought to buy Mr. Booth, who doesn't, a glass for his grape juice, or a dish for his Spearmint.

On the Spur of the Moment

by Roy K. Moulton

Our Kind.

We've always heard a deal about the woman with a past;
Life's drama always sees her billed away up in the cast;
But when our birthday rolls around and wife comes from the store,
The woman with the present is the one whom we adore.

A Few Base Hits.

We learn from the esteemed Kansas City Star that a dog owned by H. A. Manker, of Jewell City, recently lost a leg. Then it disappeared. Several times it has been reported dead. The body has never been brought in for identification. The dog is now officially known about town as the late Villa.

A Horton High School boy, tardy for the third time in a week, stammered the following zero in excuses: "Gee, I guess I must have overwashed."

A Hays woman recently requested that the Free Press be kept out of the public library in that city because a certain paragraph in P. Caspar Harvey's "Spectator" column was not exactly Puritanical. Mr. Harvey, blushing modestly, remarks that he didn't know his column had become as good as all that.

Signs of the Times.

Henry Lamar, a Washington citizen, advertises that he will be responsible only for his own debts. A lot of us can't even go that far.

Sure there's money in some cattle. A roll of bills amounting to $300, hidden by the owner, has been eaten by a prize Guernsey cow.

Pablo Lopez says Villa told him he would rather die than yield. Well, Uncle Sam isn't particular—one or the other.

Fire in Indiana town destroyed every business building excepting the saloon. Another argument for the wets.

Michigan has 86 automobile factories. That is, according to the count last week. There are probably more now.

Time to put the cover on the garbage can and keep it on, which will save a lot of swatting in the future.

Bay City brewery workers are on strike. Never could understand how men could "walk out" of a brewery.

Poor Old Maids.

She was many years in college,
And acquired a lot of knowledge;
On the ologies and isms she is long.
She just dotes on reading Ibsen,
And she loves Charles Dana Gibson;
On theosophy and ethics she is strong.

But she can't bake a cake
Like her mother used to make,
Nor a pie, we are very much afraid.
And she can't mend a skirt,
Sew a button on a shirt,
So she's only just a poor old maid.

She has got a lot of scholars,
And is earning her own dollars,
And she's living in a cozy little flat.
Does she have to beg each penny
From a husband? Well, not any;
She's no family to care for but a cat.

And she doesn't have to bake
Any bread or pie or cake,
Or wash or iron, rake or hoe, or spade,
Like her mother used to do
All the live long summer through,
So she's glad she's just a poor old maid.

Congregation Must Behave.

Officers of the Second Baptist church (negro) of Roxabel, O., have caused the followin notice to be posted:

No running in and out of church during the services unless it is absolutely necessary.

No swearing within one hundred feet of the church.

No chewing tobacco, dipping snuff nor spitting in church.

By Officers of the Church.
Eddie Prichard, Sec'y.

THE WAY BOOMS GO

- Proctor's Theatre -

William Collier, the noted comedy favorite, who appears at Proctor's today in a light comedy in five parts entitled "The No-Good Guy," began his career as a call boy in the theatre of the famous stage director of the last generation, Augustin Daly. There he became the associate of Ada Rehan, John Drew and the rest of that talented company. He has starred for years in farce and light comedy, more often than not, a collaborator or sole author of his vehicles. He went to California to appear under the direction of Mack Sennett, and made his debut in the Roscoe Arbuckle comedy, "Fatty and the Broadway Stars," subsequently being starred in "Better Late Than Never" and "Wife and Auto Trouble." About this time Thomas H. Ince needed a type like Collier to portray the leading role in "The No-Good Guy," and thus it is that he appears today at Proctor's in this production. "The No-Good Guy" by its title, suggests the character which the comedian is called upon to play. Spending time and money in everything but profitable pursuits is the cardinal trait of this hero. He runs an automobile into a department store, is arrested for reckless driving and locked up. While he is digging glass from his person and apparel, his uncle, a powerful political boss, comes in and gets him out. But he must go to work. He opens a detective agency and gets a big case. How he runs down the man higher up, who proves to be his uncle, is amusingly told. In addition today "The Larrimore Case," and Harry Gribbon and other noted funmakers appear in "A Dash of Courage," a typical Keystone offering. Tomorrow is Paramount day, and Jesse L. Lasky offers Lou Tellegen in "The Unknown," his second Paramount photoplay. The locale of this story is Algiers and the story chiefly concerns members of that fascinating organization, the Foreign Legion. The lovers are Lou Tellegen and Dorothy Davenport, the former appearing to splendid advantage. He is typical of the part and enacts the dashing young Englishman with attractive skill. On Saturday Mary Miles Minter will appear in "Lovely Mary," a picture in which she is both lovely and lovable, and her winsome personality will win the highest praise and commendation from patrons of Proctor's.

--Astor Theatre--

The Astor Theatre, Kleine-Edison Features presents today "The Catspaw," an enchanting tale of double identity founded on the novel by Mm. Hamilton Osborne, in five big acts. This is no doubt one of the greatest productions ever placed before the public by this well-known company, featuring Miriam Nesbitt and Marc MacDermott. This photoplay is thrilling from beginning to end, with Mr. MacDermott playing the dual role. In addition to this wonderful photoplay we will offer for your approval the ever-popular favorite and Broadway star, Billie Burke, in "Gloria's Romance," a series photodrama in twenty episodes, each episode a complete story in itself. Episode No. 1 today. Tomorrow, Famous Players Film Company presents John Barrymore in a comic-dramatic adventure, "The Lost Bridegroom," by Willard Mack, a humorous combination of laughs and thrills. John Barrymore, who has played Balkan princes, South American dictators and assorted American characters, has reserved for this production the role of crook. It is one of the most laughable and at the some time, most thrilling stories in which the celebrated star has ever appeared. The papers are full of the disappearance of young Joyce, and the descriptions of the vast assortment of wedding presents over which the near-bride is pictured as weeping. It looks like a rich haul to the gang and Joyce, his identity never for a moment suspected, is sent with two others to rob his own fiance's home. They get inside the house, and when Dorothy interrupts the work, Joyce instinctively shields her from the blow of one of the thugs. The crook attacks Joyce and the two men engage in a desperate battle during the course of which they fall down a flight of eighteen steps. Joyce lands on the bottom at the foot of the stairs and is stunned. The police arrive and a doctor is immediately summoned for Joyce. He declares that a very minor operation will completely restore Joyce's memory, and when it has been performed, Joyce has no knowledge of his excursion into the underworld, but believes that he is simply recovering from the hilarity of his bachelor dinner. If the instructions of the doctor have been carried out he still believes so, for Dorothy has solemnly promised never to tell. Mr. Barrymore is supported by an all-star cast, and there is no doubt this will be one of his very best portrayals. Every Saturday we show "The Girl and the Game," a series photoplay, something for the "kiddies." "Gloria's Romance" is being shown at the Globe Theatre, New York, at top-notch prices. During the summer months, matinee starts at 3 p. m., except on holidays and Saturday, when matinee starts 2 p. m.

.· Plainfield Theatre.·.

The new bill opening at the Plainfield Theatre today offers a wide variety in the six high-class vaudeville acts provided. It is headed by the Seven Corkers, a company of seven talented singers and dancers, who have a blackface offering full of ginger from start to finish. Following this number is Rose and Norman, two juvenile jugglers, new to local audiences, but widely known elsewhere as exponents of dexterity and cleverness in handling all manner of objects. The bill is rounded out by Joe Werner, comedian; Carr and Walker, novelty act, and Wooley and Canter, comedians. The program every day includes feature films from the best agencies in the country. Tonight's extra attraction is the fifteenth episode of the serial, "The Iron Claw," which now grows more intensely absorbing as it nears its conclusion.

MISS LAMSON'S PUPILS GIVE VIOLIN RECITAL

Pleasing Affair Enjoyed at the Home of Mrs. Harry Johnson on Watchung Ave.

Miss Elizabeth Harrington Lamson and her violin pupils gave a most interesting recital of their work yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Harry Johnson, 1220 Watchung avenue.

Absolute poise and understanding of the work in hand and unusual sureness and clarity of tone marked each pupil's performance, from those who up to last fall had never had a violin in their hands to those who had longer acquaintance with it and played more difficult compositions.

They all joined in the ensemble work which Miss Lamson led and which showed the same good training.

Miss Lamson herself concluded the program with the A Major Sonata by Haendel, with Miss Mary Florence Nicholl at the piano, Miss Lamson's careful and serious interpretation of the several moods of this lovely Sonata, combined with her always broad and beautiful tone and swinging rhythm, made this a most delightful number, which was enthusiastically received. As an acknowledgment of this, Miss Lamson played an Aria, also by Haendel.

STRAWBERRY FESTIVAL.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Netherwood Reformed church will hold a strawberry festival in the new building this afternoon and tonight. Beside the strawberries, which will be the main feature, ice cream will also be sold.

CIVIL SERVICE "EXAMS" WILL BE HELD SOON

Salary ranges from $60 to $75 a month. Stenotypists, first and second grades, male and female, for each of the above. Salary ranges from $50 to $75 a month.

Candidates should file their application blanks with the Civil Service Commission, State House, Trenton, not later than noon, Saturday, June 17. After filing of application, applicants will receive notice stating time and place of examination.

N. P. H. S. NOTES

Hoyt Tomkinson, who is attending Lehigh University, is upholding the reputation of this school in a most creditable manner. He was recently exempt from taking examinations in five of his seven subjects, having secured an average above ninety per cent. In the examination in Calculus, which is considered the hardest mathematical topic in the college curruculum, he presented a perfect paper, receiving a mark of 100 per cent. for his efforts.

The girls of the two upper classes have been selected to sell roses for the Muhlenberg Hospital on the 17th of this month, when "Rose Tag Day" is observed.

The senior class has selected the pansy as the class flower. The dimensions of the class banner were also voted upon, ten feet by seven being the size approved of.

Tonight the Junior-Senior "feed" will take place in the Methodist church. The P. T. A. will cater the affair.

The Boys' Athletic Association of N. P. H. S. has decided to award the members of the baseball team with gold medals, due to the victories over Plainfield High School, which won the interscholastic championship for them.

The managers of the basketball and baseball teams were also authorized to purchase the High School insignia to present to the entitled players.

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY HONORS J. DEL. FERGUSON

J. De L. Ferguson, son of Chaplain Ferguson, Sherman avenue, was yesterday enrolled among Columbia's doctors in the department of philosophy. His dissertation, now being printed by the Columbia Press, is entitled: "The Influence of American Literature On That of Spain."

Mr. Ferguson graduated at our High School, class of 1907, and as B. A., Rutgers College, class of 1911, and M. A., class of 1912. He was fellow in philosophy at Rutgers and university fellow in English at Columbia. He is now junior professor of English at Heidleberg University, Tiffin, Ohio.

LEHIGH VALLEY OCCUPY NEW OFFICES AT BUFFALO

Imagine a large force of telephone and telegraph operators suddenly laying down their receivers and abandoning their keys, donning their hats and wraps and quitting their quarters. Picture the offices they leave as being located at the terminal of an important railroad. Sounds serious, doesn't it? One would almost expect the railroad to cease operation—for a while anyhow. But it did not—not even for a moment. The force was that of the Lehigh Valley Railroad at Buffalo. The quarters they left were in the old passenger station which had done duty for the railroad since the line entered Buffalo.

When they left it they proceeded directly across the street to offices in the handsome new passenger station now practically complete. When they got there everything was in readiness for them. There were new switchboards and a great deal of other equipment of the most modern variety, but the operators had no difficulty in finding themselves. The wires were working just as they had left them and not a railroad wheel had ceased turning while they journeyed from the old to the new station.

The wire arrangements in the new station are pronounced ideal. A feature of special interest to Buffalo is the fact that none of the wires go overhead until well outside of the city. They are carried in conduits under the street and the new train sheds, avoiding the unsightly open wire telegraph pole lines in the vicinity of the terminal.

"LITTLE MINISTER" ARRIVES.

Rev. and Mrs. W. L. Imes, of 386 Hillcrest avenue, are the parents of a son, born to them this morning. Both mother and child are doing nicely. Mr. Imes is the pastor of Bethel chapel.

WHEN YOU WAKE UP DRINK GLASS OF HOT WATER

Wash the poisons and toxins from system before putting more food into stomach.

Says inside-bathing makes anyone look and feel clean, sweet and refreshed.

Wash yourself on the inside before breakfast like you do on the outside. This is vastly more important because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing illness, while the bowel pores do.

For every ounce of food and drink taken into the stomach, nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out of the body. If this waste material is not eliminated day by day it quickly ferments and generates poisons, gases and toxins which are absorbed or sucked into the blood stream, through the lymph ducts which should suck only nourishment to sustain the body.

A splendid health measure is to drink, before breakfast each day, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless way to wash these poisons, gases and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels; thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs but very little at the drug store but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiast on inside-bathing. Men and women who are accustomed to wake up with a dull, aching head or have furred tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, sallow complexion, others who have bilious attacks, acid stomach or constipation are assured of pronounced improvement in both health and appearance shortly.—Adv.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

A Chinese Emperor Has a Nightingale In His Woods.

He Read About the Nightingale.

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

WHEN the children asked daddy to tell them a bedtime story he said, "How would you like a Chinese tale?" Jack and Evelyn clapped, and daddy went on: "Years and years ago the emperor of China lived in a beautiful palace made of porcelain so fine that it broke unless touched with the greatest care. In the garden the flowers had little silver bells tied to them so that when the wind blew they tinkled and made people look at them. The garden was so big that if one kept on walking he came to lovely lakes and woods that went as far as the sea, blue and so deep that big ships could sail there.

"Now, in this lovely garden, which travelers from all over the world came to see, lived a nightingale that sang beautifully. Even poor fishermen by the sea would stop dragging in their nets and say, 'How beautiful it is!' Scholars who wrote books about the garden never forgot to put the nightingale in their stories, and poets wrote about the nightingale's song by the deep blue sea. These books at last reached the emperor, and he was much pleased to read. 'The nightingale is the best of all.'

"'What, a nightingale that I have never heard of?' cried the emperor. 'Must I discover it from a book?' Then he called his high courtiers and asked, 'Why have I never heard about this nightingale that is said to be the best thing in my gardens?'

"'Because it has never been presented at court,' his gentlemen told him.

"'The whole world knows about my nightingale, and I know nothing. Tonight I wish it to appear here and sing to me.'

"'I will try to find it,' said his highest courtier.

"But where was the nightingale to be found? The men ran all over the palace, but no one had ever seen or heard of a nightingale. So the highest courtier ran back to the emperor and said, 'Your imperial majesty, the story of a nightingale you read in a book must be a myth.'

"'But the powerful emperor of Japan sent me the book, so it cannot be untrue. Extend my most gracious protection to the nightingale and say if it is not here tonight to sing to me I will have the whole court trampled upon.'

"'Tsing-pe!' said the highest officer. And off he scurried to tell everybody. Half the court ran with him and hunted, for nobody wanted to be trampled upon."

"Did they find the nightingale, daddy?" asked Jack.

"That's another story," said daddy, with a good night hug.

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

Jack Forsyth Is Quite Satisfied That He Got Margie Instead of Ethel for a Wife.

"The Gordons must be very wealthy," said Margie Forsyth to her husband after their guests had departed. "Did you notice the lovely broadcloth suit she wore when she came? No? That is just like you; small encouragement from you a woman would have to spend much on clothes," laughed Margie. "Well, take my word for it, the suit was stunning, and Ethel bought another Saturday and ran in debt for it. She said she had not come prepared to shop and had found exactly what she wanted."

"How did she happen to tell you she did not pay for it?" asked Jack in astonishment.

"She wanted to use our name as a reference. I knew you were busy and so I called up Marsh's and told them that Mrs. Gordon was an old friend of yours. That made it all right, of course."

"Hm—so that is the way she's begun. I am sorry." Jack shook his head thoughtfully.

"Ought I to have called you up? I thought you surely would let her use your name and so——"

"Oh, that is all right. Of course I could not refuse such a request, but I am sorry Ethel is turning out like her mother. Though it is only what you would naturally expect after the training she has had. Mrs. Mertage cares for nothing but dress and display. Her poor husband works like a galley slave early and late. He never takes a vacation; never has any pleasure; his nose is always to the grindstone. Ethel is so pretty that it is natural for her to think mostly of decking herself, I suppose. A woman must have some character to rise above it——"

"Is that the reason you chose a homely wife?" interrupted Margie teasingly.

"Homely! With those eyes and that clear-cut mouth and chin!" exclaimed Jack, kissing the mouth in question. "You have character in your face which is more than Ethel's pink and white childishness can ever show." Margie's clear eyes shone with pleasure.

"Gordon has a good position in the Scott-Frazee Company. I do not know his circumstances, but the fact that Ethel is running bills without her husband's knowledge looks as if she had started down the path her mother walks. That means Gordon must be worth a mint of money, or he will be up to his ears in debt all the time. A man with a wife like that must do what he does in the world in spite of her. Not much 'helpmate' in such a marriage."

"Ethel seems such a good-natured, loving little thing. I cannot imagine her persisting in having things when her husband makes her understand that he cannot afford to get them for her."

Jack laughed and pinched her ear. "The trouble is he never could make her understand. It never occurs to Ethel that she can go without anything she wants. I suppose she takes the attitude that her husband must supply her with the necessaries of life, and what she wants is a necessity for her, so there you are."

"You are hard on her. I cannot believe that she is so heartless." Margie was one of those rare women who stand up for their sex.

"Of course you must remember that her education is all against her," argued Jack. "Bring a lovely girl up with the theory that it is her business in life to charm, and never allow her to face any responsibility or have a wish denied and what would you expect of the product?"

"True enough," Margie sighed. "Nevertheless I believe she is good at heart. If only she could be waked up."

"God speed the awakening for her husband's sake, I say," answered Jack, and the subject was dropped.

MOTHERS' WORK

Conducted by the Plainfield Mothers' Association. Every Thursday

Manners.

"For manners are not idle, but the fruit
Of loyal nature and of noble mind."
—Tennyson.

The New Jersey Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher Associations announce a conference of three days to be held in Ocean City, July 17, 18 and 19.

The Congress to co-operate with the State Summer School, in offering to presidents, secretaries and delegates of the Congress an opportunity to study improved methods of instruction and learn to judge of what constitutes the best in school work.

The morning will be devoted to observation of model school work; afternoon sessions will be conducted by the Congress, with speakers from both Congress and the State Department of Education.

All officers and delegates are earnestly urged to attend. Credential cards will not be necessary, but all delegates are requested to notify the president, Mrs. W. Bechtel, Haddonfield, not later than July 1.

Don't Whip a Child in Anger.

It is absurd to whip a child who is overcome by anger. The best thing to do is to let him alone and let his passion wear itself out. If he could be taken before the anger gets the upper hand of him he might be controlled.

What the parent should do is to study the things which will arouse the child's anger and then avoid these things. It is the height of folly for a parent to excite anger in a child and then try to control it by punishment. It is worse than folly; it is brutal and is likely to ruin the child.—Mother's Magazine.

Censored Moving Pictures.

The mothers of Plainfield should be grateful for the committees that have been appointed to censor the moving-picture shows, the cheapest form of entertainment the children may enjoy. However, the mothers should not leave all the supervision to the committees but should know for themselves just what kind of pictures the children enjoy and make an effort to educate their taste for the best in that line as in all others.

Simple Greatness.

In the effort to appreciate various kinds of greatness, let us not underestimate the value of a simply good life. Just to be good; to keep life pure from degrading elements, to make it constantly helpful in little ways to those who are touched by it, to keep our spirits always sweet, and avoid all manner of petty anger and irritability—that is an ideal as noble as it is difficult.—Edward Howard Griggs.

"Better Babies" Exposition.

One of the large department stores in New York city has joined the "Better Babies" movement by installing a trained nurse in the infants' department and are giving free a book on "The Care of Babies" with each purchase in the department. This shows an awakening of the mercantile spirit to the need of knowledge on this important subject and while some inexperienced parents' pocketbook will be sure to suffer, it will teach the need of yet more knowledge on their part and will in the end work for good.

She Liked Gloom.

It is a matter for thankfulness that widows of this generation are more sensible than the dowager Countess of Buchan, who passed away in the year 1786.

On the death of her husband she dressed herself entirely in black crape, engaged two black servants to wait upon her, ate nothing but black puddings and drank for one whole year nothing but black cherry brandy. Yet she survived this gloomy diet twenty-one years before the grim reaper gathered her in.—T. P.'s London Weekly.

Diplomacy.

"It takes diplomacy to get on with a husband," said the woman who speaks her mind freely.

"I believe it does," replied Miss Cayenne. "As I understand it, diplomacy consists largely in seeming to be deceived whether you are or not."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

CHAUTAUQUA IS LOOMING LARGE

Five Full Days of Choice Entertainment Will Be Offered.

AT POPULAR PRICES

Some Strong Lecture Numbers on the Program—Music to be a Feature—New Attractions Each Day.

The Community Chautauqua is looming up larger every day. The committees in charge of the advertising and the sale of tickets have begun their work, and if the present indications mean anything it looks very much as if the Chautauqua is going to be a glorious success.

The event will begin June 23 and will close five days later. It is bringing a great list of musical artists, lecturers and entertainers to town, and if the man who holds a season ticket can't get his money's worth out of the Chautauqua he is looking for something besides the best.

The plan of the committee is to make the Chautauqua so low in cost as to include everybody. In fact, on the season ticket plan, these splendid programs can be heard for a few cents a number. The season tickets admit to all sessions, and there are no extras of any sort.

Two programs will be given on each of the five days. The outstanding feature of the five days will be music, of which there will be a great abundance. An entirely different and distinct set of artists and lecturers will come for each of the five days, so no two days will be alike. These Chautauqua talent folks will move direct from this place to some other Chautauqua, where they will hold forth on the following day. They travel in a complete circuit and appear in as many as seventy towns and cities in seventy days' time, making a town a day.

A large waterproof tent will be pitched in the early morning of the day of the Chautauqua, or the evening previous, and all the sessions will be held in the cool, shady out-of-doors. Many patrons will find it pleasant to combine the Chautauqua with a picnic or outing on one or more of the days of the week, providing a picnic luncheon to be eaten in some shady spot in the two or three hour interval between the afternoon and evening programs.

A most cordial nad hearty invitation is extended by the committee in charge to the folks who live in the country and in the neighboring towns. Their hope is to make the Chautauqua a community affair pure and simple. They are emphasizing the fact that it is not just for this town alone, but is for all the people of the surrounding country.

There has been some talk of an automobile excursion into the country and neighboring towns, inviting everybody into the Chautauqua. It is said that more than two-thirds of the Chautauquas on the Community list last year took trips of this kind last season and are planning more extensively for sociability runs this year.

The program is all that could be desired. It is apparent that the management has spared no expense in making it a grand week from a musical, an artistic and an inspirational standpoint.

The coming of Frederick Warde is in itself an event of extraordinary interest, especially in this Shakespearean tercentenary year. Mr. Warde will appear on the third day in a lecture-recital on "Shakespeare and His Plays."

Other notable features are Victor's Florentine Band and Neapolitan Troubadours on the fourth day. The band is headed by Signor de Carlo, one of the greatest of the younger Italian bandmasters in this country, and has achieved big successes in many large engagements. Other numbers of special interest are Lee Francis Lybarger, of the Philadelphia bar, who will make the keynote speech of the Chautauqua, appearing on the opening evening. His subject is "The Community Conscience." Besides these are Ole Theobaldi, the famous Norwegian violinist, and his two assisting artists, Mme. Alice Florence Stitzel, operatic soprano, and Mlle. Helen Kelere, pianist; Andre Viodn, Mexican war correspondent and a writer and scholar of note who will lecture on "An Inside View of Mexico;" the American Quartet and Clayton Conrad, cartoonist; O'Hara and Wetmore, entertainers; the Dunbar Southern Singers, singing songs of the Southland; Dr. Euclid B. Rogers, a noted lecturer from the Middle West, and special features to be added. Among these latter is the Junior Chautauqua for the boys and girls, which will be under the direction of an expert play director.

The Chautauqua will afford a grand vacation for you right here amid the comforts of your home. Plan to get season tickets for the entire family and give them and yourself a chance to enjoy every one of the ten great sessions.

Tame Silk.

There is more silk in the world than the silkworm ever knew. As a matter of fact, much of the "silk" which is worn is merely guncotton in a new dress. It is merely cotton dissolved in a bath of nitric acid, kept water free by the strongest vitriol. The jelly-like result is then forced through very minute tubes, and the fine threads so produced are dropped into water and rendered innocuous by ammonium sulphide. This "tame silk" has a fine luster and has all the flexibility of the worms' work. In fact, so close is the resemblance that it needs an expert to distinguish them.—London Chronicle.

The spot-light of full publicity, turned on a store, reveals and places in that full light a store's defects—if it have defects. For example: If high prices prevail, or lines of goods are not kept up to date, the reader of the store advertisements knows it. It follows that advertising "pays" the store that renders real service—and would not pay the other kind of a store.

Raking 'Em Over

By "JINKS"

THERE OUGHT TO BE A LAW AGAINST THIS.

Not satisfied with tucking away the interscholastic title North Plainfield High School baseball delegates took a "rattler" to Elizabeth Tuesday and put a crimp in Battin High's record of six straight. Rather inconsiderate of the boroughites to pick on the Union county schoolboys when there happened to be a plentiful supply of game in Somerset and when the Battinites were just about to hang up one of their few rare sport feats. Despite the fact that North Plainfield has dipped into "variety" this season the ballists from over the brook cleaned up on about everything in their own county and crossed over to this side and humbled the claimants of the Union championship. They licked the platter clean for the first time in a number of years.

• • • • • •

ANOTHER TEAM NOT UP TO PAR.

Speaking of the downfall of Battin it might be said right here that the Elizabethans failed to show the class this year of former Battin combines. Hence the baseball grade has fallen down below par in other places besides this city and the borough, and some teams have profitted by the slump. Throughout the State during the present season baseball failed to measure up to the High School standard, but the reasons advanced are many and various and serve to cover up the inefficiency, to some extent, at least. Let's hope they'll round back into shape next year and mount up the ladder instead of cellarward.

• • • • • •

FEW LUMPS OF SUGAR IN THE CITY LEAGUE.

From down Dunellen way came the excuse yesterday that certain City League ballists had been counting upon bad weather to put a crimp in Decoration Day schedules. Better get rid of these sugar lumps at the earliest possible moment for the present outlook indicates that we're going to get a whole lot more of this wet stuff and "Jup" Pluvius doesn't make it a practice to ship along eleventh hour telegrams. The belief that weather conditions would intervene is no excuse; players should be on hand to help their club along no matter what the indications of rain might amount to.

• • • • • •

SOME GREAT BASEBALL IN THE EAST.

Not for years has a better brand of baseball been offered than that being staged in the East now. Conceded to be far out in front of the western clubs, New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Brooklyn had settled back to take things easy after their victorious sweep through the West. On the home grounds the dope pointed to strengthening the hold on the first division, but right from the first setto the boys were given a rude jolt. The West is making its best stand now. No matter if the pennant depends on the last series in the East there could be no harder battles offered, as the humiliation recently suffered is palling on the Occidentals. The general opinion of fandom and critics leans toward the East as the stronger section, but if the western clubs continue the balance of the intersectional invasion as they started perhaps some of the chestiness and confidence can be shaken and the westerners get a look-in for a high finishing berth.

• • • • • •

New Brunswick has developed the schoolboy prize of New Jersey in baseball this year. He is no other than Jake Deinzer, the lad who put the hooks in North Plainfield High School for the first time two years ago on Hyde Oval and who has since proved the stumbling block of both borough and city High School ball nines. As a pitcher this Brunswick product is the class of the High School material and it's safe to conclude that he'll be picked up sooner or later and be given an opportunity to start in the big game. He has all the requisites of a good hurler, including a head, a knowledge of curveology and plenty of smoke.

• • • • • •

Queer how certain City Leaguers have made it their business during the past few days to inquire about "Hub" Stine's return to Plainfield and his signing with the Baptist fold, isn't it? If the truth were known "Hub" hasn't as yet even considered baseball on the local loop and even if he were to play next Saturday the other clubs ought not to hold themselves on the anxious edge. Stine has played college baseball and made good but he isn't any "bear," and it appears ridiculous for clubs on a circuit of the calibre the City League claims to be to get worried over his possible presence in a Baptist uniform.

• • • • • •

Local fans probably remember the warning we sent broadcast a couple of months ago to the effect that baseball wasn't meant for Plainfield girls. Since then it has been proven. North Plainfield High School's athletic misses tried the sport and threw it down cold and a Newark feminine combine hurled a challenge at our heads the other day and failed to stir up even a whispered reply.

• • • • • •

Newark International Leaguers established a win record for their home grounds recently and Johnn McGraw's Giants hung up a mark to be shot at for "away-from-home" competition. But the Giants have failed to "produce" when pastiming in the shadows of Coogan's Bluff and the Newarkers can't seem to cop their share of victories on the road. Now you fans, solve the puzzle.

• • • • • •

The Daily Press received an application from a former big league umpire the other day who is now doing newspaper work in Newark, for a chance at interscholastic league officiating. We naturally concluded it was his first attempt at handling Jersey High School ballists but then, any league "ump" who would forsake the indicator for a pencil pushing job must have fell for something stronger than a boost in salary and he's not accountable for any of his future acts.

• • • • • •

Someone has suggested a Sunday excursion for these six City League ball clubs. The umpires would prove just about as popular as Teddy Roosevelt on a Democratic clambake with Woodrow Wilson serving as master of ceremonies.

• • • • • •

The rain we had yesterday is just what Plainfield High School baseball players wished for at the last of the third inning in Saturday's title clash. Four days late isn't bad, at that.

• • • • • •

According to the official Plainfield High School scorer not a single member of the team was credited with a .300 during the season just closed. Of course he means in batting, but we among others are wondering the reason for the surprise.

STATISTICS LISTED ON GOLF SCORECARD

Hydewood Club's Figures Interesting to the Golfer—Stymie Measure.

One of the new features introduced by the Hydewood Golf Club's green committee since the name of the organization was changed, is a score card published with the stymie measure. The following list has been arranged for the holes, both going out and coming in: 1, mountain view; 2, pond hole; 3, circus ring; 4, faraway; 5, meadowview; 6 brook side; 7, homeward bound; 8 hillside; 9, the trenches.

The par for the holes follow: first, 4; second and third, 3; fourth, 6; fifth and sixth, 6; seventh, 3; eighth and ninth, 4. The handicaps going out are: first hole, 5; second, 15; third, 17; fourth, 1; fifth, 11; sixth, 9; seventh, 13; eighth, 7; ninth, 3; coming in: first, 6; second, 16; third, 18; fourth, 2; fifth, 12; sixth, 10; seventh, 14; eighth, 8; ninth, 4. The hole yardage follows: first, 345; second, 177; third, 116; fourth, 616; fifth, 249; sixth, 279; seventh, 183; eighth, 290; ninth, 365—for a total of 2,620 yards for the first nine and 5,240 yards for the eighteen holes.

STRONG NEWARK TEAM WILL PLAY THE TABS

Next Sunday afternoon the T. A. B. S. will entertain on Avon Oval the Harrison P. C. team, of Newark. This aggregation played out here last season and displayed a speedy brand of baseball. The claim is that the Newarkers are even stronger this summer and will make the Plainfielders hustle to win. Manager Jim Scott, of the Tabs, has announced that all of his team's games will be staged on Avon Oval in the future, thus assuring Plainfield fans of a weekly Sunday exhibition.

BIG WAGERS ON BOUTS.

Billy Gibson, manager of Benny Leonard, who is to meet Johnny Dundee at Madison Square Garden next Monday evening, is reported to have made a couple of large bets on the outcome of the contest. Maxey Blumenthal, who is a strong rooter for Dundee, bet Gibson, it is said, $3,500 against $4,000 that Dundee would win the popular decision, and also $2,000 against $6,000 that Dundee would knock out Leonard before the end of the tenth round. Leonard, who is to box Vic Moran at the Harlem Sporting Club on June 23, has instructed his manager, according to another story, to wager for him $2,500 that Moran will not respond to the bell for the eighth round.

RETA AMBILATOR ENTERED IN MEET

Horse That Made Good on Old Plainfield Track Enters Meet.

Reta Ambulator, 2.20, the game little pacer owned and driven by Frank Irving of Westfield, will be seen in competition for the first time this season in the matinee races at Weequahic Park Saturday afternoon, June 17.

According to reports, Reta Ambulator has been stepping at a fast clip in her workouts on the old Plainfield track and her owner is expecting great things from his bay mare this summer. She is no stranger at local racing meets, having appeared here regularly for several years.

Mr. Irving is undecided as to whether or not he will enter her in the State Fair circuit this season.

Adam C. Blair, of this city, will enter his new mare Hertha again this week and Dr. H. E. Winter, of West Front street, will have two horses in the meet.

POOR SEASON FOR SHAD ALONG ATLANTIC SEABOARD

Along the Atlantic seaboard the shad season, just closing, is said to have been unsatisfactory. From Gloucester comes the report, says the Providence Journal, that the catch was "the poorest in thirty years," and that this desirable fish is disappearing from the waters of the Delaware. Doubtless similar conditions have been noted on other streams and no expert investigation is required to determine the cause of the loss of so valuable a food product.

River pollution is one of the reasons for the decline of the shad fisheries. Another is the setting of nets across the mouths of the rivers—the fish are excluded from the spawning grounds in fresh water. A continuation of this wasteful policy, of course, will make the shad harder than ever to get.

In the early days of manufacturing there was keen appreciation of the value of the shad and herring. Mill owners who used water power were obliged to build fishways by means of which the fish could get above the dams. The economic idea underlying the fishways was essentially sound, but for many years it has been disregarded. Toleration of the wasteful practices of net fishermen is a certain sign of lack of interest in conservation. Why should it be necessary to wait for the killing of the last shad before making the spawning grounds accessible from the ocean?

ARRANGE SERIES FOR GIRLS' ALLEY TITLE

Plainfield and Dunellen Combins Will Get Into Action Tomorrow Night.

Feminine bowling enthusiasts who have been practicing on the Columbus Club alleys during the past week have arranged a three-games series with the Dunellen Presbyterian church quintet, the first match of which will be rolled tomorrow night. The localites have styled themselves the Columbians and expect to give the veteran female five of Dunellen a lively fight for the title.

Mrs. H. B. Arnold, who several years ago was the female star in bowling competition at Dunellen and who during the past winter has been setting up creditable marks on the Columbus Club's lanes, will captain the Plainfield aggregation and she will have as her lieutenants the following: Miss Anna M. Doyle, Miss Alice McAfee, Miss May McAfee, Miss Mary Donnelley and Miss Catherine McCauley, the latter two being the contestants for the fifth berth.

Dunellen will send the following misses to the front: Miss Ruth Voorhees, captain; Mrs. Emma Dice, Mrs. Fred Vail, Mrs. George Apgar and Miss Josephine Dealaman.

RAIN HALTS TOURNEY.

Philadelphia, June 8.—The rain was steady and persistent here yesterday and so drenched the courts of the Philadelphia Cricket Club that play in the women's national lawn tennis championship tournament, in which Miss Edna Wildey, of Plainfield, is playing, now in progress there, was out of the question. Play will be resumed today, if conditions permit, with third-round matches in the singles and second-round matches in the women's doubles and mixed doubles.

CARTER SHOWS THE WAY.

Philip Van Gelder Carter, of Bridgeport, Shinnecock and Nassau, metropolitan junior champion, North and South amateur champion, bearing his titles and his honors lightly throught the heavy going, splashed his way to a victory in the qualifying round of the metropolitan amateur golf championship over the links of the Nassau Country Club yesterday, leading a field of 104 starters with a thirty-six hole score of 81, 78—159.

SAINTS OF ILLS AND TRADES.

Holy Friendships Consoled Pious People in the Middle Ages.

The trustful and childlike piety of the middle ages believed that the citizens of heaven were interested in every phase of men's lives, and there was not a single trade, profession or occupation that did not boast a special patron, while certain diseases were thought to be cured and certain visitations warded off through the intercession and agency of particular saints.

Thus St. Andrew was the patron of fishermen, St. Isidore of husbandmen, St. Christopher of porters, St. Mark of lawyers, SS. Cosmas and Damian of doctors, St. Joseph of carpenters, St. Crispin of shoemakers, St. Vitus of actors, St. Gregory of singers, St. Dismas (supposed name of the good thief) of criminals condemned to death, St. Apollonia was believed to cure toothache, St. Blaise sore throat, SS. Clare and Lucy sore eyes, while St. Benedict preserved his clients from poison and St. Hubert from the bite of mad dogs.

"Men," says Montalembert, "lived in a tender and intimate familiarity with those forefathers whom God had evidently called to himself and whose sanctity the church has proclaimed. From the king and the pontiff to the poorest workman each had a special protector in heaven, and in the battles, dangers and sorrows of life those holy friendships exercised a most consoling and strengthening influence."—Irish World.

That Old, Old Table.

It is impossible to know who was the author of the multiplication table, but it is known to have been in existence in the days of the builders of the ruined cities of Mesopotamia, whose records are now being patiently deciphered by archaeologists. Tablets are found which tell us of their system of education, banking, accounting, business correspondence, etc., and among others are multiplication tables. So the multiplication table is probably not less than 6,000 years old.—Christian Herald.

Queries--Comment--Answers

Query—I am being constantly annoyed by the practice a neighbor's dog makes of chasing my chickens. Is there any law under which I can put a stop to it? If so, please tell me how to proceed.—F. R.

Answer—If your neighbor's dog bothers your chickens, take the matter up with the city judge and he will no doubt instruct your neighbor to keep the canine tied up. That is, of course, if your chickens are not just as much to blame as the bow-wow.

Query—How long has standard time been in use in the United States?—V. D.

Answer—The United States adopted standard time in 1883, on the initiative of the American Railway Association, and at noon November 18, 1883, the telegraphic time signals sent out daily from the naval observatory at Washington, D. C., were changed to the new system.

A. A.—Take your question to a lawyer. We cannot settle legal issues in this column.—Ed.

Query—Where is the greatest altitude to be found in the State of New Jersey and where is it?—K. T.

Answer—The highest altitude is at High Point (Sussex county) and it is 1,809 feet high.

Query—Why don't the police enforce the auto speed law on West Seventh street?—H. O.

Answer—We don't know, you'd better ask them. Us folks who don't have occasion to travel on West Seventh street shouldn't make it a point to squabble with the police.

Query—Will you please tell me if the contractors erecting the building at North avenue and Park avenue have a right to stop up the gutter with brick so that the water is kept from flowing through and forms a small-sized lake.—R. P.

The contractor has a permit to stack brick in the gutter and has built a walk around the pile for pedestrians. However, there doesn't seem to be any good reason why he should be allowed to stop the gutter water from flowing. He should provide some means for the water to flow under or through the pile.

Query—When is Father's Day?—E. P. L.

Answer—Father's Day is celebrated only in the State of Delaware, where a charter was granted for its celebration in 1913. It is set down for the first Sunday in June.

THE NEEDLEWORK GUILD OF AMERICA.

In view of the stand being taken on the subject of "Preparedness" throughout the United States, and in order to prevent the members of the Needlework Guild from enrolling with new societies organized for this purpose, we beg to state that the Plainfield Branch is already prepared for immediate action in collecting new garments and surgical supplies in case of any emergency or calamity in this country, and that it will gladly welcome new members for this cause.

Information may be had by addressing the President, Mrs. Frank O. Herring, 811 Third place, or Miss Lucy W. Talmadge, Secretary, 714 Belvidere avenue.

GEORGE WITTMAN WEDS MISS IDA MAY COOPER

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Ida May Cooper, daughter of former Sheriff and Mrs. Edward E. Cooper, of Mt. Bethel, and George Wittman, formerly of Mt. Bethel, but now of Plainfield. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's parents Sunday, June 4, Rev. William Mount, pastor of the Millington Baptist church, officiating. The couple will reside in Plainfield, where Mr. Wittman is connected with the Farmers' Consumer Company.

SOME SIDELIGHTS ON CONVENTIONS; ALL NOTABLE POLITICIANS THERE

This Year Sees Passing of Power Formerly Held by Negro Delegates In Republican Gathering.

How Justice Hughes Remained Silent Week Before Opening Day and What He Told Reporter.

THE national conventions, aside from the duty of nominating presidential candidates, bring together leading politicians from all parts of the country. There is always much joking among the various delegates, and when the conventions are not in session the hotel lobbies are the busiest places in the cities where the gatherings are held.

Few of the delegates or spectators see the real work of nominating the candidates when there is any doubt. Most of this is done at night, high up in some hotel room, where the leaders get together and after deliberating over the day's balloting attempt to arrive at some plan whereby the nomination can be hastened.

The day of the colored delegate at Republican conventions has passed. A few turned up at Chicago. They dropped into the headquarters of some of the candidates, received a few bland smiles and some literature, were told to drop in as often as they felt like it and were then permitted to wander out into a cold world without so much as being asked where they were staying.

It was not like this four years ago or even eight years ago. In 1908, when the "allies" made their futile fight against Taft, these colored delegates and their friends were fairly dragged into the various headquarters.

The appearance then of a southern colored delegate generally was the cause of a whispered conference, and then he would depart, looking very wise and very important. There were not only the delegates themselves, but the contestants, who that year were crushed under the Hitchcock steam roller. They made a formidable number.

But what happened in 1908 was as nothing to what happened in 1912. Chicago four years ago fairly flowed with milk and honey for these colored delegates. The Taft men and the Roosevelt men furnished them with sumptuous quarters. They were feted, courted and fought over. Nothing like it was ever seen before.

But to this convention there are to be not over twenty-five colored delegates, whereas four years ago there were three times that many. This is because of the new representation rule adopted by the national committee, which has affected chiefly the delegations from the southern states.

Colored Delegates From North.

To mollify the feelings of the colored brethren an effort has been made this year to squeeze in here and there a colored voter in the delegations from the northern states. Many state delegations which for years have not contained any colored men will have at least one this time. But these delegates are of a class distinctly different from the colored representatives of Republicanism who have hitherto appeared from below Mason and Dixon's line.

James H. Hayes of Virginia, who four years ago was in charge of the entertainment of the colored men who espoused the colonel's cause and was in charge of the headquarters fitted up for them on Thirty-sixth street, complained bitterly that nobody had had the forethought to provide any meeting place for them.

The fact is that nobody cares apparently as much as a red apple for the colored delegates this year. There are so few as to make them almost a negligible factor. Of course a situation is conceivable where these few delegates might turn the scale.

Hughes' Silence.

Justice Charles E. Hughes had nothing to say regarding the Republican convention a week before it met. The nothing being expressed by the baffling supreme court presidential possibility is not just an ordinary nothing; it is a nothing worked out with all the exactness of the bench on which Justice Hughes sits.

Here's an example:

Reporter (on phone)—Justice Hughes' secretary? Did you note the statement in the morning New York papers that Justice Hughes is preparing an announcement?

Secretary—There is nothing to say.

Reporter—Yes. But does that mean nothing will be said?

Secretary—I can only tell you there is nothing to say.

Reporter—You mean there will not be any announcement?

Secretary—There is nothing to say.

Reporter—Am I to understand that that is a denial or an admission of the truth of the story?

Secretary—There is nothing to say.

They exchange goodbys, and the reporter sits down beside the telephone. Presently it rings, and this is heard:

WILLIAM BARNES OF NEW YORK, WHO DOESN'T LIKE THE COLONEL.

"This is Justice Hughes' secretary. You can say positively the justice is not preparing a statement."

The reporter then writes his story. Experience had taught him that if an uncertainty remained as to the nothingness of what the justice had to say that uncertainty would be removed fairly soon. He had gone over the same route with the justice's secretary before.

In common with other Washington newspaper men he had reached the conclusion that Justice Hughes in the library of his home, which constitutes his office, is keeping close tab on all queries and is dictating the exact form of reply that shall be given to each.

Mrs. Roosevelt In Chicago.

Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt is one of the guests at the Progressive national convention. A box was reserved for her, and she was accompanied by a number of friends. Governor Hiram Johnson of California, who was the Progressive candidate for vice president in 1912, has also taken a box at the convention.

Mrs. Roosevelt is accompanied by Colonel Roosevelt's sister, Mrs. Douglas Robinson and Mr. Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Robinson, Jr.; Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr.; Monroe Robinson, a nephew of the colonel, and Mrs. Robinson; Mrs. Joseph Alsop, a niece, and Mr. Alsop. Monroe Robinson lived in Chicago for a number of years. He married Miss Dorothy Jordan of Boston a few months ago. They will be the guests of George F. Porter, chairman of the convention committee.

Nicholas Longworth, son-in-law of Colonel Roosevelt, is at the Republican convention. It is said that Mrs. Longworth will divide her time between the two political gatherings. The Longworths will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Medill McCormick.

The names of other moose box holders include Irwin R. Kirkwood of Kansas City, Frank P. Corrick, national committeeman from Nebraska; George C. Priestley of Oklahoma, Mrs. Charles Wood of Washington, Frank H. Funk of Bloomington, Ill.; G. D. Pope of Detroit, E. H. Hooker, George W. Perkins, J. Horace Wilkinson and William Hamlin Childs, all of New York.

Stevenson For Roosevelt.

One of the most interesting figures at the Chicago convention is A. O. Stevenson of Denver. Stevenson, who weighs about 300 pounds, was one of the strongest supporters of Mr. Taft at the 1912 gathering and did everything in his power to re-elect the regular Republican candidate. However, in the past four years he has completely changed, and when the first delegates reached Chicago this year he was on the scene boosting T. R. stock.

Proposals for Four-Cylinder Triple Combination Motor Pumping Fire Engine and Hose Carrier.

Pursuant to a resolution adopted by the Common Council of the City of Plainfield at a regular meeting thereof held June 5, 1916, NOTICE is hereby given that the Common Council will meet on Monday, the 19th day of June, 1916, at 8 o'clock p. m., at the Council Chamber, No. 149-151 North avenue, at which time and place said Common Council will receive sealed proposals for furnishing the following, that is to say:

ONE, not less than Four-Cylinder Triple Combination Motor Pumping Fire Engine and Hose Carrier, with a pumping capacity of not less than 750 gallons per minute against 120 pounds net water pressure and at least fifty per cent. of the rated capacity at 200 pounds net water pressure; engine not less than 100 horse-power brake test; to have a longitudinally divided hose body with a capacity of at least one thousand feet of hose when carrying equal amounts of 2½ inch and 3 inch hose; also to be equipped with one 40 gallon chemical tank and at least 200 feet of ¾ inch chemical hose with a ⅝ inch brass nozzle; to be capable of obtaining a speed of at least thirty miles an hour and of covering twenty miles an hour over paved or macadam streets having such grades as the apparatus is likely to encounter in service, and to be equipped with one extension ladder, to extend 24 feet complete, with automatic locks and rope hoist; one 16 foot roof ladder with folding roof hooks; one hand-operated 7 inch rotary siren horn, complete with plate; one N. P. Little Giant door opener; two 10 foot pike poles and hooks; two 10 foot lengths 2½ inch soft suction hose with female couplings on each end; two Larkin shutoff nozzles; one Eastman 3-way deluge set, complete with nozzles, reducers and holders; two 2½ inch by 20 inch rubber play-pipes with handles, and one hose clamp.

No bids will be accepted except upon condition that the apparatus will be placed free of charge in such control of the City of Plainfield, as will permit such demonstration and reasonable tests thereof to be made during a period of thirty days as the Common Council shall deem necessary to determine whether or not the apparatus is satisfactory, and if the same is thereafter rejected, that it will be removed from the city by the bidder without expense to the city, nor unless guarantees against defects, etc., are satisfactory.

All tests to be made under the supervision of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, and to the satisfaction of the Committee on Fire and Buildings.

In determining upon the acceptance or rejection of bids the general reputation, financial standing, experience in the business of manufacturing fire apparatus, facilities for duplication of parts, types and stability of pumps, motors, and other features of the apparatus and adaptability for use under conditions existing in Plainfield and vicinity will be given consideration.

The right to reject any and all bids is reserved by the Common Council.

Proposals should be endorsed "Proposals for Triple Combination Motor Pumping Fire Engine and Hose Carrier."

By order of the Common Council.

SYNOPSIS. — Stephen O'Mara, a homeless and friendless boy, starting from the wilderness to see the city, is welcomed to the home of Caleb Hunter and his sister Sarah. Stephen meets Barbara Allison, young and rich, and Caleb gives him a home. Barbara ridicules Stephen, who runs away, declaring that he'll come back when worthy of her. Caleb learns that Stephen was well born. Ten years later Stephen returns, still loving Barbara, and learns she is to wed Archibald Wickersham. She tells Stephen his love is hopeless.

CHAPTER X.

I Never Did Like to Be Beaten.

STEPHEN O'MARA found Hardwick Elliott lunching alone in the East Coast company's main Morrison office, a big unpainted shack that stood half lost in a maze of high piled ties, midway between the sawmills at the river edge and the first snarled network of switches converging on one reddish streak of steel that lanced into the north. He rose and held out a finely tapered hand.

"Now, this is fine!" he exclaimed. "This is really fine, Mr. O'Mara. Rather odd, too—coincidence and that sort of thing, I mean. Because I was just this instant wondering whether I had better send for you or wait until you just happened down river again."

"Something else gone wrong?" Steve asked. "Or are you going to tell me that McLean is still having trouble with that curve of his?"

"No," he replied. "No, we've got that laid, or at least practically so. No, it's not the work itself. You know the first few miles at this end afford pretty plain sailing. We figured on that or we wouldn't stand any chance of finishing the job. And we are quite nicely ahead of our schedule so far. But have you—I was wondering if you, by any chance, have noticed any signs of discontent in your own squad at Thirty Mile?"

Elliott eased himself back into his chair at the finish of the question. Repugnantly he jerked a thumb in silent invitation toward a plate of sandwiches. It indicated most clearly the state of his appetite—that gesture—and Steve could not help but smile a little as he refused.

"No more than the usual disturbances," Steve answered. "I have more or less trouble holding them—some of them over the week ends, of course. But then that's always to be expected. They aren't the sort of men that go to make up the general run of construction squads. One of my main reasons for wanting them was the fact that they were rivermen, hardened to swamping and white water work and that kind of thing. In a pinch they're good for twenty-four hours a day over stretches that would take the heart out of most gangs. I don't know of anything that can beat a lumberjack on a squeeze job once you get him to realize that he's up against long odds. It's this ten hour a day thing and too much ready money every pay day; it's a town too temptingly close that makes them a—a trifle temperamental, Mr. Elliott. Is that what you mean?"

Elliott pondered for a moment.

"That entirely duplicates what McLean said just a day or so ago." On any other lips Elliott's deliberate neatness of phrase might have sounded solemnly funny. "Thoroughly logical, of course—thoroughly possible. And yet somehow it doesn't fit the case. We've had the usual Monday morning vacancies right along, as you know, but the delinquents always turned up before the 5 o'clock whistle blew or at least reported Tuesday morning. But this is the end of the week, and we're short right this minute very close to thirty men. They aren't coming back, Mr. O'Hara. On the contrary, they continue to dribble away, a few every day. And, though they appear to do nothing but talk their time away in the saloons in the lower end of the town, they seem to have just as much money to spend as they did when they were getting their time checks from us."

"What sort of talking?" Steve wanted to know.

"That's just it," Elliott exclaimed. "Their talk leads nowhere. I went down and attempted to find out what their grievance might be, but they close up like clams whenever I come within earshot. They stare at the ceiling, rub their chins and laugh when there's nothing to laugh at. This morning, however, I finally convinced McLean that something was radically wrong. So he took one of them who had just decided to quit and pinned him up against the embankment—but you know McLean and his methods—he shoved his jaw up within an inch of the other's nose and invited him to talk, and—well, he found out enough to make him begin to worry too. Somebody's been talking to them, Mr. O'Mara. Somebody has put the fool notion into their heads that this strip of railroad will mean the end of all lumber operations in this country—the old time river drives, of course. And some of them are beginning to believe, whoever was responsible for that statement.

"You know and I know how absurd it is. We know that this road will mean work for every riverman in this section, as often as he wants to work. But it isn't going to help us any if they can't see it that way. It isn't going to replace the men who quit. I've been deliberating one point. Don't you suppose we might import a regular squad of construction men now, before it's too late?"

"It's too late now," Steve told him, his words none the less final for all that they were absently quiet. "It was too late the day we began operations. And yesterday at this time I wouldn't have given much worry to this particular brand of trouble. They're an odd lot. They're the hardest working, hardest living crowd of big men that ever failed entirely to grow up. But since yesterday—since yesterday—who, did you say, was responsible for that statement, as you call it?"

"I didn't say. And if I—if I had to guess"— The hand passed across his eyes now. "O'Mara, do you know how deeply Mr. Ainnesley and myself are involved in this prospect?"

"I don't believe I have ever given it much actual thought," Steve replied. "I never viewed it as any of my affair. But I haven't forgotten the last time we talked the plans over, that you couldn't go into it to lose."

"Of course," Elliott answered quickly. "Of course—of course!" He seemed groping for a fresh beginning, then gave up suddenly all attempt at circuity and blurted it out much as though he had lived with the thought too long to endure it longer alone.

"I'm in up to my last dollar," he stated. "And Ainnesley—why, Ainnesley wouldn't have a roof over his head if we failed in our obligations! You must know as well as I do why the banking interests took our paper to those amounts which made it possible for us to drive the first spike."

When he failed to go on Steve understood that the last sentence had been a question.

"Mr Allison, I suppose." His voice became utterly impersonal. "Without doubt you mean Mr. Allison."

"They would have laughed at us," the older man came back instantly. "And, what is more, they did! They wouldn't touch the proposition until Allison came in with us. And then—but you know what Dexter Allison has done already in this country. I don't know what he started with. I do know that all that Ainnesley and I had scraped up between us looked like a shoestring to him.

"We couldn't move until he, of his own accord, expressed his enthusiasm for the plan and asked for a share in the holdings. You know perhaps how he can laugh too. Well, he laughed that way and confessed that we had just beaten him to it. He said it would tap a gold mine—this 'strip of steel,' as he called it. He even told us that he'd parallel our road with a competitor, jokingly to be sure, if we hadn't tied up the only available and practicable right of way.

"He came in. He opened up, merely through his own name and all there is behind it, loan possibilities for which we might have struggled uselessly the rest of our lives without his help. Between us Mr. Ainnesley and I just managed to hold the balance of stock control and—and that's how deep we are in, Mr. O'Mara."

Both men sat and smoked, each avoiding elaborately the other's eyes. After a long pause Elliott cleared his throat laboriously.

"This morning," he continued slowly—"this morning I am in receipt of a communication from Mr. Ainnesley himself advising me that another right of way has been applied for for a single track road here in the north. The gossip which chanced to come his way was rather obscure. Little could be learned about the whole affair save that it was being put forward with a view to tapping the ore and timber lands all the way to and beyond the border. But as nearly as he could ascertain the southern terminus of such a road would seem to be about—about at the mouth of that valley southernmost in the Reserve company's timber holdings. Rather a remarkable choice for a railroad terminus, Mr O'Mara, wouldn't you say so?"

"Do you mean that they've thrown out your earlier application for just such a grant?"

"That would be a rather harshly definite way of putting it," Elliott smiled wryly. "Ours is apparently just tabled—oh, tabled pending certain immaterial changes in the form! You asked me a moment ago—or did I offer to guess?—who might be responsible for the report which is costing us our men. I wonder if I need to tell you who controls this new northern route?"

"Maybe you've been telling me," Steve came back coolly. "You have already mentioned"—

"Wickersham!" Hardwick Elliott corrected. "Wickersham—that is, through allied interests which he represents or controls. O'Mara, I doubt if I would even insinuate this to any one else; I haven't even intimated it to Ainnesley as yet. Wickersham is reputed to represent huge moneyed foreign interests. But have you ever stopped to wonder whether he might not represent big local interests as well? I'd like to ask you—what do you think?"

"Yesterday," Steve answered, "yesterday—well, I couldn't guarantee just what I might have thought twenty-four hours back. But doesn't one fact remain unchanged still, no matter what we think? Suppose we admit that some one else does want this stretch of track we're laying. Suppose somebody is figuring on picking it up cheap at a bankruptcy price if we forfeit to the Reserve company. You know yourself that you would never have begun it simply for the profit there will be in moving the Reserve logs and the millions on millions of feet of lumber, both to the east and west, which can't be touched at anything but a prohibitive figure without this road. We were going through to the border too. And if some one else is betting that we don't, if some one else is betting that we can't yank a trainload of logs down to this end of the line before the 1st of May, that doesn't alter our case any, does it? Even though we suspect that some man is playing us to lose, do we have to know exactly who he is?"

Slowly, but very surely, the older man's face began to smooth.

"Once or twice," he stated, "I've thought to anticipate you, perhaps because I have it on you a little, as they say, in the matter of years. I'm not going to attempt it any more, for I thought that this conversation would be at least a surprise to you. You sit there and take it very quietly for a man who has been badly startled."

"Fat Joe has been preaching it for a month." Oddly enough, Stephen O'Mara chose that point at which to laugh softly. "And I, for a month, have been ridiculing him. That's one of Fat Joe's pet diversions, you know. When all other excitement fails Joe invariably falls back upon an imagination too totally vivid to be wasted on technical things. I laughed at him until last night. Do you—but, of course, you know Garry Devereau?" he finished.

"Knew his father," Elliott answered succinctly. "Know him well. Good blood, good brains, big hearts! Why?"

And then for the second time that day Steve related the salient points of that episode which had ended with the first gray streaks of returning day. During the recital the expressions which chased across Elliott's face were as varied as they were full of concern.

"Then I wasn't merely hysterical, was I?" he brooded after Steve had finished. "Who—who did you say you thought might be behind the man who would have had your plans had it not been for Mr. Devereau?"

"I didn't say," replied Steve, and for the first time since his entrance there was mirth in the unison of their laughter.

"It all brings us back to the point from which we started," the younger man went on when they were grave again. "It's a plain enough issue so far as we are concerned. We've got to be at the mouth of that lower valley by May. We're going to be! And as I see it, wasting time and energy in—shall we call it sleuthing, Mr. Elliott?—won't help us much. We thought that lack of time and the general nature of this country were going to be handicap enough. But now your money is in and I—I never did like to be beaten. Can't we let it stand like that, at least until some one else makes a plainer move? We know the cards we hold. If others care to sit in perhaps we'll all come to a showdown next spring at Thirty Mile. It'll be easy enough to explain just how we did it. Alibis based on veiled opposition would not interest the Reserve people much if we left their timber there to rot. * * * And I'm trying not to overlook any bets, Mr. Elliott."

Hastily the iron gray man thrust his hat back from his forehead. He came to his feet and crossed and clapped one hand upon Steve's shoulder.

"Next May!" he barked. "O'Mara, I'm glad you came down this morning. I've been carrying a lot of those ideas around in my head until they had become nightmarish. But I'm through now. You won't hear me croak again. I staked what I had on you months ago. I'd do it again this minute. What's the odds, after all, who it is that's playing us to lose? It's only the fact that somebody may be fighting us that needs to occupy our attention. I'm done worrying. Do you hear? But what about those men who are quitting us? You are sure it would be unwise to import labor? It's cheaper, you know."

M'LEAN PINNED HIM UP AGAINST THE EMBANKMENT.

"We'd have the prettiest kind of a scrap on our hands the first day we tried to use them," he explained. "It would be dead enough before we got through. I guess I'd better run right out and have a talk with McLean. He knows these men even better than I do, and I'm almost one of them, you know. And I'll get a line on some of these delinquents who are crying calamity for the country side. I'd better, because we'll need them. They simply haven't become thoroughly interested yet; that's all. It will take something to jolt them, something to set them on fire. And then—then just watch my plaid shirted boys go! They'll eat up your sledge swingers!"

Something of that promised fire was reflected now in Hardwick Elliott's eyes.

"By Gad," he exclaimed; "by Gad, if it wasn't for Ainnesley, I'd say the thing was worth it, win or lose, just for the game itself! You go ahead and see McLean. I'll be out there later myself. I promised Allison that I'd show the works to some of the young folks up there on the hill. His daughter—but I keep forgetting that you've known her longer than I have. There's quite a party of them. She announced her engagement to Mr. Wickersham last night, I believe. Heard that this morning. Was too busy to go up last night myself. Maybe you'll find time to help me play the host."

Steve turned toward the door. "So I heard," he replied, without facing around. "I'll try to be on hand."

CHAPTER XI.

That Woods Rat.

BETWEEN Dexter Allison's monopoly of his time and the persistence with which Miriam Burrell clung to Stephen O'Mara Barbara Allison had opportunity for little more than a perfunctory word or two of greeting that afternoon during the first hour or two that followed a jolting ride on the flat car which bundled them to the head of operations.

For a time Allison was content to stroll along with the rest—content with his facetious comments on Elliott's explanation of this matter or that. Yet whenever his eyes strayed toward Miriam and that other figure whom a week or two before he had designated as "my man O'Mara" his joviality faltered a little, his manner grew restive. After a time he, too, detached himself and sauntered in the direction of that wholly preoccupied pair.

"Don't flatter yourself that I haven't noted your covetous glances," Miriam flashed at Allison. "I've been talking very fast because I knew this interruption was coming. But we've finished, thank you, so I'll leave you to—to bore him now!"

She turned back toward O'Mara. "And thank you," she murmured not very audibly. "Thank you more than I ever thanked anybody before in my life. You've made me very, very happy."

No one could have missed the depth of real thankfulness in those last words. Even Allison stood astonished at it, mouth open, following her rapid withdrawal toward the group fifty yards away.

"Huh-h-h," he snorted. "Huh-h-h. A mighty strange girl!" And then, as abruptly as he had interrupted their low conversation: "Well, how does it go, chief? How does it look to you as far as you've gone?"

"Not too bad," Steve answered. "Not too bad." He swept the ground before them with a short gesture. "You are not beginning to worry, too, are you?"

"Worry?" Allison's frown was barely perceptible. "Why should I? I never let anything worry me. Who is beginning to fret? You aren't, are you? You don't look—much disturbed."

"Not a particle!" Steve still smiled. "I never do, either, unless there is something worth while to make me. I just thought perhaps you might have contracted it from Mr. Elliott. He's been bothered, you see, by the way some of the men are acting. We're short a lot of men this week."

The big man wheeled and squinted at the droves of men sweating under the unseasonably hot sun. He peered keenly at each clump of laborers, some of them scarcely distinguishable knots of humanity in the distance.

"Not very short," he stated comfortably. "I don't claim to be a wholly competent judge, but it looks to me as though they would be in one another's way if there were any more of them. What's wrong?"

The chief engineer's answer was drawling in its deliberation.

"I wish I knew," he replied. "I wish I could be positive. And there aren't too many of them; they are altogether too few. We're going to need them, and more, too, before we finish, Mr. Allison. Perhaps I'd better figure on—perhaps if they continue to quit on us, by twos and threes, as they have in the last week, I'll have to"—

His pause seemed almost an invitation that the other suggest a remedy, and, whether it was or not, Dexter Allison was quick to seize the opening. His suggested solution was heartily bluff.

"Import some more," he said. "When you've employed these men as long as I have—the type of man who has worked all his life on the river—you'll know as well as I do just how uncertain and unreliable they are. What you need is a gang that doesn't want to think for itself. This crowd has too much imagination for a grind like this."

Steve nodded very thoughtfully.

"If it is all imagination," he wondered. "But they're not merely discontented, you see, Mr. Allison. They—they are misleading themselves. They seem to think, from what I've gathered from McLean and a few with whom I have talked, that they are working themselves out of a job for good when they help to build this strip of railroad. They think so. They have been convinced that such is the truth. Personally, however, I feel sure that between us we can correct that impression."

"We," Allison echoed. "Where do I figure in it?"

The younger man's upward glance was seemingly surprised.

"You? Why, you're a stockholder. It means as much to you as it does to Mr. Ainnesley and Mr. Elliott."

Allison interrupted him.

"O course!" he exclaimed. "Surely! I see! What I mean was how in the world can I make them understand that such a fool idea is all wrong? So far as this constructive work is concerned, I'm not an active member. I—I had that understood with Elliott when I went into this thing!"

"Of course" Steve in turn broke in. "I understand that. But they know you; they know that Morrison would be nothing more than a street of well kept lawns and cow pastures if you hadn't seen its possibilities. And so I've already told some of them, Mr. Allison. I've gone even further and given a lot of them my word that you'll guarantee yourself that this is the biggest thing for the good of this section that has yet happened."

The speaker smiled frankly into the bigger man's eyes.

"And that was all they needed, was it?" Allison queried, at length. "That fixed it, did it?"

"Absolutely!" Steve's cheeriness should have been infectious. "Absolutely, Mr. Allison. A lot of people have come to look on your word as law in this country, you know—a lot of them!"

"Hum-m," replied Allison. "Hum-m."

Both of them were quiet for a time. Steve's next remark brought Allison's head up sharply.

"I meant to bring some of my estimates and plans down with me when I came," he told him. "You spoke of wanting to run over the whole proposition with me, you'll remember, the first day you arrived."

Allison nodded shortly. "I remember."

"I'll bring them next trip," Steve finished. "I came so near to losing them last night that I'm taking no chances until they're in duplicate. We can run over them later?"

Allison wheeled and gazed meditatingly toward the group who were slowly moving their way. His daughter, Barbara, with Wickersham at her side, was in the lead.

"Any time," he agreed. "There's no particular hurry."

And then a moment later, just when she was beginning to wonder whether he was purposely avoiding her, Barbara was surprised at the calm ease with which Steve took her away from her tall escort. She had noticed that Wickersham and Steve had not touched hands when they first met, an hour or two before, nor even hinted at such a salute. But now, as earlier in the day when her dash toward the stables had left him standing rigid in the middle of the lawn, she failed to see the expression that settled upon Wickersham's long face. It was Dexter Allison this time who noticed it, and hours later, when he and Wickersham sat and faced each other in the downstairs room in the house on the hill which served as Allison's office, he remembered and recognized it.

"You wanted to talk with me?" Wickersham inquired as he entered the room that evening.

Somehow Wickersham's unending politeness had always irritated Allison. That night his smoothly infectionless question nettled him.

"Your infernal fool, Harrigan, bungled last night!" he blurted out. "He messed things up beautifully. He not only failed, but he failed to get away without being seen. That's what comes of intrusting a job like that to a drunken sot."

Wickersham seated himself—sat and caressed a cigarette. Coolly he waited and blinked his eyelids.

"My man?" he murmured. "My man?"

"Ours, then," Allison corrected snarply—"ours." Then he seemed to recollect himself and his voice became less abrupt. "Listen. This afternoon I had a talk with O'Mara—that is, I started to have a talk with him, but—but he beat me to it. And in just about three minutes he told me that he'd caught Harrigan on the job—not mentioning any names, I don't mean—but he didn't need to. And he told me more than that. He as good as gave me to understand that he'd know where to place the blame if there was any more interference with his men."

Wickersham crossed a long leg and blew a thin blue streamer of smoke.

"Yes?" he intoned bodilessly.

It brought a blaze to Allison's eyes, that nerveless monosyllable.

"That doesn't interest you, eh?" he snapped. "Doesn't interest you at all! Well, it does me. Three months ago I bought into this affair because I was as sure as any man could be that I'd collect 100 per cent on my money next spring. Elliott and Ainnesley? Pah! Nice gentle old ladies when it comes to a game like this. They're anachronists; they are honest business men twenty years behind the times. You've heard of taking candy from children? Well, that's what it looked like then. But it doesn't look that way any longer. Talk with you? Yes, I did want to talk. I wanted to tell you that if you'd like to switch I'm willing right now. I wanted to tell you that if you'd rather be a good little boy and get into line I'm willing, and more than willing. Because I can promise you, since I talked it over with O'Mara this afternoon, that we haven't any nice, dead sure thing on our hands any longer. What do you say? Do we switch?"

"Switch," Wickersham snarled. And he leaned forward, face bloodless, and beat upon a chair arm. "Switch now!" He laughed shrilly. "Why, I'm going to beat that blanked woods rat in his matinee idol costume so bad between now and next May that he'll be walking the roads for his next job. Switch? I'm going to brand him as the worst incompetent that ever dragged two poor fools down into pauperism. I'll see him broke. I'll wipe that infernal smooth smile from his lips if I have to"—

Wickersham gasped. He came to his feet panting all in an instant with the rage that set his dry lips writhing. But at that point he, too, remembered himself.

"If you—if you are afraid"— he inferred. "If you"—

Allison's laugh was big and booming for all that the astonishment had not yet left his eyes.

"Cold feet," he rumbled. "Cold feet! Me!" And suddenly his gust of mirthless laughter made petty the other's insolence. "Wickersham, I've broken better crooks than you'll ever be. A man has to have a big heart to be a big crook, and you—and you—well, sometimes I wonder whether there wasn't some sort of an oversight in that line when they put you together.

"I only wanted to give you a chance," Allison continued. "I reckon I can take care of myself. I always could. And you—well, you know as well as I do what sort of scrap that—that woods rat can put up, or you ought to. He gave you a sort of a demonstration once, if I remember correctly. I stick! I never was overly squeamish. But don't fool yourself, Archie; don't fool yourself. If we fight we're fighting with a regular guy, your insinuation to the contrary. I merely wanted you to realize what I know now. We'll think we've been in a battle before we come to a finish!"

—Among the readers of this newspaper's classified columns are possible buyers for any desirable real estate in this city.

—Until you have canvassed the readers of this newspaper on the matter, do not decide whether or not this may be a "poor time to sell" that property.

ARE YOU THE LUCKY ONE?

Somewhere on this page the name of a Plainfielder appears. If it is yours clip out the column in which you find it and bring it to the Plainfield Daily Press office, where you will receive in return a book containing twelve admission tickets to the Plainfield Airdome, valued at $1.20. A name will appear each night on this page; if you don't happen to be the lucky one tonight continue to watch. The tickets are good at any performance and will entitle you to the same privileges enjoyed at this popular amusement center by those who pay.

South Plainfield.

At the monthly meeting of the Piscataway Township Committee at New Market on Tuesday night, the committee granted to the New York Telephone Company a fifty year franchise for the use of the streets in the township. This franchise has been before the Committee for two and a half years. One year ago the franchise was granted but it did not meet the approval of the Public Service Commission as there was a provision embodied in the franchise, stipulating that the township was to have the use of three telephones for public business free of charge. The clause was eliminated on the final reading before it was passed. William A. Norman, Robert A. Ritter and Harry J. Maning were elected as street lighting commissioners for a term of one year at a meeting held in this place Tuesday afternoon. An appropriation of $900 for lights was also passed.

William Morris has just brought his family to this place from Buffalo, N. Y., and have taken up their residence in the Hogan two-family house. Mr. Morris has been employed at the Spicer plant for some time.

Miss Katherine German, of Allentown, is spending a few days with her aunt, Mrs. George Sandhere.

Mrs. Louis Lipshitz and children, Selma and Irving, are spending a few weeks with relatives in Hartford, Conn.

Mrs. Frank Van Ness has returned from Muhlenberg Hospital, where she was under treatment.

Robert Adams has been detained from his work at Spicer's for a few weeks with a severe attack of rheumatism.

ELECT TWO TRUSTEES.

G. W. V. Moy and Francis Mortimer were elected trustees for two years at a meeting of the Park Avenue Baptist church last night. They will fill vacancies. After the meeting the Board reorganized by electing Harry C. Runyon, president; Mr. Mortimer, secretary; George E. Hall, treasurer, and Willard M. Maxim, financial secretary. The other members are Mr. Moy, William N. Runyon, George Place and Alfred Spangenberg.

MISS MOLEDEZKY ARRIVES.

CHANCE FOR PRESS ADVERTISERS TO ATTRACT THE ATTENTION OF THE ENTIRE COUNTY.

As the result of an agreement between the Plainfield Daily Press and the Elizabeth Evening Times any advertiser placing a classified ad in the Press may have that same ad inserted in the Elizabeth Evening Times upon the payment of one-half more than is charged for the Daily Press insertion alone. Thus, if an advertisement in the Daily Press costs forty cents, the same advertisement may be placed in the Elizabeth paper for an additional twenty cents.

The Elizabeth Evening Times has a circulation of 9,000 and is widely distributed throughout Union County. Thus if an advertiser places his advertisement in the Plainfield Daily Press and Elizabeth Evening Times he places it before the eyes of thousands of readers at a very small cost.

Most advertisers welcome the opportunity to attract the attention of the whole county to their offerings and with the co-operation of the Elizabeth Evening Times the Plainfield Daily Press is now able to make this possible. The Elizabeth Evening Times has earned a reputation for itself as an advertising medium, especially along the classified line, and it is a well known fact that its influence extends into other counties besides Union.

Do You Want a "Guest-Tenant?"

When you rent a room of your home to someone, you secure a "guest-tenant." Your "roomer" is a guest of your house, on a business basis—but still a guest, somewhat in touch with your home, and this makes it highly important that the person should be of the right sort.

In advertising a furnished room it is a simple matter to indicate that the tenant-to-be must have reasonably convincing credentials as to character. You will thus have applications from a desirable class of people while a door sign or window card would merely bring to you the chance passer-by.

LATZKO LOSES IN COUNCIL APPEAL

Borough Officials Will Not Sanction Sale of His Place.

CITIZENS IN PROTEST

Mayor Smalley Outlines Position of Council—Whiskey Man Appeals For Help in Saving His Home—Little Chance of Getting License.

The wholesale whisky business of Morris Latzko, at 27 Somerset street, is no longer wanted by North Plainfield. This was decided at a meeting of the Common Council held some time ago and last night the borough fathers refused to reconsider their action in refusing to countenance its sale.

Latzko has a license which does not expire until October, and until then he is protected by law, unless this license should be revoked by Judge Beekman, of the Somerset county court. He will not be permitted to transfer this license for a profit, however.

Pleading that it meant the loss of his property on Somerset street and loss of his farm—the only home of an invalid wife and crippled son—Latzko asked for a chance to get out of the whisky business. He said he wanted only to sell that he might save his home, and produced evidence of the good character of his customers. There is a mortgage on his borough building and another on his farm, both of which are to be foreclosed by the brewery that backed him, he told Mayor Smalley and members of the Council, and if the privilege of selling is denied both pieces of property will be grabbed, leaving his family homeless and him a broken man.

However, Latzko's misfortune dates back beyond his troubles with Mayor Smalley and others in charge of the borough affairs. He admitted this when questioned by Councilman Milne, and said that the brewery had started to foreclose on its mortgages a year before he ran afoul of the Borough Council. A representative of the brewery that holds the mortgage was quoted last night as saying that whatever the decision of the Council "Latzko was through."

Mayor "Bill" Smalley summed up the position of the borough when he stepped from his chair and walked over to where he could look Latzko in the face, saying:

"I don't think Latzko is a fit man to run that place, or any other place. Anyway the borough does not need that wholesale house. It would be

FREDERICK S. LYNN WEDS MISS UMSTEAD

Ceremony Performed at Home of Bride's Parents by Rev. Henry R. Rose.

Miss Gertrude May Umstead, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Umstead, of Harrison, and Frederick S. Lynn, secretary of boys' work at the Young Men's Christian Association, this city, were married Wednesday evening at the home of the bride's parents by Rev. Henry R. Rose, pastor of the Church of the Redeemer, Newark.

The bride wore a gown of imported Japanese crepe, carrying a bouquet of bridal roses and lilies of the valley. She was attended by her sister, Miss Deborah Umstead, as bridesmaid, and Harrison Lynn, brother of the bridegroom, acted as best man. The wedding march was played by Miss Helen J. Van Houten, and G. Benjamin Schuarr, baritone soloist, sang. The bridesmaids carried pink roses.

After a reception and collation Mr. and Mrs. Lynn left on a wedding tour of three weeks, after which they will make their home in this city.

Although Mr. Lynn has been connected with the Y. M. C. A. here for a short time, he has made many friends and has had remarkable success in his work among the boys of the city. He is active in the work of the Park Avenue Baptist church, where he is a regular attendant.

HARTRIDGE GRADS GIVEN DIPLOMAS

Six Young Women Are Honored at the Commencement Exercises Today.

LAVISH DECORATIONS

Rev. Dr. A. V. V. Raymond Makes Fine Address to 1916 Class—Alumnae Meeting and Presentation of "Twelfth Night" Features.

Impressive commencement exercises were held this morning in the Hartridge School auditorium, when the following young women received their diplomas: Miss Sarah Virginia Carvalho, Miss Louise Earle, Miss Frances Keyo Tetsuka, Miss Barbara Hegeman Van Vliet, all of Plainfield; Miss Lucille Martin, of Louisville, Kentucky, and Miss Margaret Elgar Miller, of Wilmington, Delaware. The procession was formed at 11 o'clock and was composed of the academic department, the graduates, members of the faculty, the speakers of the day and a number of the alumnae. The academic department and the alumnae occupied the central portion of the auditorium while the graduates gowned in white led the procession to the stage, which was banked in wide profusion with spring flowers. The speakers, who sat immediately back of the graduates, wore caps and gowns. Four alumnae acted as ushers for the scores of relatives and friends who thronged the auditorium.

After the opening prayer and the hymn, "Holy, Holy, Holy," Dr. Zelle presented Dr. Raymond to the audience as the speaker of the morning. Dr. Raymond is well known in Plainfield, having been the former pastor of the Trinity Reformed church. His address, which was listened to with much attention, was in part as follows:

"I welcomed the invitation that brings me here today, not only because it came from the Hartridge School, which had honored me once before in the same way, but also because it came from Plainfield, which holds a very distinctive place in my memory and in my affections. It is always a pleasure to visit the place where some of the happiest years of one's life were spent, and an added pleasure when on the occasion of such a visit one is privileged to see at one time and in one place so many faces of old friends as I see before me now.

"I will call the first 'the habit of open-mindedness.' This is a rare virtue, although there are probably few people present who do not claim to possess it. Only now and then do we find one who frankly says: 'I do not pretend to be open-minded on any important question. I have my own way of reachings my conclusions, and when I have once made up my mind, the subject is closed as far as I am concerned.'

"I used to have great respect for men and women of this type and still think that they are to be envied in one respect at least—the satisfaction they must feel in always being so sure of their own position, and that their own position is, of course, the only right one, for if they were not sure of that they could not be so unalterably fixed in their opinions.

"Now, while the actual membership of this 'Society of Closed Minds' is small, a multitude of people seem to be on the waiting list, judging from the positiveness of their convictions on debatable subjects, and the difficulty in getting them to admit the possibility that any other point of view than that which they have taken may be the right one, or at least as right and reasonable as their own. We have in Buffalo a daily paper that carries a department called 'The Morning's Mail.' It is made up of letters written to the editor upon all sorts of controversial subjects, ranging from petty local questions to the great European war, but the most inviting themes are of course politics and religion.

"I always feel like re-christening it 'Today's Exhibit of Closed Minds,' for it is rare indeed to find among these letters one that honestly seeks information or suggests that the writer's mind is open to either testimony or argument in contravention of the judgment already reached.

"Our manufacturing and business interests give abundant evidences of freedom of thought, willingness to change and improve methods and policies, but upon social, economic, political and religious questions, we are still as a people swayed by our prejudices or feelings, becoming violently partizan, unwilling to admit the force of opposing arguments, and apparently unable to recognize the reasonableness of any ppint of view but our own.

"Understand that I am speaking of our people in general, and showing the results of educational system in one direction only, applying the test of open-mindedness, which, as I have said, is of supreme importance where progress must be determined by the thinking of the people themselves. As a matter of fact, the direction of our educational work has been determined by certain practical interests of immediate importance and by certain ideals which have come to use from the past. We have been busy teaching the things necessary for a vocation in life, and we believe

BISHOP M'FAUL AWARDS DEGREES

Twelve Young Women Are Graduated at Mt. St. Mary College Commencement.

HONOR MEDALS GIVEN

Arthur S. Somers Vice-President of New York Board of Education, and Father R. H. Tierney, Editor of "America," Make Addresses.

After urging them to adopt and apply in their lives the principles expounded by the two speakers of the afternoon, Rt. Rev. James A. McFaul, bishop of the Diocese of Trenton, gave his official blessing to the commencement class at Mt. St. Mary College yesterday afternoon. Five candidates received the degree of Bachelor of Arts, while one special certificate and seven academic diplomas were also given. Bishop McFaul conferred these as follows: Bachelor of Arts: Miss Catherine Anastasia Cleary, South Amboy; Miss Mary Cecilia Connolly, Phillipsburg; Miss Mary Jane McCallion, Lakewood; Miss Eloise Miller, Elizabeth. Special certificate: Miss Mary Hester McCloud, Elizabeth. Academic diplomas: Miss Pearl Grace Jones, Baltimore, Maryland; Miss Alice Stella O'Donnell, Elizabeth; Miss Madeline Agnes Moonan, Bayonne; Miss Marie Elizabeth Tobin, Plainfield; Miss Pauline Teresa Watts, South Amboy; Miss Eleanor Agnes Ryno, Rahway; Miss Evelyn Wolcott, Westfield.

The commencement exercises of the college took place in the gymnasium of the building. The clergy, profesional men and the graduates proceeded thence from the main building promptly at 3 o'clock. The entire hall was attractively decorated for the occasion with the class colors of yellow and blue, while American flags were also used to a large extent.

Rev. Father Peter J. Hart, pastor of St. Joseph's church in North Plainfield, acted as master of ceremonies during the exercises, which opened with Lacomb's "Aubade, Printaniere," played by the college orchestra.

The address of the afternoon was delivered by Arthur S. Somers, vice-president of the Board of Education of New York city.

His subject was "Feminism and Its Misinterpretation." During the course of his address he besought the graduates to contribute to the world's work some of the many benefits they

ANNUAL C. E. RALLY PROGRAM ANNOUNCED

President Robert Butler Will Deliver Interesting Address as Retiring Officer.

The Plainfield Christian Endeavor Union will hold its annual rally in the Watchung Avenue Presbyterian church, formerly Warren chapel, Monday evening; President Robert B. Butler presiding. The meeting will begin promptly at 7:45 with a song service. Everybody is requested to bring their Biederwolf song books. The attendance banner will be presented to the society having the largest percentage of active members present, and the annual election of officers will take place.

The Union has been a strong unit for promoting Christian enterprise among the young people of this community. The Endeavor societies constituting the Plainfield Union, are those of Plainfield, Dunellen, New Market, Watchung, North Plainfield and Netherwood. It is wide-awake regarding the civic affairs of this city and Union county, and has kept matters of particular note before the various societies.

The annual meeting is to be truly a Christian Endeavor meeting, and will be as lively as the previous mass meetings of this year. Visitors will be welcome.

Robert B. Butler, the retiring president, will deliver the address which will be of particular interest to the young people, and one of profit to all of the Endeavorers, his subject being, "What We Stand For."

In July, 1915, Mr. Butler attended the World's Christian Endeavor Convention in Chicago and became a "life-work recruit"—that is, he volunteered to give his life to some form of definite Christian work, and is now preparing to enter the Bible Teachers' Training School, in New York city, to study for home mission work. He has been an earnest worker among the young people of the First Baptist church for a number of years.

"RINK" BUILDING TO CHANGE HANDS

Negotiations Being Completed for Sale of City's "Historic" Structure

CONSIDERATION $31,000

Former Councilman George S. Clay Said to Be the Purchaser—Building Represents An Original Outlay of $75,000.

While the parties most concerned have not given official announcement, it was learned today that negotiations have been completed for the sale of the Rink building on Watchung avenue, owned by Charles H. Hand and regarded for many years as one of Plainfield's most pretentious structures. The purchaser is understood to be former Councilman George S. Clay, and the price involved about $31,000, a figure far below the cost of the big structure when it was erected thirty-two years ago. The source of information states that the final papers will be signed within the next few days and that the deal was made on the part of the new owner purely for speculative purposes, no changes in the property being contemplated at this time.

The reported sale of the Rink property is one of the most important announcements in the local realty field in many months and will result in many Plainfielders recalling the history of the famous place. At the time the roller skating craze was at its height in this country in the early '80's, former Mayor Evans, then one of the city's wealthiest and most influential residents, decided to put up what he stated would be "the largest and handsomest skating rink in America." Charles Smith, of Grove street, was intrusted with the architectural designs and was told to spare no expense in making the structure a showy one.

The big rink was finally completed in about 1884 and represented an outlay of $75,000. People came for miles around to see it and also to view an immense electric light which stood at the top of a flagpole on a tower at the north side of the Watchung avenue frontage, since torn down. Electric lights were just coming into use at that date and the wonderful arc gave Plainfield more advertising than it has had at any one time since. The light was so powerful that it could be seen from elevated points twenty miles away and practically lighted up the city as far as ten blocks distance.

The interior of the building was made to conform with the ornate exterior, and beside the many attractions incident to roller skating, Mr. Evans had an organ installed costing many thousands of dollars. The former mayor turned the property over at its completion to his son, Clark Evans, and the latter engaged the late James Alfred Demarest, the first city editor of the Daily Press, to act as manager for the enterprise. The place had hardly more than gotten under way when the roller skating craze died as quickly as it sprang into being, and the immense structure stood as a white elephant on the hands of the owner. After a period of idleness it was sold to Charles H. Hand, who practically reconstructed the entire building. Flats were installed at various parts of the building and stores were placed on Watchung avenue. The big main audtorium was for many years used for show purposes and for the past twelve years has been occupied as a skirt factory. Mr. Clay is in the South and could not be seen for a verification of the story.

ANDREW C. THOMPSON WEDS BROOKLYN GIRL

Takes Miss Lillian F. Cureau for His Bride—Reception at Hotel McAlpin.

The marriage of Miss Lillian Frances Cureau, daughter of Mrs. E. H. Cureau, of Brooklyn, and Andrew C. Thompson, of Park avenue, this city, took place at 7:30 o'clock last evening at the Church of the Transfiguration (Little Church Around the Corner), New York city, Rev. Dr. George Houghton, the rector, officiating.

The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. John Miller, of Brooklyn, while the best man was C. E. Wiggins, of this city, brother-in-law of the bridegroom. A reception followed at the Hotel McAlpin Roof Garden, where Mr. and Mrs. Thompson received the congratulations of relatives and friends, and a wedding supper was served.

Later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Thompson left for a week's honeymoon trip through the West, and upon their return will reside at Truell Inn, on Park avenue.

The bride is well known among the younger set in Brooklyn, and has a large number of friends in this city. Mr. Thompson is also well known here, being the owner of the A. C. Thompson Auto Company, and one of the largest and most successful automobile dealers in the State.

NAMES OF HUGHES ROOT AND BURTON ARE PUT IN NOMINATION BEFORE REPUBLICAN CONVENTION AS IT ADJOURNS; ROOSEVELT MEN REFUSE TO GIVE UP

FORMER PRESIDENT THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

"Teddy to the End," is the slogan of the Roosevelt men in the Republican convention. At a meeting held this morning they refused to consider a compromise, insisting their man will win, and named a steering committee of twenty to carry on the fight on the floor of the convention.

Peace Parley Frank, Friendly and Free, But Not Fruitful.

NO SELECTION TODAY

Republicans Get Together Again at 4 O'clock This Afternoon to Receive More Nominees—Moose Are Merely Marking Time.

NO BALLOTING TODAY.

Chicago, June 9.—If the leaders can keep control of the Republican Convention there will be no balloting on the nominations today. They want another session of peace committee with the Progressive Party committee tonight.

Chicago, June 9.—Both conventions are adjourned until 4 p. m. The names of Hughes, Burton and Root have been placed in nomination before the Republican convention. The Progressives are merely marking time, waiting for action of the other body.

Conferences between peace committees from the Republican and the Progressive conventions were frank, free and friendly, but not fruitful.

Today Roosevelt supporters insist that he is the logical man to lead the Republican party and have organized for the fight on the convention floor. Hughes men still claim that [illegible] win on the third ballot at the latest.

The names of Hughes, Root and Burton have been placed before the convention, Gov. Whitman making the nominating speech for Hughes. Root won more applause from the delegates and galleries than did the Justice, although the cheering that followed his nomination lasted 21 minutes.

No word has been heard from Roosevelt. During the morning, peace waited on a move from him. He could have simplified matters a great deal had he made it known that he would eliminate himself and insist on a Progressive platform, but instead, his followers in the Republican convention were called to a conference in which it was agreed to fight for him to the end, be it bitter or sweet. It is believed that this decision was at his wish.

There is little hope of a nomination today, although an evening session, if held, may produce results. The convention meets again at 4 o'clock to hear more nominations, and may be in session until late tonight.

Peace Talk was Frank.

The peace committee of the Republican Convention reported to the convention that the conference held with a committee representing the National Progressive Convention was frank, free and friendly. The confreres were of one mind, the report said. The Progressives were unanimous in urging Roosevelt

Roosevelt Men Firm.

The Progressive Republican delegates called into session today before the G. O. P. assembled, decided to fight for Col. Roosevelt's nomination at the Coliseum. Twenty men sat as a steering committee at the session.

Whitman Names Hughes.

Governor Whitman put in nomination the name of Justice Hughes. When Arizona was reached on roll call Frank R. Steward, an alternate, objected, and it required a roll call of the delegates before the plan to have that State yield to New York could be made effective. New York was called and Chairman Harding recognized Governor Whitman. Former President Taft was given the first demonstration when Governor Whitman mentioned his name. The New York and Ohio delegations led in this movement. Upon the conclusion of Governor Whitman's speech placing the name of Justice Hughes in nomination, a demonstration started in the convention hall which lasted over twenty minutes. Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, of New York was then recognized by Speaker Harding to nominate Elihu Root, of New York.

Root's Name is Cheered.

There was a great wave of applause on the speaker's declaration of Mr. Root's name. More enthusiasm was apparent in the galleries than was shown when Hughes was named.

Willis Names Burton.

Governor Willis created laughter and applause by taking possession of the G. O. P. elephant on the stage and pinning to it a placard labeled "Ohio." He then began his address, attacking Democratic politics, both domestic and international. He outlined Mr. Burton's career in Congress and in the councils of the nation's rulers, declaring that legitimate business had nothing to fear from him, as his public record would attest.

Progressives Protect Jews.

Chicago, June 9.—By a unanimous vote the Progressive party today incorporated in its platform a direct condemnation of President Wilson's failure to protect Americans from

H. M. MANN WILL WED ON JUNE 18

Former Plainfielder to Marry a New York Girl Next Week.

The wedding of Herman M. Mann, a former Plainfielder, to Miss Jane Hitlin, of New York, will be solemnized at Temple Rodelph Sholem, Sixty-third street, New York, June 18. Invitations have been received by many friends in this city. Mr. Mann is the son of Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Mann, of Stebbins place. He was a resident of Plainfield for five years, being in business here with his brother. In 1909 he went to New Brunswick, where he bought out the grocery business of Daly Brothers. Mr. Mann was prominent in Y. M. H. A. work while here and was one of the organizers of the local association. He has visited in Plainfield often since moving to New Brunswick.

K. OF C. WILL ATTEND CORNER STONE LAYING

With the local Catholic societies, parishioners and friends of the Knights of Columbus of Union county and vicinity, delegations of every council of the K. of C. will attend and participate in the parade at Westfield on the occasion of the cornerstone laying for the new parochial school for Holy Trinity church Sunday afternoon. All societies will assemble at 2:30 at corner of Elm and North avenues. James Bate, Warden of Westfield Council, will be grand marshal. K. of C. men will report to Matthias Miller.

Holy Name Societies will report to George E. Hayes. Invited guests and visitors will report to George H. Riley. The Westfield band will lead the parade, after which the ceremonies will be held. Monsignor Mackel, of Elizabeth, will represent the Bishop of the diocese; Reverend F. S. McHugh will deliver the spiritual address and the educational and patriotic address will be given by Port State Deputy of the Knights of Columbus Edward J. Sweeney of Bayonne.

The citizens are requested to decorate their homes with American flags. The town council, as well as many prominent non-Catholics and Catholic neighbors will be present; also visiting clergy from nearby parishes. The energetic and beloved pastor, Reverend H. J. Watterson, will welcome the many visitors, and no doubt will mark the most successful beginning of higher education for Catholic families of this section.

LEAL'S SCHOOL GRADUATES FOUR

Final Commencement Exercises Under Present Name Held This Morning.

FOUNDER IS HONORED

Retiring Principal, John Leal, Presented With Purse by Faculty and Close Personal Friends—Awards Made.

The annual and last commencement exercises of Leal's School, under the direction of John Leal, who has conducted the institution for thirty-four years, was held at the school on West Front street this morning, when the parents and friends of the students were present. There was an evident feeling of regret over the retirement of Mr. Leal, who throughout his career here has aided in the education of nearly one thousand students. There were frequent cheers for Mr. Leal and those present joined in giving him an expression of their goodwill and appreciation for the past. He was also the recipient of a purse from his close friends.

Mr. Leal made a short address marking his retirement, in which he emphasized the importance of education. He gave the boys good advice and extended his best wishes for the future success of the school. This year's graduating class comprised four young men—George E. Greenleaf, who goes to Princeton; Gano Larsson, who goes to Boston Tech., and Frederick D. Wilson and Earick Parmly, who will engage in business.

Honors were awarded by Mr. Leal as follows: Chemistry, George E. Greenleaf; algebra, Reginald Bulkley; all subjects in his class, Percy A. Evans, English history, Benson Ball and Henry Mygatt.

In the future the school will be continued by C. D. Wardlaw, who was Mr. Leal's assistant. The new location will be on Park avenue near Randolph road, where the school will be conducted on a larger scale. Mr. Leal was graduated from Yale in the early '70's and soon afterward came to Plainfield, where for thirty-four years he has continued to exercise a wide influence.

DUNELLEN

All the Happenings of the Day in Plainfield's Hustling Suburb.

IMPORTANT REALTY DEAL IN DUNELLEN PROPERTY

One of the most important realty deals in this borough this year was put through by Real Estate Agent John Fedderman several days ago, when Wihlem Lockenvitz traded what is known as the Hetfield block, which takes in the buildings from the public library to Handleman's tailor shop, inclusive, to John P. Fenner for a cash consideration and the following property: Two-story dwelling on First street near Jackson avenue, the property consisting of two lots and a house on the southwesterly corner of Washington avenue and Penfield place.

Mrs. Firman H. Gise, who has been ill this week, is improved.

Everett Gordon, of New Market road, has been visiting in Hampton.

William H. Taylor is suffering from an attack of eye trouble.

Louis Watts has resigned his position in Zeek's Plainfield bakery.

WILL RESIDE HERE.

Mrs. Louise Benward, widow of the late Peter Benward, whose property was sold at auction last Thursday, will make her home in this borough with her daughter, Mrs. Henry S. Garretson.

THREE CHEERS FOR COLONEL.

Mrs. Delia L. Hogan, a local musician, has composed a new topical song which she has entitled, "Three Cheers for Colonel Roosevelt."

Miss Mary Ryan has returned from a visit of several weeks at New London, Conn.

Councilman Earle M. Jones has been spending the week at Hot Springs, Va.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Henry Smith, of Front street, are entertaining Mr. Smith's sister, Mrs. William H. Crawford, of Bridgeport, Conn.

Samuel Van Arsdale attended the funeral of a relative at Lyon's farm today.

Mrs. G. Elston Lowrie and child, of New London, Conn., are visiting Councilman and Mrs. Richard M. Ryan.

P. O. of A MEET.

The semi-monthly meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary, P. O. of A., will be held in W. G. Holton Hall this evening.

RETURN TO BOROUGH.

Robert Perrine and family have moved back to the borough from Plainfield, where they moved only ten days ago.

MADE BIG CATCH.

Eugene R. Smilley, the hardware man, put in a day fishing in Delaware Bay yesterday, returning with a big mess of fish.

WANT TO CLOSE THURSDAYS.

Abe Victorson, the shoe merchant, is circulating a petition for the merchants to close on Thursday afternoons during July and August. All but two of the merchants have affixed their signatures to the petition to date, and it is expected that they will shortly fall in line.

Raymond Tynan has sold his automobile and purchased a motorcycle.

Miss Frances Fuchs, who has submitted to two operations for ear trouble, is doing satisfactorily at her home.

Allison Trust, who had his tonsils removed in the Muhlenburg Hospital, Tuesday morning, is doing fine.

The Levgar Structural Company has put on a night force of sixteen men at its plant in this place, which is rushed with work.

Heaward Willis, of New Market, has taken a position with George A. Schenck, the iceman.

OVERSHADOWS POLITICS.

Interest in the race for the pennant of the City League has reached such a pitch in the borough that the question of the hour here is—not whom will be nominated at the G. O. P. convention, but whether it will clear off in time to permit the staging of the game between the locals and the First Baptists at Maurer Oval at 3:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. Dilts, the North Plainfield High phenom, and "Hub" Stine, a college catcher, will do the battery work for the First Baptists, while McLaughlin and Bergen will be in the points for the locals.

Scotch Plains, Fanwood

AGAINST SMALL BOARD.

The township and borough seem to be solidly against the proposed small Board of Freeholders, and several petitions are being circulated about. When the idea becomes a reality this place will be without any representation at all.

A meeting of the Borough Board of Health has been called for next Tuesday night in the Fanwood firehouse.

MEETING POSTPONED.

The meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Episcopal church that was postponed from Wednesday was held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Ernest Kieb, of North avenue.

RETURNS FROM VASSAR.

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Becken, of North avenue, have returned from attending the commencement exercises at Vassar College, Miss Dorothy Becken being one of the graduates.

Mr. and Mrs. George Kuehn, of Park avenue, are the parents of a young son.

MISS BETTMAN A GUEST.

Miss Carrie Bettman, of East Orange, is visiting friends in the borough, where she was postmistress for over twenty years until the time of retiring shortly over a year ago.

Harry Carter is detained at his home on North avenue by illness.

SOJOURNING IN THE SOUTH.

Several local residents have heard from Mr. and Mrs. John Kyte, who are spending their wedding trip on an automobile trip through the South. Until her marriage last Saturday Mrs. Kyte was Miss Helen Johnston, of Brooklyn. On their return the couple will reside in the borough.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist church is making arrangements for the strawberry festival and parcel post social in Excelsior Hall on the night of June 20.

South Plainfield.

The regular instructions for the first communion class of the Sacred Heart church will be held tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock.

The condition of Thomas Saverd, who is ill at his home, is reported as much improved.

Christopher Welgin, of Plainfield, has moved his famiy into the bungalow recently vacated by Edward Norman.

Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Teeple are entertaining their aunt, Mrs. J. Foster, of Perth Amboy.

Benjamin Messenger is spending the week-end with his relatives in Tamaqua, Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Randolph have been entertaining Mrs. Randolph's brother, William Bohl, of Newark, for a few days.

Miss Minnie Miller, of Orange, has gone to her home after being the guest of Miss May Purchess for a few days.

Charles Brantingham and Michael Pomponio, the local carpenters, are making extensive alterations around Louis Lipshitz' hotel.

WARREN TOWNSHIP VOTERS HOLD ANNUAL ELECTION

The votesr of lighting district No. 1, of Warren township, at the annual election on Tuesday elected Edward E. Cooper, Rev. George Hauser and William Kirch as light commissioners, the last two named succeeding Alfred E. Binz and William H. Rogers. The sum of $2,500 was appropriated for lights for the coming year, an increase of $[illegible] In district No. 2 there was no vote, 29 votes being cast on both sides. The sum of $800 was named for the light appropriation. Another election will be necessary.

STRAWBERRY FESTIVAL GIVEN AT NETHERWOOD CHURCH

The Netherwood Reformed church welcomed a crowd of people last evening to the strawberry festival, given by the Ladies' Aid Society. This was the first entertainment given in the recreation rooms in the new church, and in spite of the rain the place was filled to its utmost capacity. The basement of the new building has been planned for affairs of this kind, with a large hall and a commodious kitchen, providing abundant space and convenient arrangements for the social work of the church.

A feature of the evening was the gay-colored Italian peasant costumes of the waitresses and the girls who sold poppies, the costumes being loaned for the occasion by John Wanamaker, of New York. The affair was a brilliant success in every respect and an indication of the successful work of the church. The chairman of the committee was Mrs George H. Merkle. The president of the society is Mrs. P. A. Nielsen. Assisting were the following:

Cake table, Mrs. Emil Pierson, Mrs. Horace Adams, Mrs. Everett Marsh; candy, Mrs. E. W. Hugnes, Mrs. W. H Morris; poppy booth, Mrs. H. M. Burkey, Mrs Telfer, Mrs. Edward S. Ralston; fishpond, Edward Pierson; ice cream, Mrs. J. R. Wooster, Mrs. P. A. Nielsen, Homer Scruton, James Carson; tickets, Mrs C. Hansen; poppy girls, Myrtle Townley, Claire Scruton, Mabel Drake, Florence Drake, Elsie Saunders, Dorothy Adams; waitresses, Jean Reid, Martha Reid, Nan Hughes, Naomi Fritts, Lena Woodworth.

OLD PARTY OFFERS FEW CONCESSIONS

Second Place on Ticket May Go to Johnson.

MOOSE WILL NOT ACCEPT

Vice Presidency For Progressives, Old Guard's Last Stand—Can't Drop Hughes In Fear of Colonel—Life of Progressive Party Hangs on Decision, Moose Demand For T. R.

Chicago, June 9.—Following are the committees appointed by the Republican and Progressive conventions to confer on platform, candidate and compromise:

Republican.—Senator Reed Smoot of Utah, ex-Senator W. Murray Crane of Massachusetts, Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler of New York and ex-Congressman A. R. Johnson of Ohio.

Progressive.—George W. Perkins of New York, Governor Hiram Johnson of California, Horace S. Wilkinson of Syracuse, N. Y.; Charles J. Bonaparte of Maryland and John M. Parker of Louisiana.

Fateful Decision.

Upon the result of this conference depends unquestionably the continued existence of the Progressive party, while in all probability the outcome of the next presidential election will be determined by the decision reached.

The conference is the result of an invitation extended formally by the Progressive convention.

Is that invitation an intimation of surrender? Or is it merely indicative of a purpose on the part of the Progressives to keep clear and straight the record of their desire for harmony, though their ultimate action may be defiant nomination of Colonel Roosevelt?

That question no one can at the moment answer.

Three days ago a resolution suggesting such a conference was prepared on behalf of the Republicans by Nicholas Murray Butler and summarily squelched by leaders. They did not wish the movement to proceed from a Republican source. Moreover, they felt that time would put the Progressives in a more suppliant mood. The event proved them right.

The Republican leaders were obviously prepared for the reception of this invitation. Senator Smoot immediately on its presentation moved the appointment of the committee, and the chairman was at once ready with the names.

Headed by Senator Smoot, the committee includes ex-Senator Crane of Massachusetts and President Butler of Columbia university. They are extreme reactionaries and bitterly opposed to Roosevelt. Borah is progressive, but has tied himself closely by expressions and acts to Hughes.

Johnson is an unknown quantity, a Burton delegate so far as that goes, but presumably, like all the Burton delegates, looking around for a more hopeful place in which to invest his vote.

G. O. P. Conferees Want Hughes.

What this committee wants is the nomination of Hughes by both conventions. There are only too many intimations that the Progressive committee will meet them in a spirit of surrender, although the Progressive convention may rebel.

Theoretically, the conference is for the purpose of mutual concession and harmony. But what have the Republicans left to concede? The supreme concession, of course, would be the nomination of Roosevelt. Few, however, even among the Progressives, have any hope of so great a surrender.

So far as the platform is concerned it has been adopted by the Republicans. It is reactionary in its character. It is even insultingly hostile to women voters in its suffrage plank, which first proclaimed the justice of their cause and then dismissed it exactly as state rights Democrats have in the past, with the statement that it is the subject exclusively of state legislation.

The plank on military training provides for voluntary instead of universal training. The foreign relation plank is evasive and the Mexican plank inconclusive. The peroration devoted to Americanism is but a faint echo of the vigorous expressions of Colonel Roosevelt upon that vital subject.

Virtually nothing in the Republican platform will appeal to Progressives. Moreover, it is finally adopted and cannot be used as an inducement to harmonious action.

In the second place, the old guard cannot surrender Hughes and deliver his strength to any other Republican candidate on the plea that harmony will thus be attained. Any attempt to do this would probably result in the nomination of Roosevelt.

All these considerations make any harmonious co-operation between the two parties improbable. It is an open secret that the Republicans regard the Progressives' willingness to confer as a plain intimation of a complete surrender.

The story is even current that the Progressive committee will agree to the nomination of Hughes, and even that Colonel Roosevelt himself will come to make a speech in his behalf before the Coliseum convention.

If you are a student of the "ads" you KNOW WHAT IT OUGHT TO COST.

The spot-light of full publicity, turned on a store, reveals and places in that full light a store's defects—if it have defects. For example: If high prices prevail, or lines of goods are not kept up to date, the reader of the store advertisements knows it. It follows that advertising "pays" the store that renders real service—and would not pay the other kind of a store.

COMEDIES PLEASE LARGE AUDIENCE

Excellent Entertainment Given Under Auspices of Public Recreation Committee.

MONOLOGUE A FEATURE

Miss Pauline Gates Presents "Her First Pudding"—Miss Josephine Bonghan, Contralto, Favors With Three Selections.

The entertainment given in the new Evergreen Avenue School auditorium last night proved to be a thorough success from every point of view and the large audience was more than pleased with the efforts of the various participants. As a result of the affair, the Public Recreation committee will gain a substantial sum to add to its fund for the work of the committee.

The program of the evening opened with the presentation of the one-act sketch, "Other People's Money," in which the following took part: Hutchinson Hopper, Horace Bunker; Oliver Starbird, Everett Case; Mrs. Hutchinson Hopper, Miss Beatrice Cottrell, and Marjorie Hopper, Miss Mary Simmons. Each member was warmly applauded at the conclusion. The story of the play was amusing throughout and Everett Case's match of wits with "Hutchinson Hopper," impersonated by Horace Bunker, kept the audience in a roar of laughter throughout the entire performance. By following Mr. Hutchinson's advice, Oliver Bunker elopes with the girl he loves and thereby gains both the girl of his desire and a million dollars with her. In the end, Hutchinson receives a letter telling him that the girl with whom he has eloped is his own daughter. After much storming on the part of both Mr. and Mrs. Hutchinson, the young couple are forgiven and received into the parental home. Miss Simmons and Miss Cottrell were both especially capable in their respective parts.

During the intermission, Miss Josephine Bonghan, contralto soloist of the Church of the Intercession of New York City, sang three vocal selections: Tosti's "Goodbye," "A Perfect Day" and "The Little Grey Home in the West." Miss Bonghan possesses a voice of unusual quality and her renditions last evening were enthusiastically received. The last-named song was an encore number.

Miss Pauline Gates, a graduate of the Plainfield High School with the Class of 1913, made her first appearance here since her graduation in a monologue entitled "Her First Pudding." Miss Gates has been developing her natural histronic ability at the Sargent School of Dramatic Art in New York city for some time, and her delivery last night was especially commendable. Taking the part of the wife who has made her first pudding from a recipe, she gives the conversation that follows at the meal with her husband, who criticizes her efforts.

The entertainment was concluded with two recitals given by Miss Lillian Lamson, supervisor of the recreation work in this city. Miss Lamson recited the scenes from "The Dawn of Tomorrow" in a fashion that is inimitable and portrayed the London slum characters in a perfect manner. Her other number was a dialogue entitled "Her Silent Sister," in which Charles L. Lewis took the part of the husband. The latter enacted his part of the program in pantomime.

Above is shown the emblem of the Business Men's Association of Plainfield. About seventy merchants of this city are members of the organization, and most of them display this emblem in a conspicuous position on their windows. It stands, however, for more than mere membership in a commercial body. It stands for business honesty, and it is displayed by the merchants in this city who believe that honesty and fair dealing is worth more to them than any temporary advantage which may be gained by taking short cuts which others think brand them as "shrewd." The emblem will never be found on the window of a "fly-by-night" store that comes here for a few weeks or months to take advantage of holiday trade. The store in front of which this emblem is displayed is not here for a few days. It has probably been under the same management for years, and will continue under that management. It is a guarantee that if you have purchased anything in the store which displays it, and you are dissatisfied, you can go back at any time and have any reasonable complaint properly and courteously attended to.

There are many reasons which can be presented in favor of trading in Plainfield. The emblem shown above is the best one of all. The stores which display it are the ones where purchasers are assured of honest values, for every member knows that he will be taken to task by the others if he tries any shady merchandising methods. Perhaps you will say "that sounds all well enough in an advertisement, but they do not practice what they preach." If any reader of this has any doubt that the members of this organization are not jealous of the emblem, it can quickly be dispelled by attending any regular meeting. The frankness with which the business men discuss each other's faults will no doubt be surprising, but it is just that frankness which is making the business men of Plainfield, allied with this organization, strive to be fair to the public in every way. The meetings are held the 1st Monday of every month in Coward's Hall, on Park avenue, and visitors are always welcome. Our members are given a chance to get acquainted with many of the people of the city, and the kicker is made more welcome than the fellow who is easily satisfied, and comes out of mere curiosity. We know that we can all benefit from what the kicker says, for nine times out of ten his kick is a just one.

"But who are the members of the Business Men's Association?" perhaps you will ask. That is a fair question, for it is only for the members of this organization that these advertisements speak. In the next talk the names of every firm will appear.

WET WEATHER POSTPONES INDIAN LEGEND PERFORMANCE

Owing to the wet weather prevailing the past few days, the committee in charge of the presentation of the Indian Legend at Watchung has announced that it will be impossible to give any performance tonight. Provided the weather is clear all day tomorrow the initial performance will be given at night and the second one on Monday. Tickets purchased for the original dates will be good for any performance.

In the event of rain tomorrow, the performances will be given Monday and Tuesday, and if it should so happen that the elements persist in holding up the spectacle the first date will be the night of the first day that is clear. This is only the second time in the six years that "One Feather" Anderson and his associates in the big outdoor production have been completed to postpone the opening performance because of inclement weather.

GRADUATES GIVEN DIPLOMAS

this. My contention concerns not what we have done but what we have left undone.

"You are not to infer that I deny the value or necessity of positive convictions. No man or woman is entitled to any consideration as a force for righteousness who has not profound faith in some cause that seems to represent righteousness, but such faith need not be intolerant of opposition, nor unmindful of the measure of righteousness which such opposition represents.

"One of the most evident things about the controversy over woman's suffrage is the closed minds of the champions on both sides of the question. To the suffragist nothing of real value can be accomplished without the ballot. To the anti-suffragist, nothing of real value can be accomplished with the ballot. To the one woman is now a slave; to the other, woman is now the freest of the free. This inability or unwillingness to see the other side of the question antagonizes more than it wins, as one of my friends expressed it the other day—'Whenever I listen to a suffragist I feel obliged to become an anti, and whenever I listen to an anti-suffragist, I am sure that I am a suffragist.'

"Young women of the graduating class, I have spoken in general terms, but in all that I have said I have had you especially in mind. You have been favored with special advantages as students here, and hereafter will be expected to show in practical ways the value of all that you have received. Whatever may be your activities, may I ask you to remember the alue to yourselves and to others—first, of habitual open-mindedness, and then of that moderation in all things that will give the greatest strength to your character and the farthest reach to your influence. Avoid all extremes in feeling, manner, speech, for they cost more than they yield, and so tend to impoverish rather than enrich life."

Following the address, Miss Hartridge presented the diplomas to the graduates and addressed them with a few remarks. The school and audience then sang: "Lord of all being throned afar," and Dr. Zelie pronounced the benediction. At the conclusion of the exercises an informal reception was held for the students and Dr. Raymond in the school parlors.

This afternoon an alumnae meeting will be held at the recitation hall and immediately afterwards the school will give Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night" in the auditorium. This evening, Miss Hartridge will give a dance in honor of the senior class.

Miss Carvalho and Miss Van Vliet will enter Vassar College in September and Miss Martin will go to Smith College. Miss Earle will attend the Mount Vernon Seminary in Washington, D. C., and Miss Tetsuka is planning to specialize in art. Miss Miller will spent next winter at her home in Wilmington.

TOLD BY THREE FIGURES.

A Sum In Arithmetic That Would Take Many Lifetimes to Work Out.

What is the highest number that can be expressed with only three figures? Such is the question put by the Journal of the Astronomical Society of England. At first glance it would seem that the number was 999. But it is nothing of the sort; 999 is far away too small. What, then, is the number? 9^9—that is to say, the ninth power of 9.

To ascertain what this number actually is we must refer to a table of logarithms, for it would take several lifetimes to do the multiplication. The number contains 369,693,100 figures. To write it out we should have to fill 23 volumes of 800 pages each, with 14,000 figures to a page, and the number would be greater than that of all the atoms in creation.

Henri Coupin points out in La Nature that there are stars so distant that their light, traveling at 186,320 miles a second, takes a million years to reach the earth. Astronomers have taken this as a unit and called it a "million light year." The number of atoms in a sphere of platinum that had that radius would be 225, followed by 88 zeros. Now, a sphere that contained the number of atoms expressed by the ninth power of the ninth power of 9 would have to have a radius (in million light years) of 1,230, followed by 123,231,000 zeros.

And yet this colossal number can be expressed by three figures.

Anything on the Menu That Didn't Tempt His Dainty Taste Was Passed to Them, but When His Favorite Dish Came on It Was All His Very Own.

During his residence in the Kongo town of San Salvador John H. Weeks had many strange experiences, which he relates in his book, "Among the Primitive Bakongo," but one of the most entertaining pictures that he draws of the strange habits and customs of the people depicts the king, whose naivete and childish guilelessness are in strong contrast to the characteristics of his European contemporaries.

Occasionally, says Mr. Weeks, we invited him to dinner, and the piece de resistance was a sucking pig, which in those days we could buy for a shilling's worth of cloth or beads. Although his house was 400 yards away, he always came in his state hammock, carried by six of his headmen. Fortunately the headmen were strong and in the prime of life; otherwise the king's weight would have taxed them too much.

The hammock was of native cotton, grown, dyed and woven in a neighboring village. It was covered with red cloth adorned with tassels and bells, and a canopy was arranged to shield the rider from the sun. As there were no clocks in the palace, we asked our guest to come at sunset, and no sooner was the sun below the horizon than we heard the shouts of the people as they accompanied the king's hammock to the station.

As he got nearer we could hear the tinkling of the ferret bells on the hammock, the hurried, heavy breathing of the hammock carriers and their short, sharp sentences of direction to one another. They were not at all sorry to lower the hammock at our door, where we stood ready to receive and welcome him, who, although black, had come in the most kingly manner he knew and was certainly very dignified in most of his ways and words.

The boys quickly put the dinner on the table, and the king eyed every dish hungrily. I said to him one day when I was visiting him in his courtyard and we were both in a joking mood, "Do you know what the poorer class of English boys do when they are invited to a feast?"

"No," he said. And as he saw me hesitate he asked, "Well, what do they do?"

"Why, they eat very little all day," I replied, "so as to have plenty of room for the feast."

The old man rolled with laughter, snapped his fingers, slapped his thighs, and tears came from his eyes as he said: "Why, white man, that is what I do, but I did not know that anybody else was cute enough to think of that. But, Mfumu Weeksi, I am smarter than those white boys, for I don't eat anything all day when I am coming to take dinner with you at sunset." After that I could understand the hungry look in his eyes as he watched the dishes put on the table.

Native provisions of all kinds were very cheap, and by sacrificing one or two tins of preserved goods we were generally successful in working out a menu of six or seven single courses. Soup made of fowl and goat bones, with odd bits of meat and seasoning, a tin of fresh herrings baked or fried, a roast fowl, stewed goat, roast suckling pig and baked rice pudding with stewed papaws were our dishes. Our drinks were lime juice made from fresh limes and coffee grown in the district.

The king would squat on the ground, with a row of five or six favorite wives immediately behind him and the six headmen who carried the hammock standing against the wall. The king would take a few spoonfuls of soup and pass the rest down with a piece of bread to his waiting wives, who would quickly and quietly finish them.

The fish he would eat all up, because it came from the white man's country, while the wives pouted their disappointment. We would give him a liberal share of the fowl, but that was so common that after he had selected the best pieces the rest was finished by the expectant wives.

Goat came next, but was treated with as scant courtesy as that bestowed on the fowl, and meanwhile the old man would turn his eyes repeatedly toward the roasted pig.

When at last that was put before us we piled his plate with a liberal portion, which rapidly disappeared, while all the time his wives were making mouths in the semidarkness. He would grunt assent to more when we asked him, and again we would load his plate. It was the moment for which he had lived all the long hours of that day, for he had heard that the white man had bought a pig for dinner.

Farcical Roles.

An American actor of versatile talents was asked recently what type or role is most difficult to play. "The farcical," he answered. "To enact farce successfully one must play with deadly seriousness. Half the effect is gone once you begin to act your part lightly. The constant strain to maintain this mock seriousness is, of course, exhausting, since you have no outlet for your emotions."

NOT ADOLPH DE LEEUW WHO LIVES IN PLAINFIELD

The Adolph De Leeuw arraigned in New York yesterday on a charge of having attempted to sell a German diplomatic secret to the English attache, is not the man of that name who lives at 1024 Park avenue, Plainfield. The local man is several years older than the Dutchman in the New York case. This name is very common in Holland. Mr. De Leeuw, who lives here, is a merchanical engineer connected with the Singer plant at Elizabeth port.

CHILDREN'S DAY PROGRAM AT SABBATH SCHOOL TOMOROW

Elaborate exercises in observance of Children's Day will be conducted by the Seventh-Day Baptist church Sabbath school tomorrow morning, under the direction of Mrs. Nathan E. Lewis, superintendent of the primary department, who also arranged the program. She will be assisted by Mrs. Frank J. Hubbard, who has charge of the music in that department. A feature of the program, which is to include anthem, recitations and musical numbers, will be an address by Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, of Watchung, who is well known to Plainfield audiences, and whose presence is especially desired at affairs of this nature. The program in detail is as follows:

Processional, "Onward, Christian Soldiers;" anthem, choir; hymn, "The Summer Days Are Come Again;" recitation, "Welcome," Anna Frances Wells; exercise, "God is Love," Mrs. N. E. Lewis' class; song, "The Dandelion," Ruth Constance Shaw, Donald Earle Lewis; exercise, "Messages from Nature," classes of Miss Rogers and Miss Titsworth; song, "Happy Are the Meadow," primary department; recitation, "The Three Flags," Miss St. John's class; prayer, Associate Superintendent Dr. Henry M. Maxson; recitation, "The Two Pennies," John Reed Spicer; offertory, for the Endeavor societies; hymn, "I Think When I Read that Sweet Story of Old," congregation; address, Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton; hymn, "The Wise May Bring Their Learning," congregation; benediction, Rev. Dr. Eaton.

N. P. H. S. SENIORS GIVEN BANQUET BY THE JUNIORS

The true spirit of North Plainfield High School prevailed last evening, when the members of the senior class were the guests of the class of 1917 in the annual banquet given in honor of the fourth-year classmen at the First Methodist church. With the Parent-Teacher Association in charge, the supper was excellent.

After the repast, the remainder of the program proved most interesting, the time being spent in speechmaking, various members of the two classes and the faculty participating in this diversion. Oscar Dilts, presiding as toastmaster, called upon the following pupils: Clifford Causbrook, Vincent La Porte, Alfred Seidel, John Dawe, Charles Roll and Warren Townley, while Miss Barnard, Mr. Earley, Mr. Aungst and Dr. Krebs responded for the faculty. Dr. Cooley, president of the Board of Education, gave a most interesting speech dealing on reminiscences of his boyhood which provoked much mirth. For putting his audiences into hysterics, Mr. Earley can be placed among the front ranks, he keeping his listeners in an uproar by his amusing remarks. Mr. Aungst selected the spirit of North Plainfield High School, and elaborated upon this essential of high school life which is so prevalent among borough students.

Concluding the program, a dance was held in the Harrison avenue school, to which a large part of the body adjoined. The committee in charge comprised Katharine Buttings, Lillian Spencer, Robert Daly and Andrew McDonough.

READ THIS BEFORE VOTING.

While there is much being said about the change in the county government from a large to a small Board of Freeholders, the following presentment, made by the Grand Jury, may be of interest to the readers of the Daily Press. It is being used by the opponents as an argument in favor of throwing the present large board out of office, and substituting a small group of men elected at large, for the places:

"III.—That the sworn statements presented from month to month in the case of the county clerk did not comply with the law in that they were not itemized, as required by law, but were simply a statement of the total cash receipts for each day.

"IV.—That the Board of Chosen Freeholders under the law has full and complete power to make by-laws, ordinances and regulations, such as seem necessary, convenient and expedient, for the government of the county's affairs, and that it has full and complete power to regulate and control the conduct of such officers as are elected by it; to wit: the COUNTY COLLECTOR AND COUNTY AUDITOR.

"V.—That the Board of Chosen Freeholders may by rule, ordinance or resolution, require all public officers in and for the county to render unto them a true account of all moneys, or property, which they shall receive or be entrusted with for the use of the county, and are further empowered to have such officers render unto them from time to time a true account of any money which may be due the State, which such officers may have received, and that the BOARD OF CHOSEN FREEHOLDERS HAS AMPLE AND COMPLETE POWER and is chargeable with the duty of supervising the acts, NOT ONLY OF OFFICERS ELECTED BY THEM, BUT OF ALL SUCH COUNTY OFFICIALS ELECTED BY THE PEOPLE, who have entrusted to them funds due the County of Union.

"VI.—At this juncture in our investigation it became important to ascertain what the Board of Chosen Freeholders had done, if anything, by way of rules and regulations for the conduct of county officials entrusted with public moneys. HERE WE FOUND A STRANGE SITUATION. There never was provided since the beginning of this county in the year 1857 an index to the records of that important body.

"VII.—Continuing our investigation as best we could under the circumstances, we found that the Board of Chosen Freeholders, NOTWITHSTANDING ITS AUTHORITY AND DUTY IN THIS RESPECT, HAD NOT PASSED ANY RULES OR REGULATIONS OR ADOPTED ANY SYSTEM OR METHOD OF ACCOUNTING FOR THE GOVERNMENT OF THE COUNTY REGISTER, SHERIFF, SURROGATE OR COUNTY CLERK, BUT THAT EACH OF THESE OFFICIALS WAS LEFT TO THE SELECTION OF HIS OWN SYSTEM OF ACCOUNTING.

"VIII.—That in 1910 a County Auditor was elected and served WITHOUT BOND FOR THE FAITHFUL PERFORMANCE OF HIS DUTY OF THREE YEARS and until his re-election in 1913, when he was required to and did give such bond, and, that although the STATUTE UNDER WHICH HE WAS ELECTED PROVIDED THAT HE SHALL EXERCISE SUPERVISION OVER THE EXPENDITURES AND RECEIPTS OF MONEYS COLLECTED BY THE COLLECTOR OF SAID COUNTY, THE BOARD OF CHOSEN FREEHOLDERS seemed to be unacquainted with the fact for it does not appear that he had such supervision.

"IX.—That the auditor was utterly unacquainted with his duties and never had them explained to him, and that he entered upon the discharge of his office WITHOUT RULE OR REGULATION, GUIDANCE OR INFORMATION FOR THE FIRST THREE YEARS, but that on May 22, 1913, the ONLY RULE OR REGULATION EVER ADOPTED BY THE BOARD OF CHOSEN FREEHOLDERS FOR THE GOVERNMENT OF ANY COUNTY OFFICIAL WAS PASSED, BUT AFFECTED ONLY THE COUNTY AUDITOR. These rules imposed greater duties upon the auditor than expressed in the statute creating the office and were evidently enacted under the general powers of the Board of Freeholders; but evidenced a lack of understanding of the statute law creating the office and defining his duties in that they sought to minimize the duty 'of exercising supervision over the expenditures and receipts of money by the county collector' by language, to wit: 'He shall assist the committee to settle with the county collector in auditing the collector's book.'

"X.—We report further that although the BOARD OF CHOSEN FREEHOLDERS KNEW THAT THE OFFICE OF COUNTY CLERK WAS THE ONLY ONE THAT WAS NOT OPERATED UPON A PAYING BASIS IT DID NOTHING TO INVESTIGATE OR INQUIRE INTO THE REASON THEREFOR, notwithstanding it had FULL AND COMPLETE POWER UNDER THE LAW to appoint a committee to examine and inspect any books, accounts, vouchers or documents in the possession or under the control of any officer relating to the affairs or interests of the county, to subpoena witnesses, and administer oaths, all of which could have been done upon application, by the director of the board, to any judge of the Circuit Court of the county, to make an order awarding process of subpoena out of said court for witnesses to appear and testify before such committee.

"XI.—That there has been no RULE OR REGULATION, adopted by the Board of Chosen Freeholders, making for UNIFORMITY OF ACCOUNTING OR, IN FACT, ANY KIND OF ACCOUNTING ON THE PART OF SUCH OFFICIALS AS ARE ENTRUSTED WITH COUNTY FUNDS, and no rule or regulation prescribing the manner and method of examining and auditing of such accounts, and that the county auditor has been permitted to select his own system of audit, which consisted ONLY OF ADDING AND SUBTRACTING FIGURES AS THEY APPEARED UPON THE BOOKS AS THEY WERE PRESENTED TO HIM FOR AUDIT.

"XII.—WE FEEL THAT THE DEFALCATION IN THE COUNTY CLERK'S OFFICE WAS PRIMARILY DUE TO LACK OF SYSTEM AND NON-COMPLIANCE WITH EXISTING LAW.

TURNING THE LIGHT ON ROAD PROBLEMS.

The commission recently named by Governor Fielder to study the road problem has decided to conduct a campaign of publicity.

It wants to get all the facts bearing upon the road question that are available, and it has gone about getting them in the right way, as the Long Branch Record says. Gum shoe methods are not successful in such an investigation. Publicity brings out all views and all facts, and then it is easy enough to separate the grain from the chaff.

On the Spur of the Moment

The Passing of Fame.

Nations have grown, Bill, nations have perished;
Ages have come, Bill, ages have fled,
Leaving behind everything that they cherished,
Going to join the ranks of the dead.
Monarchs have risen in militant glory,
Sweeping their foemen from land and sea;
But the same "Finis" marks every life story,
Take it from me, Bill, take it from me.

We can't all win the top rung of the ladder;
Maybe 'tain't what we're cut out to do;
That ain't no sign we can't make the world gladder,
Just with our own little stunts, me and you.
All can't to fickle old Fame be cemented;
Some must be humble, you will agree;
Just do your durndest and you'll die contented;
Take it from me, Bill, take it from me.

Uncle Abner

The day has gone when the shabby man cold get anywhere in this world.

I know a feller who lost a $5,000 job bekuz he was too stingy to spend five cents to get his shoes shined.

There ain't nothing you kin smell further than a 5 and 10-cent store on a Saturday night.

The House of Representatives tried to sing the "Star Spangled Banner" the other day and fell down dismally, but Congressmen are not elected to sing. They are electeed to distribute garden seeds.

Rhode Island is figuring on spending a large sum for good roads, but she cannot spend very much and keep the roads in the State.

Noah Webster plays safe on almost every word by allowing the public to take a choice.

A Pessimistic View.

Whenever a town girl gets too proud to marry a man with 100 acres of land and twenty red pigs just because he can't tell the tango from a slow gin rickey, you can set it down as a fact that she will either die an old maid or marry a $6 a week clerk with a head full of ozone and only one change of hole-proofs. We would rather see you hooked up to some fellow who wears 40c. overalls and knows when to hit the top of the market than be yoked to some Cuthbert who plays the mandolin, smokes Turkish cigarets and lives off his father's pension. Still, there's no accounting for tastes. That's why they are establishing courts of domestic relations here and there.

Garden Seeds.

My Congressman sent garden seeds,
sent garden seeds galore;
'Twas claimed that the were better than the seeds sold at the store.
I planted them as I had planted common seeds before;
Those fancy seeds grew common weeds, just weeds and nothing more.

You see, I merely planted them and let it go at that;
I didn't cultivate the ground or hoe
my garden plat.
I didn't nurse those seeds along, for forsook them, flat;
I merely raised a crop of weeds,, of weeds profuse and fat.

'Tis so in life, a man may be prepared for gallant deeds;
The seeds of genius in him sown, the richest of all seeds.
But if it is not nursed along according to its needs,
It will, uncultivated, bring forth nothing much but weeds.

CONVENTION BITS FOR THE FOLKS AT HOME

- Proctor's Theatre -

Lou Tellegen, one of the foremost of stage stars, and now appearing in motion pictures, is presented today at Proctor's in his second photoplay produced by the Jesse L. Lasky Company, entitled "The Unknown." The story has been arranged by Margaret Turnbull from the novel by I. A. R. Wylie. It abounds in delightful romantic qualities, and, in addition, has a decidedly original counter-plot, and everyone of the characters has the happy faculty of attracting immediate admiration by their deeds and actions. The romance is between the Englishman of the Foreign Legion and an American girl But a captain of the Legion, unknown to both of them, is the father of the young man. He also desires the girl, and shielded by his superior position, he protects his rival. Finally he manages to have him sentenced to death. He escapes in company with the girl. They flee, are overtaken by the captain, who at last recognizes his son by means of the Victoria Cross. The picture is exceedingly entertaining at all times, and now and again a brisk hand-to-hand encounter, a small battle, imperilled cladestine meetings, and not the least prominent the persecution of the hero by his unknown father, increase the tempo of the action and incidentally draw the interest up to high pitch of excitement. In addition today a three-part human interest drama is presented entitled "The Danger Line," as well as a funny Kalem offering, "Counting Out the Count." Tomorrow Mary Miles Minter appears in her latest Metro production entitled "Lovely Mary." Mary is both lovely and lovable all the way through this picture, and the author and producer need never worry over that great requisite "sympathy" when lovely Mary is in the cast. Moreover, in this case, she has a good story behind her. It has a new touch and new features that keep the interest well above the normal level. Other features tomorrow include a famous Goldberg cartoon comedy, and a three-part drama entitled "The Hare and the Tortoise." Monday Fannie Ward will appear in "The Cheat," and the sixth episode of "The Mysteries of Myra" will be shown. One Tuesday the first episode of the "Secret of the Submarine," together with Dorothy Gish in "Susan Rocks the Boat," will be the headline productions.

.· Plainfield Theatre. ·.

In Ad Hoyt's "minstrel corkers," appearing as the headliner in the new bill opening at the Plainfield Theatre yesterday, patrons of the house saw one of the best tabloid blackface first parts ever presented locally. Seven men, every one of them an artist by himself, make up the company, and they offer a program of songs, dances and "hot off the bat" gags that keep the spectators in breathless interest for thirty minutes. The harmony in the chorus work is especially commendable, and with a beautiful plush drop as a background, the "seven corkers" present an inspiring picture when the curtain rises on the opening number. In addition to the feature number the following acts were also favorably received at the performances yesterday afternoon and last night: Robinson and Freemont, in the mirth-provoking sketch of theatrical life, "Behind the Scenes;" Joe Warner, comedian; Carr and Walker, in a big novelty act, and Wooley and Cantor, in a dancing diversion. Besides the vaudeville numbers, photoplays are a part of the program at the Plainfield Theatre every day. Especially selected screen dramas and comedies will be displayed this afternoon and tonight, and tomorrow's pictures will include the Pathe semi-weekly, picturing the latest news happenings in all parts of the world.

--Astor Theatre--

If he had been a regular "ten-twenty-thirty" hero, Jack Barrymore would have said, "Hold! If you strike that woman you do it at your peril, Red Mike." But being Bertie Joyce, in the Famous Players' production of "The Lost Bridegroom," at the Astor Theatre today, Barrymore simply swung for the thug's jaw as he attempted to hit Dorothy Hardin, and started a battle which ended very suddenly on the floor eighteen steps below. There Joyce lay stunned by the fall down the whole flight of stairs. "The Lost Bridegroom" is one of the funniest and by far the most thrilling film in which even Jack Barrymore has ever appeared. The picture was produced under the direction of James Kirkwood. Among the cast in support of Barrymore are Katherine Harris, Ida Darling and a great many others well known to the Plainfield public. The big feature tomorrow will be Lionel Barrymore in "The Woman in Black," a five-part Biograph production. Seldom has it been known to have two productions one after the other with two such well-known actors as the Barrymores in the leading roles—which no doubt the people of Plainfield will thoroughly understand is given as a treat by the Astor maangement. In addition to this Biograph production, we will show the seventh episode of "The Girl and the Game" and others. The big attraction on every Wednesday, "Who's Guilty?" Every Thursday the famous Broadway star, Billie Burke, in "Gloria's Romance." Read the story in the Plainfield Press every Wednesday; see it at the Astor on Thursday.

EDUCATOR'S NOTEBOOK

Oakland, Calif.—Mrs. Aurelia Henry Reinhardt, of Berkeley, who has distinguished herself as an educator and writer, is the new president of Mills College. She has done extensive lecturing throughout this State on English literature, and has a national reputation also as a scholar of distinction. After graduating from the University of California, she taught at Idaho, and later was a fellow in English at Yale. While there she edited and translated one of Dante's principal works, which is now a college text-book. Later she held a European fellowship. While at Oxford she edited and published Ben Johnson's "The Silent Woman."

Princeton, N. J.—Alfred Noyes, the English poet, who has been visiting professor of English literature at Princeton for two years, has sailed for England, where he will join the ambulance work. He is unable to enlist in a line regiment, but is anxious to do his share in England's big task. He has been heard by many American audiences during his stay here, and was well received and much honored.

New York—The last word in the famous Scott Nearing case, involving the right of free speech for college professors, is hailed with satisfaction by Nearing's admirers. The Association of American Professors, through a committee which investigated the celebrated case, finds Nearing not guilty and lays the blame on the University of Pennsylvania. However, as recent changes in the university regulations at Pennsylvania have amended the so-called erroneous course, the institution is at the same time commended by the professors' committee. Prof. Nearing's radical views on economics made him a conspicuous figure in the East, and his courses at Pennsylvania were popular. When he was dropped, there were serious charges of the "lid" on his outspoken social and economic views. The public sat up and took notice, and there was considerable discussion of the question, often charged by labor unions, that the institutions of learning were under the control of capitalists.

A Tribute to Our Parents

Essay of fourteen-year-old Dorothy Sklarew, read at the exercises of Temple Sholem Sunday-school.

We will never be able to repay our dear parents for their attention and kindness towards us. They have done everything in their power to help and guide us, therefore we must be kind and obedient toward them.

They have spent many a sleepless night and many an anxious hour for us and we owe them more than anyone else on earth.

The kindness of our parents has been shown to us in many ways. They are anxious for our welfare and for our education, which we are instructed in public school and Sunday-school.

In public school we learn the lessons for which we get prepared for future life, but in Sunday-school we learn the lessons which are dearer to us for, it teaches us the ten commandments, which is the most essential lesson one can learn. It teaches us the love for God, respect for our parents and teaches uprightness, honesty and to keep the Sabbath Day holy.

All the time we spend in studying is for our own benefit and we should be pleased when our parents urge us to study and obey them as we are the ones who profit by it.

When the time will come when we will arrive at womanhood and manhood how happy and proud our parents will be to know that through their efforts and our obedience we have been imbued with the religious knowledge which will make us better men and women in Israel.

Therefore we should study diligently and appreciate the loving care of our dear parents who are trying by their love and affections to have us grow up with the true principle of knowledge and to distinguish between right and wrong.

Their desire for our future welfare should cause us to persevere in our studies which lead us to success, therefore affording our parents the pleasure and knowledge that their efforts have not been in vain.

Daddy's Bedtime Story — A Make Believe Nightingale Goes "Whizz!"

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

WITH Jack and Evelyn perching on the arms of his chair, daddy told this story: "A real nightingale and a make believe one once sang for the emperor of China. When all the court liked the make believe bird best the real one flew out of the window, and the emperor banished him from the kingdom.

"The royal music master said, 'The make believe one is best, for we can open it and see how its waltzes are made, how one note follows another, and you always know what you are going to hear.'

"'That's what I think,' said everybody at court. So the music master got permission to show the make believe nightingale to the public. The people all liked it and drank themselves merry on good Chinese tea. But some poor fishermen who had heard the real nightingale said, 'It looks like the real one, but its song sounds very different.' Meanwhile the nightingale they loved to hear singing nights in the woods had been banished.

"Now, the make believe bird had its place on a silken cushion by the emperor's bed. All the toys and presents that it got were scattered beside it. It was named the chief imperial singer of the bedchamber. The music master wrote twenty-five books about it in the hardest kind of Chinese letters, which, you children must know, are the hardest letters in the world. Then everybody at court said he had read the book so not to seem stupid, because if they had been stupid at court they would have been trampled on, and nobody likes that.

"So for one year the make believe nightingale sat on its silk cushion and sang for the emperor. Finally he and everybody at court knew every little gurgle by heart. They liked this, because they could now join in the song themselves. Even the little street boys sang 'Zizzy, zizzy!' and 'Cluck, cluck!'

"But one evening when the emperor lay in bed listening to the make believe nightingale sing something inside the bird went 'whizz!'

"A spring had burst, all the wheels stopped, the song ceased. The Chinese emperor jumped out of bed and sent for his doctor. But what could they do? Then they sent for the watchmaker, and, after a great deal of talk and fuss, he got the wheels to go again somehow. But he said the make believe nightingale must be spared as much as possible because it was worn out, and if the wheels were changed nobody could ever be sure of the tune again. This was a great disappointment to the emperor. The music master said the bird was as good as ever, and his saying made it so. Then it was decided that the make believe bird could sing but once a year," daddy finished.

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

Mrs. Mertage Considers Maids "Selfish;" of Course She Isn't.

"Julia, my mother and I will attend to all the refreshments for the party on Saturday night, for the Forsyths are coming down from Kansas City to spend the week-end. That will make extra work for Sunday, and——"

"You forget, ma'am. It is my Sunday off," interrupted the maid.

"I am very sorry, Julia, but you will have to stay all day Sunday, for there will be dinner and lunch at night for seven people, and I cannot manage alone."

"I have an engagement with the young man who works in the beet factory, ma'am, and I cannot give up the day." There was a determined look in Julia's eyes.

"Oh, dear, can't you make another date? I don't see what I can do. I do not often ask you to give up your afternoon out, but you can see this is a very special case." Ethel had learned from her experience with Minnie that it did not pay to be dictatorial with servants.

"I am sorry, ma'am, but it is little enough pleasure I get in this dull place, and I am not going to break my engagement." The afternoon with the young man was more important to Julia than her place; besides, she had not much fear of losing it, knowing how helpless her mistress was.

Ethel turned and left the kitchen without another word. It would not do to have the maid leave with a houseful of company for a two-days' stay.

"What ever shall I do, mamma?" she began excitedly. "Julia has an engagement for Sunday afternoon and she refuses to stay and get the lunch in the evening. Of course we must serve a good lunch, for they have a long ride ahead of them and will get home late. I almost never have asked her to give up her Sunday off." Ethel's tone was full of trouble.

"You must expect just such selfishness in the maids of the present time. They are so pampered and spoiled. I am thoroughly disgusted with them, but we must have service and they know it, so we cannot be arbitrary. I always size up the situation and give in if I have to. If she is going out with a beau, you might as well back down at once. One would think they were in society they are so particular about breaking engagements." Mrs. Mertage's tone was injured.

"Well, I shall try to have her get things ready for a lunch before she goes, so it will be possible to get along. It is so mortifying to have to serve lunch without a maid to those wealthy Forsyths."

"Don't you worry, I'll help you out. I have been in too many mixups with servants not to know a way out." Mrs. Mertage was for saving Ethel all trouble now as she had done all her life. With Ethel she had always been unselfish. She took her way to the kitchen and with well-oiled sentences had soon secured a promise from the reluctant Julia to get the lunch ready to serve and stay till 2 o'clock in order to get the dinner dishes done. Mrs. Mertage unconsciously used the method suggested to railroad heads: "Charge all the traffic will bear, but don't kill the trade."

HOW TO PROTECT YOUR ROSE BUSHES

Department of Agriculture Tells How to Get Rid of Rose Aphis.

Washington, D. C., June 9.—When new growth starts on the rose bushes in the spring, and throughout the summer and fall, the young growth and the flower buds and stems of rose bushes are often covered with a small green or pinkish plant-louse, known as the rose aphis, which sucks the sap from the tender portion of the plant and causes an unhealthy curled condition of the foliage and disappointment in the number and quality of the flowers produced.

The rose aphis passes the winter in the egg stage on the stems and dormant buds of the rose bushes, according to A. D. Hopkins, Forest Entomologist, U. S. Department of Agriculture. The insects hatching from these eggs reach maturity in about 15 or 20 days, all being wingless. They are pear-shaped and either bright green or pinkish in color. At this stage they begin to produce living young, each individual in course of about 20 days producing 50 to 100 young, which, on maturity, are either winged or wingless and in turn either green or pinkish. Thus the tender growth soon becomes crowded with various sizes, colors, and shapes of aphides, and, to insure their progeny with an adequate food supply, the wingless mothers migrate to less crowded growth and the winged ones fly to other rose bushes, each starting a colony for herself. In favorable weather conditions, especially in a humid atmosphere, many generations may thus follow one another, covering every bit of green vegetation on the bush with their bodies, their cast skins, honeydew, and the resulting sooty fungus. It can easily be seen that, had every aphis produced in the course of a season lived its full life, the progeny of a single overwintering egg would run into millions.

The presence of ants on the rose bushes is an indication that the aphis is present, because the ants collect the honeydew from the aphides and, to a certain extent, protect the aphides from their insect enemies.

As above indicated, the rose aphis thrives best in cloudy, humid, warm atmosphere, hence with the appearance of a hot and dry spell they often disappear as suddenly as they appeared.

Aside from a variety of causes, like driving rains, winds, etc., which decimate its numbers considerably, the rose aphis is attacked by other insects which either devour them or develop from eggs deposited in their bodies. Ladybirds, lacewing flies, and the larvae of two-winged flies called syrphus flies are among the former, and a number of species of tiny wasp-like insects represent the internal parasites. Sometimes these natural agencies of control are sufficient to keep the aphides so reduced in numbers that they do little or no harm. Notwithstanding the effectiveness of natural checks, however, their intermittent character unfortunately renders their help often too late to save the flower crop. It is always advisable, therefore, to watch rose bushes for aphides and to apply remedies as soon as they are discovered.

COLUMBIAN TEAM LOST FIRST MATCH

Three in a Row Went to Dunellen Girls' Five Last Night.

Feminine bowlers from this city carrying the name of Columbians tasted defeat three times in the first of a series of contests against the Presbyterian girls' five on the Dunellen alleys last night. Big margins separated the contestants in each game, the third being the closest of the series.

Although on the defeated five, Mrs. H. B. Arnold pinned the most consistent game of any bowler in the match, setting up marks of 101, 110 and 125. Miss May McAfee hung up the best individual mark of the evening, returning a 140 in the second set-to.

Two more games remained to be played in the series.

P. H. S. SPORT NOTES

The baseball game scheduled to be played between th Seniors and Faculty yesterday afternoon was postponed to Monday afternoon owing to the wet grounds. It will be played on Parker Field at 3:30 o'clock.

Physical Director Ralph Patch has closed the gymnasium classes for the year and is now making an examination of all of the students.

Another P. H. S.-N. P. H. S. tennis meet has been arranged for this afternoon, to be held on Parker Field, but as three postponements have already been made, it is hard to ell whether or not the meet will actually come through or not.

After attempting to cancel the meet for tomorrow afternoon, Barringer High School will meet the P. H. S. tennis outfit on the Parker Field courts tomorrow afternoon.

The Bayonne High School track meet is not likely to come off after ail. Bayonne canceled the meet scheduled for last Saturday at the last meeting, and now refuse to make another date unless medals and ribbons are given, and expenses are represented.

SUTTON-HOPPE MATCH.

Chicago, Ill., June 9.—Long range challenges issued during the last two months by G. Butler Sutton, of Chicago, and Willie Hoppe, of New York, chrystallized into a match when the rival cueists met at the Brunswick offices. The champion and his older rival will meet at St. Louis the third week in October in a 1,500 point match at 18.2, playing 500 points each night. They will contest for a purse of $1,500 and the net gate receipts. Charles Peterson, the St. Louis roomkeeper, will referee, and R. B. Bnjamin, manager for Hoppe, will have full charge of the arrangements. Sutton held out for some time for Chicago as the venue, but as St. Louis is a neutral city, he finally yielded that point.

MISS STOCKTON PLAYED FOR NEW YORK COMBINE

Mrs. H. R. Stockton, of Plainfield, was a member of the New York team of women golfers that defeated the Philadelphia combine at Manchester, Mass., by a 9 to 6 score. The New York players won nine of fifteen single matches and three of six of the foursomes, in which Mrs. Stockton also play. There were three extra hole matches this morning, of which New York won two and Philadelphia one.

Miss Marion Hollins, of New York, who was runner-up to Mrs. W. A. Gavin yesterday in the Eastern championship, lost her match to Mrs. R. H. Barlow, of Philadelphia, by 6 and 5. Miss M. Caverly, of Philadelphia, beat Miss G. M. Bishop, of NeNw York, at the twentieth hole.

BIG SCHOLASTIC MEET DRAWS MANY ATHLETES

Only one representative of Mercersburg Academy, which for two years has been the titleholder, will compete in the national interscholastic track and field championships, under the auspices of the 250th Anniversary Committee of Newark at Weequahic Park tomorrow afternoon. It was expected that Coach Jimmy Curran would send on a big squad to defend the laurels attained during the last two years, but in the list of entries, which was announced yesterday, the only Mercersburg boy nominated is H. G. Burke, who will start in the two-mile run.

The games tomorrow will be the first real contests to take place on the Newark field, which will be the scene of the national track and field championships in September, and they promise to be of the keenest nature. The entry list embraces all the important high and preparatory schools in the East. Phillips-Exeter School will send on a sturdy squad of youngsters, and the Moses Brown School, of Providence, will also represented by a number of likely point winners.

Among the Phillips-Exeter boys who will compete will be Kimball Atha, in the two sprints; Austin Williams and J. Wakem, in the half-mile run; Wakem, in the mile, and Walter L. Whalen, in the running high jump. The Moses Brown School's colors will be carried by A. W. Gorton, C. C. Rounseville, J. Edgar Reynolds and George W. Bliss. Flushing High School, which recently won the Public Schools' Athletic League championship for high schools, has entered practically its entire titular squad.

"POP" COURTNEY WILL RETIRE IMMEDIATELY

Veteran Crew Coach Must Follow Physician's Advice and Quit Game.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 9.—Charles E. Courtney, coach of the Cornell crews, will probably return to Ithaca Sunday, leaving the work of training the Cornell oarsmen to John Hoyle, his boat builder and assistant coach for fifteen years. Coach Courtney has confided these plans to several of his closest friends.

The critical condition of his health was not realized until today, when he visited a Poughkeepsie specialist, Dr. Lewis H. Marks, who advised him to cease all coaching activities immediately and to return home at once. Although his confidants knew of his extremely weak physical condition this spring as a result of an accident here last June, it was expected that he would be able to remain with the Cornell crew men until the regatta on June 17, even if he was unable to take regular trips out in the coaching launch.

So far, however, he has been out only once, that was on Monday morning, but when a drizzling rain began to fall his nurse, Miss Davis, ordered his immediate return. Since Monday he has occasionally take a walk from the Oaks to the boathouse, a distance of a half-mile, but today, after his visit to the specialist, he returned to his quarters and did not venture outside in the afternoon's rain. Mrs. E. Pearl Gibbs, his niece, received all visitors today, and although none could see the "Old Man of the Hudson," Mrs. Gibbs was optimistic enough to intimate that he would continue with his coaching work here next week.

MISS EDNA WILDEY WINS WITH PARTNER IN DOUBLES

Philadelphia, June 9.—Eight players remain from an original entry of more then seventy in the fourth round of the singles of the women's national lawn tennis championship tournament, in progress on the courts of the Philadelphia Cricket Club, St. Martin's. Of this numoer two are from this city, three from the New York district, two from Boston and one from Baltimore. In spite of the disagreeable weather today and the fact that a drizzling rain and a cold northeast wind made lawn tennis more or less a hardship, excellent progress was made, owing to the efforts of the committee.

Mrs. Raymond, having advanced to the fourth round in singles on Wednesday, was not called upon to play in that division today, but she scored a victory in the doubles, when, with Miss Edna Wildey, of Morristown, she defeated Miss Marion Chapman and Mrs. George Chapman in two sets, 6—4, 6—3.

BETHEL CHAPEL GIVES PLEASING OPERETTA

"The May Queen" Presented by Little Folks of the Sunday School.

The little tots of the Sunday-school of Bethel chapel gave a pleasing entertainment at the chapel last night, the program being in the form of an operetta in which a bevy of rustic girls congregate for the purpose of choosing a May queen, the operetta being named "The May Queen."

While the little maids are with difficulty trying to choose the queen of their festivities a fairy appears and solves the problem. The May queen is crowned amid the great rejoicings of a typical May party. The cast included the following:

The Misses Avella Shipley, Gladys Benson, Helen Harris, Gertrude Alston, Edith Williams, Anna May Carey, Anna May Robinson, Helen Burton, Elsie Irby, Julia Washington and Nannie Cook were village girls. Charles Williams, Sydney Williams and Ogden Marcellus were flag bearers. Norman Brinkley and Charles Irby were pages and Rudolph Moran was pole-bearer. Those who danced around the May pole were the Misses Elizabeth Goodrich, Geneva Garner, Beatrice Robinson, Grace Shipley, Beulah Shipley, Dorothy Burton, Janet Marcellus and Viola Daniels. Miss Ruth Irby sang "Sweet Charity."

Refreshments were served after the entertainment. The whole affair was under the direction of Mrs. R. C. Wormley and Mrs. J. A. Williams.

RUSSIANS CRUSH AUSTRIAN LINES

Germans Smash English and Continue Victories Over French.

GAIN MILE AT VERDUN

Bloody Losses Administered to British When They Fall Back Over Two-Mile Front at Ypres—50,000 Austrians Taken Prisoners.

Russian Victories Pile Up.

London, June 9.—Crushing the Austro-German invaders under a weight of artillery metal unprecedented along the Russian front, Gen. A. A. Brusiloff's legions are pressing on with fury, smashing the Austrian front, recapturing the fortress city of Lutsk, taking 50,000 prisoners and making a breach along 150 miles in the Austrian lines.

The Teutons have been driven back twenty-five miles in the Slav attack and, according to the Petrograd correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, "all five of the Austrian armies are on the eve of a general retreat and the fortress city of Lemberg is in grave danger."

The Petrograd correspondent of the Times says the Austrians have lost 200,000 men in the Russian drive, which began Monday, and shows not the slightest sign of abating.

Severe Defeat for British.

Berlin (wireless), June 9.—All the heights east and southeast of Ypres over a front of two miles have been captured from the British by the Germans. The British have suffered bloddy losses in the fighting around Hooge, southeast of Ypres. The following official report on operations in West Flanders under date June 8 was given out today by the War Office:

"In extension of our success of June 2 on the heights southeast of Ypres, the Upper Silesion and Wuerttemberg troops attacked the British yesterday near Hooge. All the village is now in our hands as well as trenches west and south of the town."

Konig Badly Damaged.

Copenhagen, June 9.—The new German Dreadnought Konig was struck several times in the battle with the English fleet off the Jutland coast and badly damaged, says a message from Kiel today.

Germans Pierce French Trench.

Paris, June 9.—French war statement:

German infantry assaults were delivered on both sides of the Meuse in the sector of Verdun last night. On the west bank the attacks were repulsed, the War Office announced today, but on the eastern side the Germans succeeded in penetrating a trench. Two powerful onslaughts were made by the Crown Prince against the French position at Hill No. 304. These were both repulsed, the communique states.

Strengthen Flanders Front.

Amsterdam, June 9.—Despatches from the Belgian frontier state that several new corps of German engineers, hundreds of automobiles and large quantities of munitions and artillery have arrived at the Flanders front. Zeppelin sheds are also being constructed close to the front.

Reinforcement to Austrians.

The Hague, June 9.—Reinforcements of 70,000 German troops have arrived at Vilna in Russia to help Field-Marshal Von Hindenburg's offensive against the line of the Dvina river and the Ikskul region. It is hoped this drive will relieve the Austrians further south of the Russian pressure under which they have been falling back. Every householder in Lemberg, the capital of the Austrian province of Galicia, has been notified that he must shelter so many wounded which the Austrian medical service is unable to transport further inland. Four Austrian divisions, or 80,000 men, will also leave the Italian front for Galicia.

O'LOUGHLIN'S STOLEN CAR IS FOUND IN NEW ROCHELLE

The Plainfield police last night received a telephone message from headquarters in New Rochelle, N. Y., saying that a 1912 Overland automobile had been abandoned there. It was the property of Martin O'Loughlin, golf professional at the Plainfield Country Club, who lives on Park avenue. It had been stolen some time ago when left in New Brunswick.

The thieves stole another machine in New Rochelle and made an exciting dash for liberty when pursued by the police there. This machine was finally abandoned at Mamaroneck, New York, and the thieves escaped. Mr. O'Loughlin will go for his car.

A Little Chat About Telephone Numbers

NO DOUBT you have noticed the way the telephone operator repeats the numbers you give her. When you ask for "Main two one four five," she repeats "Main two one—four five"—pausing just a fraction of a second between the hundreds and the tens.

Perhaps you have thought she was just being playful. She's too busy a young woman for that. There's a real reason for this practice. The switchboard before which the telephone operator sits is honeycombed with tiny holes, each the termination of a subscriber's line. These holes are in sections of one hundred each. To locate "2145," the operator first finds the "twenty-first" section labelled "21" and then the 45th hole in that section.

Tests have proved that this new method of repeating numbers and of passing them from operator to operator, tends to prevent mistakes and helps the operator in speeding up your call by making it easier to locate the required number on the switchboard.

Perhaps you will find in this a suggestion for your own adoption. You can help the operator in her efforts to give you quicker service by adopting this new style of calling telephone numbers.

Next week we're going to talk to you about the gentle art of listening.

HOW CONGRESS SPENDS MONEY

Chautauqua Speaker Will Tell of Pork Barrel Legislation in National House.

SOME "INSIDE" VIEWS

Lee Francis Lybarger, of the Philadelphia Bar, and Authority on Tariff, Will be Feature of Big Gathering.

The taxpaying American citizen is to be given some "startling facts" as to how his money is being spent by congress. These facts are to be brought out in an address on the first day of the Chautauqua by a member of the Philadelphia bar and a man of wide prominence in the lecture field. The lecturer is Lee Francis Lybarger, author of "Land, Labor and Wealth," a recognized authority on the tariff and a student of economic questions.

He will make the keynote speech of the Chautauqua and will sound a note of warning on what he terms the wastes of government expenditures by pork barrel legislation. His address will be entirely non-partisan, and he makes it clear that he is not attacking any one man or set of men, but is after the methods by which the funds of the government are made subject "to dishonest attacks."

"A congressman," he says, "is expected by his constituency to get as large a haul as possible, and the congressman's place is most secure who succeeds in procuring the largest appropriation of government money for lavish expenditure.

"The result is that one section of the country is robbing another."

Mr. Lybarger will recommend a remedy, for, he says, "I wouldn't tear a thing to pieces unless I could build it up better than it was."

The address by Mr. Lybarger is one in which the Chautauqua management itself has felt a keen interest. The general manager of the community Chautauquas, Loring J. Whiteside, of New York City, says he wanted a man to go over this circuit and lecture on this subject, because he believes it is one of the most important issues before the American people.

"And I believe," he says, "that I have the best man in the country for this work. Lee Francis Lybarger is one of the ablest men in the Chautauqua lecture field and knows how to discuss a big question of this kind in a way that will make it of surprising interest to a large Chautauqua audience.

"Another thing that we have a decided interest in is to see a stronger community sentiment in American communities," Mr. Whiteside says. "The life of the nation depends to a large degree on the strength of the cities and towns of 20,000 and under. And the same community interest should be found in the larger towns and cities. So I have asked Mr. Lybarger to devote a generous part of his lecture to a discussion of community interests. His lecture subject is 'The Community Conscience.'"

This is one of the great number of strong features the Chautauqua is bringing. Mr. Lybarger will be here on the opening night. He will be preceded in the afternoon and in a prolude at night by the American Quartet and Clayton Conrad, cartoonist, and will be followed by a host of musical companies, lecturers and entertainers, among them Ole Theobaldi, wizard Norwegian violinist; Frederick Warde, the eminent Shakespearean actor; Andre Tridon, war correspondent; Victor's Florentine Band and Neapolitan Troubadours and a number of others.

The Chautauqua is coming here under the auspices of a local Chautauqua Association, and season tickets are being sold by a committee of business men and others. These tickets admit to all the ten sessions and make the cost only a few cents a number. The programs will be held afternoons and evenings of five days in a large waterproof tent.

If you haven't bought tickets you should arrange to see one of the season ticket committee or any member of the association today. Any business man can direct you to those in charge of the sale of the tickets. A beautiful program booklet has been issued, which gives the full particulars of the Chautauqua's plans, and you can get one of these booklets in most any of the stores or banks or any business house.

The Chautauqua will begin here June 23.

THE WOMAN'S COLUMN

Roslyn, L. I.—In an old rose garden that is over a century old, Mrs. Aaron Ward, wife of Rear Admiral Ward, a retired naval officer, yesterday gave a garden party for the benefit of the American Ambulance Hospital in Paris. The old estate is situated high on the cliffs above Hempstead harbor, overlooking Long Island Sound. Mrs. Ward was hostess to many prominent New Yorkers yesterday, and her wonderful old garden, which came to her through her ancestors, contained a happy throng.

Portland, Ore.—Portland society women are taking the leading part in the annual Rose Festival. Five hundred Portland women are named as a board of patronesses, with Mrs. Buy C. Talbot as general chairman.

Washington, D. C.—To provide a sylvan municipal theatre on the grounds of the Washington monument is the idea of Mrs. Christian D. Hemmick, who is aided in pushing the plan by Mrs. R. D. Shepherd, known on the stage as Odette Tyler. The government officials have been urged to start the machinery that will permit the innovation, and Washington women say they will do the rest.

Chicago—The origin of the suffrage slogan, "Votes for women," has been explained by Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, who was the central figure in the big parade of Wednesday. It seems that an uprising of the working classes took place in 1819 at Manchester, England. At that time the men were attempting to get representation in parliament and a parade for that purpose was organized. The slogan, "Votes for men," was printed on banners, and one single division of women bravely displayed a bannear bearing "Votes for Women." It is recorded that a riot followed the parade, and the episode was afterward immortalized by a wood engraving which now hangs in a public building at Manchester.

Topeka, Kas.—The way that Kansas women are going after political jobs is causing no end of worry to the old-line politicians who must have these jobs for their followers in order to maintain their power. The candidacies for office are eagerly sought by women—in fact, there are 129 women actively campaigning for county offices. There is another in a race for Congress, two are out for seats in the State Senate, and a dozen will seek election to the lower branch of the Legislature. The best argument that the stump-speakers-in-skirts use is that the women officials in Kansas have been honest—none has defaulted or embezzled any of the public funds.

Paris—With the death of Mme. Jane Dieulafoy, author, explorer, Chevalier of the Legion of Honor, and permitted by the French government to wear male apparel, which occurred week before last, there passed one of the most remarkable women in all Europe. She was educated in a convent and married a brilliant young engineer. When the Franco-Prussian War broke out, she secured permission to wear a soldier's uniform and accompany him to the front. She fought with distinction through the entire war. Then she travelled with her husband, exloring Persia and other countries of the East. Their greatest finds were the ruins of the palaces of Darius and Artaxerxes. She was permitted to continue to wear men's apparel. She has written many books of a scientific character, and not a few romances.

Philadelphia—The Women's Medical College of Pennsylvania has established a fellowship to be awarded annually to any medical women of special ability who, following the undergraduate course, has completed one year of hospital service, including work in maternity wards, and one year of further practice. This is said to be the first fellowship in obstetrics offered by any medical school. The holder of the scholarship must plan to continue the practice of obstetrics.

Chicago—Aside from the good of suffragists, there is a goodly representation of prominent American women at the party conventions. Washington society has pulled itself up by the roots and come on for the big doings. There is much entertaining, and the quiet little dinners that the women give are eagerly attended by delegates who are worn with strife or talked to death by the spellbinders.

MILK EXPERTS MEET.

Cincinnati, June 9.—The tenth annual convention of the American Association of Medical Milk Commissions was begun here today. Dr. Charles Soucher, president of the Academy of Medicine, heads the local committee of entertainment.

BISHOP AWARDS DEGREES

had received during the four, five or six years of their college career and said that humanity would respond to all the qualities as they set them forth. Their higher qualities he also pressed upon them to use in their home life, but he also urged upon them not to confine themselves wholly to the home, but contribute their share wherever they are, whether in literature, the office or in the school. He also praised the institution of which they were graduates and classed it as an institution of rank. He concluded by telling them that "as they step across the threshold into life's experience they would feel a deeper responsibility to their Alma Mater."

The Rev. Richard H. Tierney, S. J., editor of "America," delivered the baccalaureate address to the students. Father Tierney is a speaker of unusual force and his remarks were listened to attentively throughout his discourse. In his talk to the young women about to leave the institution he said in part: "You are about to enter a new era of life. Before many hours shall have passed you shall stand at the threshold of the world and look back at the Alma Mater that has nurtured you in all that is high and holy. You are about to begin a longer and more incessant struggle, and before many years have passed you shall bear the mark of glory achieved or infamy; for the battle which you are to begin is not a dream but a reality. Victory is the reward of great struggle. During the last thirty years there has been a complete breakdown in our national, ethical and social life. Right is thought wrong and wrong is thought right. Man, with his unholy desires, has set himself above every thing else. God has been dethroned and the home has been corrupted. Man has other interests. Judiciary, commerce, education, the State, the commonwealth and the home have become Godless. Destroy the home and you destroy the nation.

"Citizens are made at the hearthstone. Men scorn that. The home is no longer held sacred, no longer the sanctuary of heaven, no longer the place on which the nation may rest until the crack of doom. And worst of all, it has become a place of scandal. This is no exaggeration. Read the press of today. Why the whole country is shaking with the facts. What means it all? It means that human hearts are broken. It means that unless the hearts of our people are healed the nation will go down to destruction, for upon the heart of man rests the safety of the republic. The strength of the republic is not in the few. If the heart be corrupt the nation will be corrupt.

Illustrating his talk at this point, Father Tierney called attention to the days of Rome, when her prosperity and vainness overruled the strength of the level-minded populace. Who saved Rome? No one. The nation fell and its monument is a tiny mound of ashes. You and others will go forth into the battle of life to correct the evils of the nation and others will follow you. You are heart and parcel of this great commonwealth. As the State gives, so you must give. All the power of your will, your intellect. It is your duty. When this college puts into your hands a degree, it puts its fair name in your care. You go forth marked women. You cannot be unfaithful to your trust without scandal. You must go forth fearless and humble before God. This college has traditions of which it is intensely jealous, so remember that you have those traditions in your keeping. Your place is marked out for you. The home is the natural place for woman. The women of the country make the homes of the country what they are. Many women today have forgotten their proper sphere. What problem is there that is tearing the wills of the country that is not solved in the home? What problem is there that is not ultimately solved in the home? If parents would teach children that justice and humility are the greatest things on the earth, think you that the man and woman today would ground out his and her life as he and she are doing today?

"You should extend your influence beyond the home. Scorn to go down in the pit of politics. A woman's power lies in her weakness. Match man by your gift of sympathy, culture and humility. Your instruments are within you. This college has sharpened your intellect. Go forth and fight the battle of life, but beware that you do not put insistence in the wrong place. Trust not too much in intellect nor power that comes through wealth. Put your trust in character. Be dominated by high principles and go forth valiantly. Scorn to be taken for granted. Know your duties and perform them. Realize your rights and demand them. Be not fearful before the face of man. Know that principles are greater than any man on earth. Know that your life is greater than all obstacles. You can conquer the world through failure if you are true to your principles."

The remainder of the musical program rendered by the college orchestra was as follows: "Humoreske" (Dvorak); Barcarolle" (from "Tales of Hoffman") (Offenbach); Triumphal March from "Aida" (Verdi) and "Recessional."

Included in the gathering of men seated on the stage were the following: Rev. Father C. H. Mackel, of Elizabeth; Dr. Patrick Cantwell, of Perth Amboy; Rev. Father Eagen, of Phillipsburg; Rev. Father Richard T. Ryan, of Somerville; Rev. Father E. J. Dunphy, of Dunellen; Rev. Father McGrath, of Stony Hill; Rev. Father Francis Gross, of Perth Amboy; Rev. Father W. J. McConnell, of Belmar; Rev. Father Zimmer, of Raritan; Rev. Father Hayes, of Perth Amboy; H. C. Krebs, superintendent of the Somerset County Schools; George J. Tobin, A. E. Kenney, of Plainfield; W. J. Weaver, of Perth Amboy and Mr. O'Donnell, of Elizabeth.

Donors of medals given to graduates of the academic department were read by Rev. Father Hart as follows:

The Bishop O'Farrell gold medal, gift of the Sisters of Mercy; Rt. Rev. James A. McFaul, Bishop of Trenton; Rev. Peter J. Hart, rector, St. Joseph's church; Rt. Rev. Mgr. John F. Brady, rector, St. Mary's church, South Amboy; Rev. J. F. Baldwin, chaplain, Mt. St. Mary College; gold medal for Christian Doctrine, given in memory of the Rev. William H. Miller; gold medal, the gift of James J. Kirwin, New York City, in memory of the late Mother Mary Gabriel; David T. Kenny; Rev. Thomas McEnery, Caldwell; gild medal, given in memory of the Rt. Rev. Mgr. P. F. Connolly; gold medal for domestic science, the gift of Mrs. Marcella McGovern, South Bethlehem, Pa; gold medal for music, the gift of Daniel I. Allen, New York City.

grossly unfair for this body to sanction the sale of this business by Latzko now, and then oppose a renewal of the license in October after the purchaser had invested his money in good faith. We would be letting Latzko get away with the purchase money, and we would be parties to the wrong done the buyer.

"When I first became Mayor of North Plainfield I had a conference with this man. I called him to my office and told him that more complaints were received concerning alleged violations of the law in his place than all the others in the borough put together. I told him to stop violating the law and play fair with us, and we would play fair with him. Soon afterward we secured evidence of his selling to men on the blacklist."

Mayor Smalley then read affidavits from two men, known to almost every resident of the borough, who have been on the blacklist for sometime, both of whom swore that Latzko sold them whisky. Both are cripples. One swore that he spent half the money he made in an entire week there, while the overseer of the poor paid his mothr's rent. Latzko knew both of them, said Mayor Smalley, and yet he sold them whisky.

Only yesterday, he said, a man was sent to jail for 60 days in the borough court for buying whisky and giving it to men on the blacklist and he bought it from Latzko.

"This administration didn't break Latzko," declared the Mayor. "He was broke before we came in office. I was just as broad-minded on the booze business as any other man in the world when I was a private citizen. I never took a drink in my life, but I have bought as much as any other man for the other fellow. Now I am under oath to the people that elected me. I have sworn to do certain things, and I am going to do them.

"This decision has been forced on us by Latzko and his attorney. They demanded a public hearing on the sale of a license, and now they have it. I believe that if the question were put to a popular vote the people of North Plainfield would be more than three to one against letting Latzko or any other man run a wholesale whisky house at this place."

The hearing was attended by a large number of citizens of the borough, several taking part in the discussion. All of the councilmen were present when Mayor Smalley called the meeting to order except Mr. Mobus. Mr. Stahl favored approval of the license transfer, but Councilmen Milne, McGee, Wilson and Tingley were opposed to it.

The hearing had been demanded by Latzko after action of the Council recently in passing a resolution opposing the sale of his place to a man named Schmit, of Westfield. There was no objection to Mr. Schmit.

Latzko was the first to appear before the Council. He called attention to the large number of names on the blacklist, saying that the list of Plainfield and that of North Plainfield had a total of 160 names and that it was impossible for him to personally know each one of these men. He denied that he had knowingly sold to men on the blacklist, since Smalley had been Mayor, insisting that he had obeyed the law as best he could. His first trouble came Christmas when Judge De Meza called him into police court in Plainfield for selling to men who had been denied the right to drink. He told Judge De Meza, he said, that he would not sell to those listed if he knew them, but that unless he was given photographs or descriptions he might make some mistakes.

"I keep the strictest place in town," declared Latzko. "In fact, it is too strict for good business."

He begged that the Council reconsider its action, promising that he would quit the business and devote the remainder of his life to government service as a horticulturist and to farm life with his invalid wife and crippled son.

Clerk Martin read a letter of protest from the Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey in which it was declared that the borough had too many wholesale places now and urged that the action of the Council be allowed to stand.

George M. Hoagland, of Somerset street, begged the Council not to reconsider. He said that Latzko knew the uncertainties of the business when he engaged in it, and took a chance. The moral effect of eliminating one of the whisky houses would be good for the community, he said.

Theodore Martin, of Chatham street, believed that a majority of borough citizens favored not only the elimination of Latzko from the whisky business there but the elimination of this stand.

George Ramsey, of Jackson avenue, was another to argue against a change in the former decision of the Council.

Henry DeMott asked the Council to consider the financial side of the question. He was not a friend of Latzko, he said, nor even a friend of the business, but one saloon, more or less, would not make any difference to the borough, and this individual was in financial trouble. He suggested that the sale be permitted, after which it would be easy to stop the other man.

After Mr. DeMott's argument in his favor Latzko gave more details of his financial difficulties.

Councilman Stahl said that it was immaterial to him whether Latzko held the license, or Schmit got it. He had only spoken to Latzko twice, he said, and one was to refuse to sign an application for a hotel license, but he believed that the man ought to be treated "fair and just," and that he ought to be given an opportunity to get out. His license had been granted by the court of Somerset county and it was not the duty of the Council to interfere. When the license expires in October will be time for action against it, he said.

Mr. Stahl put the whole Borough Council on record as being for prohibition when he insisted that to take action against one of them should be taken against all saloons in the borough, and that if Latzko was denied the right to run all others should be denied this right. He said it looked like the fight was against the man, not the cause, and it was immediately explained to him that there was no personal fight on Latzko, which made action a movement toward prohibition.

R. R. Pentacost, of Westervelt avenue, explained in arising that he knew nothing about Latzko's place, or any other place in the borough, because he usually went around them, but he insisted that personal interest should not be considered in such a matter. The people who use saloons are in the minority in North Plainfield, he said, and the majority demands that he not be allowed to dispose of his business with the implied right to continue.

E. Gibson Smith, of Grandview avenue, did not believe that the borough needed the wholesale house, and said if it was not needed it should be done away with at once.

Following all this came the statement of Mayor Smalley, after which a motion to adjourn was made, and the Latzko case was officially closed.

TAXICAB HIT BY CAR; DRIVER PAINFULLY HURT

William Skillman, colored, driver for the Plainfield Taxicab Company, was painfully injured early last night when the car he was driving was struck by an Arlington avenue street car at the corner of Watchung and Second street. Skillman was going North on Watchung avenue, and was following a main line car. He turned in behind the car to cross Watchung and go down Second street to the barn of the company, and an Arlington avenue car going south struck him. The taxicab was badly damaged. Skillman was badly bruised. His injuries were attended to by Dr. Pittis and he was taken to his home.

BLIND PEW TIPS BILL BONES THE DREADED BLACK SPOT

Charles Hopkins Successfully Stages Thrilling Tale of the Sea—All the Beloved Characters Brought to Life.

Fifteen men on the dead man's chest,
Yo-ho-ho and a bottle of rum;
Drink and the devil had done for the rest,
Yo-ho-ho and a bottle of rum.

This is the famous pirate song which greets crowded houses nightly in the quaint little Punch & Judy Theatre, New York City, as the curtain rises on the first act of "Treasure Island."

Every grownup youngster in the audience rubs his eyes before he takes another look at the stage. It seems too good to be true. But lo! and behold! that surely must be Captain "Billy" Bones who is banging his cutlass upon the table as he commands the frightened villagers in the Admiral Benbow Inn, "Now we'll sing that over and louder!"

Yes; it is true. Again the unexpected has happened. Captain "Billy" Bones is now a thing of flesh and blood, and so are brave little Jim Hawkins, genial Dr. Livesey, bluff Squire Trelawney, sly Black Dog, powerful blind Pew, oily Long John Silver, and all the other beloved characters that Robert Louis Stevenson created and in whose company almost every boy the world over has sailed the sea, in his dreams, in quest of Flint's buried treasure.

The wizard who waved his magic wand, and breathing upon the brain children of that master story-teller, Stevenson, brought them to life so that they now perform before one's eyes the heroic deeds which gained them immortal fame, is the gifted young actor-manager, Charles Hopkins.

For more than thirty years "Treasure Island" had lain upon the shelves in the libraries. Whenever the subject of its dramatization was broached, the wiseacres among the producing managers merely smiled. "It cannot be done," they said. "There is no heart interest and no femininity in the story. It never would succeed as a play."

Yet despite all predictions to the contrary, "Treasure Island" has been put upon the stage, and it is proclaimed "the most notable production in half a century."

So much for the knowledge which is gained of experience in this greatest of all gambling games—play producing. "The longer one stays at it," mused an old-time producer the other day, "the less one seems to know."

Nine scenes make up the four acts in "Treasure Island." They show the Admiral Benbow Inn, the quay at Bristol, the Hispaniola at anchor off the mysterous island, Treasure Island, the stockade, the Hispaniola adrift, the pirates' camp, Spyglass Mountain and Ben Gunn's cave. Every scene has that peculiar element that the people of the theatre call "atmosphere."

All the well-remembered characters take part in the play, even to the parrot, "Captain Flint," a gloriously-plumed Brazilian macaw.

Mr. Hopkins very wisely stuck closely to the text of Stevenson. It would not be possible to improve upon the weird lingo of Long John and the other pirates. But in two instances a marked departure was made in the characterizations. Upon the stage, Jim Hawkins, while a boy, is played by a girl. Mrs. Hopkins is Jim. She is said to lend a wholesome, whimsical quality to the part which stamps her impersonation as one of the best boys ever portrayed by a woman.

Then a fruit seller has been introduced in the second act so as to give additional color to the animated, picturesque scene which is revealed on the quay at Bristol. This young woman, who has been dubbed "the girl Stevenson forgot," was the happy creation of the playwright, Jules Eckert Goodman, who dramatized "Treasure Island."

It is said that "Treasure Island" provides more fun than a three-ringed circus, thrill closely following thrill, until the spectator finds himself upon the edge of his seat, scarcely daring to breathe lest he dispel the charm which has been thrown over him.

Now that "Treasure Island" bids fair to become a perennial stage entertainment like "Uncle Tom's Cabin," the wonder is that all those old comrades of every man's youth were not vitalized many years ago.

RUSSIANS CONTINUE THEIR BIG ADVANCE

Austrians Overwhelmed by Great Offensive.

London, June 9.—In their sweeping offensive the Russians have captured Lutsk, one of the Volhynian triangle fortresses, and have pushed on past it, seizing and crossing the lines of the rivers Ikwa and Styr.

In Galicia several powerful Austrian positions on the lower Stripa fell before the Russian onrush, which in the course of the day gathered in 11,000 more prisoners, making a total of more than 50,000 in the week old campaign on the front from the Pripet to Roumania.

The reoccupation of Lutsk is considered an achievement of great value. Lutsk is the apex of the triangle of fortresses the base line of which extends from Dubno to Rovno. Rovno is already in Russian hands, and the capture of Lutsk means the flanking of Dubno and the collapse of the entire Austrian line along the Styr and Ikwa rivers. A report to the Russian embassy in Rome says that the Russians have already forced the withdrawal of the Austrians nearly twenty miles throughout the Lutsk region.

"The results of the engagements from the 4th to the 7th in Volhynia and Galicia," says the Russian official statement, "permit us to consider that we have already gained an important victory, which is crowned by a great breach in the enemy's fortified front.

"On Tuesday we developed our offensive in the direction of Rovno and Kovel, and keeping on the heels of the overthrown enemy and following a battle in the region of Lutsk we occupied that town. In many places we have seized not only the lines of the rivers Ikwa and Styr, but have crossed them and continued our offensive.

"In Galicia, on the lower Stripa, our infantry, supported by artillery fire, has captured by an energetic advance a number of powerful enemy organized positions on the front of Trizibouk-havtsky-Jazlovetz (south of Tarnopol), and have arrived quite near the line of the Stripa river.

"In addition to the 40,000 prisoners previously taken we took fifty-eight officers and about 11,000 men and captured a number of guns and machine guns, a quantity of other weapons, field kitchens and telephone material.

"On the Dvina front and in the lake region south of Dvinsk there have been violent fusillades at many places. The Germans have bombarded by a concentrated fire the Ikskuli bridge head. Repeated German attempts to advance in the region south of Smorgon were frustrated by our fire. South of Krevo the enemy artillery fired gusts in our positions."

ALLIES' RAID NEAR ANTWERP

Airmen Bombard Hoboken, Where German Warships Were Reported.

London, June 9.—An allied air squadron has successfully bombarded the wharves at Hoboken, near Antwerp, according to a dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company from Maestricht.

The Germans are said to have been building destroyers at Hoboken. The squadron was fired on by German batteries, but returned to its base safely.

Allies Cut Greece Off.

London, June 9.—All exports of coal to Greece have been prohibited. Persistent rumors are in circulation in London that the allies are about to take strong measures against Greece. These were followed by the issuance of the following official statement: "Press dispatches from Cardiff say that port officers in Wales have been instructed to refuse clearance to Greek vessels."

Former President William Howard Taft to Come Here For Chautauqua Address

© 1912, Moffett Studio.

WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT.

IT is announced that William Howard Taft, former president of the United States, will be here for an address at the Chautauqua and will speak on "Our World Relationships." It is the first instance in which a former president of the United States has appeared on the Chautauqua platform and is regarded as showing the growing importance of the Chautauqua movement. Mr. Taft has consented to make only a limited number of engagements, however, on account of other duties. For this reason the Community Chautauquas have placed him only on those programs that are easily accessible from New Haven. The local committee therefore feels a special pride in his coming. The event is one of great importance from a community standpoint, and every citizen should make it a point to hear him discuss these great national and international issues that the nation is called upon to solve. Although he has been added to the program as an extra attraction, the season tickets will admit to the Taft lecture without additional charge. These can be bought now of the local committee, and they make the average cost of each of the ten Chautauqua programs only a few cents.

WOMEN WIN IN PLATFORM

Suffrage Adopted by Old Party In Chicago.

ADVOCATES ARE REJOICING

Other Planks Seem Suitable to Party Leaders—Little Difference Between Progressives and Republicans, but It Now Seems Impossible For Those In Control to Get Together.

Chicago, June 9.—The Republican platform, as adopted, follows in part:

In 1861 the Republican party stood for the Union. As it stood for the Union of States it now stands for a united people, true to American ideals, loyal to American traditions, knowing no allegiance except to the constitution, to the government and to the flag of the United States. We believe in American policies at home and abroad.

Protection of Rights.

We declare that we believe in and will enforce the protection of every American citizen in all the rights secured by him by the constitution, treaties and the law of nations, at home and abroad, by land and sea. These rights, which in violation of the specific promise of their party made at Baltimore in 1912, the Democratic president and the Democratic congress have failed to defend, we will unflinchingly maintain.

Foreign Relations.

We desire peace, the peace of justice and right, and believe in maintaining a straight and honest neutrality between the belligerents in the great war in Europe. We must perform all our duties and insist upon all our rights as neutrals without fear and without favor.

We believe that peace and neutrality as well as the dignity and influence of the United States cannot be preserved by shifty expedients, by phrase making, by performances in language or by attitudes ever changing in an effort to secure groups of voters. The present administration has destroyed our influence abroad and humiliated us in our own eyes.

The Republican party believes that a firm, consistent and courageous, foreign policy, always maintained by Republican presidents in accordance with American traditions, is the best, as it is the only true way to preserve our peace and restore us to our rightful place among the nations. We believe in the pacific settlement of international disputes and favor the establishment of a world court for that purpose.

Mexico.

We deeply simpathize with the fifteen million people of Mexico, who for three years have seen their country devastated, their homes destroyed, their fellow citizens murdered and their women outraged by armed bands of desperadoes led by self seeking, conscienceless agitators, who, when temporarily successful in any locality, have neither sought nor been able to restore order or establish and maintain peace.

We express our horror and indignation at the outrages which have been and are being perpetrated by these bandits upon American men and women who were, or are, in Mexico by invitation of the laws and of the government of that country, and whose rights to security of person and property are guaranteed by solemn treaty obligations.

We denounce the indefensible methods of interference employed by this administration in the internal affairs of Mexico and refer with shame to its failure to discharge the duty of this country as next friend to Mexico, its duty to other powers who have relied upon us as such friends, and its duty to our citizens in Mexico, in permitting the continuance of such conditions, first by failure to act promptly and firmly, and, second, by lending its influence to the continuation of such conditions through recognition of one of the factions responsible for these outrages.

We pledge our aid in restoring order and maintaining peace in Mexico. We promise to our citizens on and near the border and to those in Mexico, wherever they may be found, adequate and absolute protection in their lives, liberty and property.

Monroe Doctrine.

We reaffirm our approval of the Monroe doctrine and declare its maintenance to be a policy of this country essential to its present and future peace and safety and to the achievement of its manifest destiny.

Latin-America.

We favor the continuance of Republican policies which will result in drawing more and more closely the commercial, financial and social relations between this country and the countries of Latin-America.

Philippines.

We renew our allegiance to the Philippine policy inaugurated by McKinley, approved by congress and consistently carried out by Roosevelt and Taft. Even in this short time it has enormously improved the material and social conditions of the islands, given the Philippine people a constantly increasing participation in their government and if persisted in will bring still greater benefits in the future.

We accepted the responsibility of the islands as a duty to civilization and the Filipino people. To leave with our task half done would break our pledge, injure our prestige among nations and imperil what has already been accomplished. We condemn the Democratic administration for its attempt to abandon the Philippines, which was prevented only by the vigorous opposition of Republican members of congress, aided by a few patriotic Democrats.

We reiterate our unqualified approval of the action taken in December, 1911, by the president and congress to secure with Russia, as with other countries, a treaty that will recognize the absolute right of expatriation and prevent all discrimination of whatever kind between American citizens, whether native born or alien and regardless of race, religion or previous political allegiance.

We renew the pledge to observe this principle and to maintain the right of asylum, which is neither to be surrendered nor restricted, as we unite in the cherished hope that the war which is now desolating the world may speedily end, with a complete and lasting restoration of brotherhood among the nations of the earth and the assurance of full equal rights, civil and religious, to all men in every land.

Conservation.

We believe in a careful husbandry of all the natural resources of the nation, a husbandry which means development without waste, use without abuse.

Civil Service Reform.

The civil service law has always been sustained by the Republican party, and we renew our repeated declaration that it shall be thoroughly and honestly enforced and extended wherever practicable.

The Democratic party has created since March 4, 1913, 30,000 offices outside of the civil service law at an annual cost of $44,000,000 to the taxpayers of the country.

We condemn the gross abuse and the misuse of the law by the present Democratic administration and pledge ourselves to a reorganization of this service along lines of efficiency and economy.

Territorial Officials.

Reaffirming the attitude long maintained by the Republican party, we hold that officials appointed to administer the government of any territory should be bona fide residents of the territory in which their duties are to be performed.

Labor Laws.

We pledge the Republican party to the faithful enforcement of all federal laws passed for the protection of labor. We favor vocational education, the enactment and rigid enforcement of a federal child labor law, the enactment of a generous and comprehensive workmen's compensation law within the constitutional power of congress and an accident compensation law covering all government employees.

We favor the collection and collation under the direction of the department of labor of complete data relating to industrial hazards for the information of congress, to the end that such legislation may be adopted as may be calculated to secure the safety, conservation and protection of labor from the dangers incident to industry and transportation.

Suffrage.

The Republican party, reaffirming its faith of government of the people, by the people, for the people, as a measure of justice to one-half the adult people of this country, favors the extension of the suffrage to women, but recognizing the right of each state to settle this question for itself.

Such are our principles, such are our purposes and policies. We close as we began. The times are dangerous and the future is fraught with peril. The great issues of the day have been confused by words and phrases. The American spirit, which made the country and saved the Union, has been forgotten by those charged with the responsibility of power.

We appeal to all Americans, whether naturalized or native born, to prove to the world that we are Americans in thought and in deed, with one loyalty, one hope, one aspiration. We call on all Americans to be true to the spirit of America, to the great traditions of their common country and, above all things, to keep the faith.

PLATFORMS SIMILAR, BUT LEADERS AT ODDS

Agree on Americanism and Preparedness Policies.

Chicago, June 9.—Despite several vague and other soft spoken planks, the platform adopted almost unanimously by the Republican national convention is regarded generally by the delegates with approval. It is one on which all members of the party can stand.

There is a striking similarity between the Republican and Progressive platforms on almost all the main issues. While the language differs, the sentiment expressed is the same.

On woman suffrage, however, the Republicans do not go as far as the Progressives. The former favor the extension of suffrage to woman, but declares it is a question for each state to settle for itself. The moose platform favors equal suffrage by both state and federal action.

The Republican suffrage plank was almost exactly what was expected. It was a compromise, but so far as actual results go the final victory was rather barren. While it puts the party on record as recognizing that suffrage is a question for the states themselves to decide, it places an obstacle in the way of future consideration of the Susan B. Anthony amendment to the federal constitution. The national association is pleased with the result, though the congressional union is not.

The plank on preparedness is one of the rather vague sections of the Republican document. It calls for an efficient army and an ample reserve of trained men, but contains no allusion to universal service. For the navy it calls for fleets sufficient to protect both coasts.

Both of these promises, the drafters point out, if carried out by a president who believes heartily in preparedness are sufficient. Taking this view, the members of the committee who would rather have had something more specific compromised on the terms finally adopted by the convention.

HAMPSHIRE'S SURVIVORS SAFE

Twelve Men Saved From Cruiser, Latest Reports Say.

London, June 9.—One warrant officer and eleven men, survivors of the cruiser Hampshire, which went down off the Orkney islands with Earl Kitchener and the members of his staff on board, have been washed ashore on a raft, according to an announcement made by the admiralty.

A dispatch from Thurso, Scotland, says that several bodies from the Hampshire which have been washed ashore are being brought there. Among them is that of Lieutenant Colonel O. A. Fitzgerald, private military secretary to Earl Kitchener.

France Adopts Daylight Plan.

Paris, June 9.—Following the example of Germany, England, Italy and the Scandinavian countries, the parliament has adopted the daylight saving bill, advancing legal time by one hour. The measure now becomes a law, taking effect on the night of June 14 and remaining effective until Oct. 1.

Weather Forecast.

Showers throughout the day; moderate east and southeast winds.

SOME OF AMERICA'S MOST FAMOUS MEN ASK AID FOR DEFENDERS OF VERDUN

Prominent Bankers, Diplomatist and Educator Appeal for Funds in the Name of the Suffering Soldiers of France--

The National Allied Relief Committee, co-operating with the War Relief Clearing House for France and her Allies, is sending out what perhaps will be the most broadcast appeal yet issued on behalf of the war sufferers of Europe.

This appeal is for funds for the relief of the soldiers of France wounded in the fighting around Verdun.

What lends additional interest to this appeal is the fact that it is signed by six of the most prominent men in America. Those who signed it are: August Belmont of the banking firm bearing his name; Hon. Jos. H. Choate, Ex-Ambassador to England; Dr. Charles W. Eliot, President Emeritus of Harvard University; A. Barton Hepburn, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Chase National Bank; Edwin G. Merrill, President of the Union Trust Company, and Henry L. Higginson of the banking firm of Lee, Higginson & Company, Boston.

It is anticipated that the contributions received from this wide-spread appeal will be devoted also to relief work among a large number of wounded resulting from the greatly increased activities of the contending armies.

The appeal is reproduced herewith.

NEW AMHERST COLLEGE LIBRARY

Unique Memorial of Clyde Fitch, Dramatist, to Be Incorporated in Building.

DECORATED VESTIBULE

Eight Huge Assyrian Bas Reliefs, Gifts to the College, Will be an Attractive Feature of the Structure.

Amherst, Mass., June 9.—A unique memorial of Clyde Fitch, the dramatist, is to be incorporated in the new library of Amherst College that is to be built this year. This library has been made possible by an anonymous gift of $250,000 to Amherst which was announced several months ago.

Mr. Fitch graduated from Amherst in the Class of 1886, which included, among other men who have since won distinction, our present Secretary of State, Robert Lansing. Upon Mr. Fitch's death, the contents of his library—decorations, furniture, and the major part of the books—were presented to the college, and they will now be installed as they were formerly in the playwright's home in East Fortieth street, New York. The room will be long and narrow, of the same dimensions as the original and will contain the carved Italian ceiling, the Della Robbia "Madonna and Child," and the great oak table at which the author worked.

Another interesting feature of this new library will be a vestibule decorated with eight huge stone Assyrian bas reliefs which were presented to the college more than half a century ago by the Rev. Henry Lobdell, D. D., an Amherst graduate of the class of 1849 who was a missionary in Mosul. These slabs were taken from the palace of Assurnazirbae, the last king of Assyria, and are covered with representations of colossal mythological figures. Into the stone are cut inscriptions in cuneiform characters, which were later translated by Dr. William Hayes Ward, of the Class of 1856. The translation shows that the bas reliefs record the conquests of this king during the ninth century B. C.

The new library is to be built on the eastern side of the Common, occupying the site of the present Hitchcock Hall, which was known to earlier generations of Amherst men as the Boltwood Mansion. This house was built in 1835 by the Honorable Lucius Boltwood, who was born in Amherst in 1792. It is to be torn down to make way for the new library. The general style of the library building is classic with a leaning toward colonial in its proportions. It is to be built of Indiana limestone and brick. One of the most significant features of the building will be the great amount of space devoted to department rooms, all of the third floor and most of the second being given over to this purpose. In nearly all cases the rooms will be so grouped that each department will have the use of two—a small room designed as an office or work room for members of the department, and a larger one which will contain the books connected with the department work. It is hoped to make these rooms the centers of advanced study for all the non-scientific departments.

Another feature of this building that deserves notice is a room to be called the "Standard Authors" or Browsing Room. Here the reader will find the books that have only the most indirect relation to college work, such as books of fiction, travel, biography, essays, etc. The general reading room will run through two stories and be lighted on three sides by great windows which reach almost to the ceiling. The walls of this room are to be lined to the height of fourteen feet with bookcases and oak paneling. Above that the wall will be stone, and the ceiling is to be paneled and classic in style. The bookstack will be six stories in height, corresponding to the basement and three main floors of the building, and it will project some twenty-five feet beyond the north and the south line of the east facade. It will be provided with the latest pattern of metal shelving and an electric elevater, and will have a capacity of about 240,000 volumes.

The library building will be 140 feet in length and 100 feet in width, and is expected, when completed, to be one of the finest college libraries in the United States. The contract for the main building has been awarded to The Whitney Company, 1 Liberty street, New York.

Knows the Facts About Pork Barrel Legislation

Lee Francis Lybarger of the Philadelphia Bar.

LEE FRANCIS LYBARGER knows the facts about Pork Barrel Legislation. He will make the keynote speech of the Chautauqua, and he is prepared to give some startling facts about government expenditures. Mr. Lybarger is a member of the Philadelphia bar.

He is a recognized authority on the tariff and is the author of a number of books on economic subjects, among them, "Land, Labor and Wealth."

He knows how to present these big issues interestingly, entertainingly and clearly. He will not attack any one man or any set of men. It's the SYSTEM or the METHOD that he hits, and he says that even congressmen are not ENTIRELY to blame for the plan under which government money is appropriated and spent; that the voters who elect them to office and give them their instructions have a part in Pork Barrel methods.

COMMUNITY INTERESTS is another phase of the Lybarger address and one that will perhaps come a little closer home. There's enough FOOD FOR THOUGHT in this lecture for many a day. Don't miss it—HEAR IT ON

Tub Frocks of the Season

by Hester Winthrop

A Pretty Dress of Net and Ribbon

Organdie Comes Into Its Own with the Flaring Silhouette

Deep Folds of White Pique add Charm to This Linen Frock

French Frock of Hand Embroidered Batiste

A White Tub Frock Season With Accessories Also Snowy White - Neat White Linens Accurately Tailored - Flowered and Striped Voiles for Warm Afternoons.

JUST to show what fashion can do in the way of adding yards of material in a single season, look at the flounced linen frock pictured. Six yards, no less, this skirt measures around the foot and the width is accomplished by gores, gathers and a circular cut so that there is not much fullness over the hips. The tunic, however, is gathered very full at the waistline and its fullness is emphasized by wide bias bands, or flounces, in contrasting color, these flounces matching a band at the foot of the skirt in material and in width. The arrangement of the tunic and loose bodice suggests a redingote effect, with a waistcoat of white pique buttoned at the front and dropping over the skirt a little way. This linen frock is yellow in tone, with waistcoat, sleeve-bands and flounces of ivory white pique. The sleeves will commend themselves to the woman who likes coolness and comfort in summer time. The deep cuffs are slashed up at the back and fastened together with link buttons of white pearl. This model is shown also in brown linen with buff bands and in green linen with striped green and white bands. It is one of the newest and smartest tub models of the season.

A White Season Prophesied.

Because sport clothes are gay colored, frocks and suits which come under the head of tub wearables, are mainly white. White is so attractive on a mid-summer day that there is good excuse for its popularity, and of course white tubs more satisfactorily than anything else—especially in this day of untrustworthy dyestuffs. The white tub suit of linen or pique demands immaculate accessories in the way of hat, veil, gloves, handbag, parasol and boots. A bint of color anywhere takes away just that much charm, though a white linen suit worn with black hat, black and white parasol, black pumps and white silk stockings is very smart indeed. Most women, however, are planning to wear this summer the tall, exquisitely pretty boots of washable kid with white tailored tub costumes, for while these enchanting boots remain in fashion no opportunity for their exploitation must be neglected. Never has boot been invented that made the foot appear so fairylike and altogether alluring. The buttoned models are perhaps the most dainty and becoming to the foot, and now that this washable kid has been discovered—so that two minutes and a wet sponge will make one's footwear immaculate—nobody need be in too much of a hurry to don white boots with her white frock.

Linen Always Useful.

Perhaps there is no type of costume that is so agreeably useful as a white linen frock. The woman who has found this out will never be without one—or two or three, if she can manage it. White linen is so particularly smart when fresh from the laundress; it is cool as a cucumber without "showing through" and making elaborate brassieres and petticoats necessary when one is dressing for an informal occasion; and it is so durable—it will stand one in good stead on an all-day picnic, clamboring among rocks, or lounging on a sailboat. And after it has done service all summer long, it will make an excellent house frock through the winter season. An attractive new white linen model, recently observed, has plenty of flare and a rather new arrangement of buttons. The skirt has a plain, ungathered panel front from belt to hem, the sides and back, gathered into the waistband, billowing out jauntily. Rows of hemstitching are set four inches apart all the way up the skirt in the front side and back section—an entirely new method of trimming so far as the scribe is aware. The bodice has loose three-quarter length sleeves falling between elbow and wrist, a row of hemstitching outlining a cuff. The waist opens in front to the waistline over a flat vest of the linen which is hemstitched in rows like the skirt, only with rows much closer together. This front opening tapers toward the waistline to a width of two inches and below the narrow linen belt the opening continues down the skirt for perhaps eight inches, the tapered edges meeting finally in a long point. Buttons and buttonholes flank this tapering front opening its length, in bodice and skirt, and the effect is decidedly novel and smart.

Martial et Armand have brought out a very charming tub tailleur in plain and flowered pique. The flowered fabric is used for the skirt and for a little slashed jacket; the plain pique forms a flaring, gathered overskirt or "apron" which slopes upward from a point touching the skirt hem at the front, to a few inches below the belt at the back, thus revealing almost the entire flowered skirt from the back view of the costume. The coat has a big collar of plain pique and a sash of the plain material passes under the slashed tabs at back and front. These tabs, the skirt and the apron are edged with blue linen braid. This tailleur is of white pique flowered in rose and faint blue. To match there is a blue straw hat trimmed with white and blue ribbon and two pink roses. Boots of blue glazed kid exactly matching the hat finish the effect.

Sport Dresses of Striped Linen.

Among the tub frocks one must surely include sport dresses, not awning stripe sport skirts and blouses—though these of course may be entirely tubbable—but simple sport frocks of striped linen or gingham for morning wear in summer time. The term sport frock is by courtesy only for the true sportswoman who will prefer a sporty looking sport skirt and shirt, but these sport frocks are so practical, so neat and so smart withal that many women will "live" in them all through the morning hours. They have a short, simply cut gored skirt with deep hem and effectively placed patch pockets, and an attached waist also simple in cut and with turned down collar and sleeves that unbutton at the wrist. The smartness of such a costume depends on the good cut, the excellent material used and the correctness of such accessories as belt, hat and boots.

Voiles, Plain and Patterned.

Voile frocks there are a-plenty, also, though frocks of this type—supposedly for afternoon wear in the country—are not as numerous as they were in the days before sport attire became the proper thing for every hour between breakfast and six o'clock at night. In some communities, however, all femininity appears in something cool and dainty at four o'clock in the afternoon, and this something cannot be better than a flowered voile. The new all-over flowered patterns are particularly pretty with trimmings of velvet ribbon bows and the little bows may be snipped off when a tubbing is necessary. Plain and patterned voiles are combined in many models—just as silk and serge, or silk and mohair have been combined in earlier street costumes. Half the skirt may be plain voile, half flowered; the sleeveless bodice flowered and the sleeves plain; or flowered flounces may adorn a foundation of plain voile. There are countless ways to combine materials this season and the dainty voiles offer a rare opportunity in this line. For quaint panniered and 1830 frocks the flowered dimities and organdies are charming and these frocks are worn over petticoats distended with featherbone tubing since bouffancy is the effect aimed at and starch is forbidden in any sheer fabric by fashion. Tub frocks must rely upon these distended petticoats for they may not be faced, like silk costumes with any resilient stiffening. The best of these stiffening fabrics are damp proof, but they are not supposed to be immersed in a washtub of soap and hot water—which is of course the end and the beginning of a satisfactory tub costume. There are various distending petticoats, some of batiste or nainsook prettily trimmed with lace or embroidered ruffles beneath which are hidden away casings for the distending hoops of featherbone.

The fad of the moment is the swallow sunshade; an enchanting, summery background for a pretty face.

Organdies In High Favor For Mid-Summer.

Some of the loveliest frocks of the summer will be of organdy, judging by airy models now being finished by the dressmakers. Organdy lends itself well to the billowy effects in fashion and yards and yards of the crisp, sheer fabric go into ruffles, flounces, puffings and shirrings for the new organdy dresses. An organdy frock for a young girl has a skirt eight yards around, tucked from hem to belt by hand; the bodice is also tucked across to match and the sleeves are little puffs with hand-hemmed ruffles. The complete effect is delightfully girlish and charming. There is youthfulness also in the organdy frock pictured—the model with rows of shirring around the hips. Only a slender, girlish figure could stand this very bouffant frock, with its full, gathered waist drawn down into a tiny ribbon sash. This sash is violet in color and the hat is of violet straw with pink and plum-colored roses.

The other organdy frock illustrated today is less bouffant in silhouette but no less charming, and will perhaps please the woman of conservative taste better. It is an expensive little frock in spite of its seeming simplicity, for it is entirely hand-made and the embroidery on skirt, bodice and sleeve is done by hand also. The model might be copied, however, in organdy and fine St. Gall embroidery with very good effect.

The model of accordion pleated white Georgette with embroidered bandings and white ribbon edging skirt, tunic and cape collar is called a tub frock by courtesy; it might indeed be washed by a skillful laundress but most women would prefer to pay a dry cleaner's price in the case of so dainty a frock. The little puffed sleeves and deep cape-collar are particularly interesting features.

BLUE FURNITURE.

BLUE chairs and tables—even blue beds and dressers—are the moment's vogue, and the color is a rich, clear blue, that demands blue and white, black and white, or the palest buff as a background. For summer bungalows and cottages this blue furniture is charming, but it is rather too definite in color and too unique in type to be the mainstay of a dignified and luxurious room in a town home. The summer bedroom, papered in blue and white and hung with cream scrim draperies, is a fitting background against which to pose blue bedstead, dresser and chiffonier; a dining room decorated in pale buff and ivory has a round table and long, simply designed sideboard in blue, and the chairs are blue with blue leather seats. The effect is very good—cool and dainty for summer mealtimes. Blue chairs and tables on the porch are especially the vogue, and of course these pieces are of blue wicker or of wood in rather massive, sturdy design. For serving tea on the porch there is an enchanting four-leaf-clover table, the four-leaf top of mahogany, the carved legs blue.

Parasols Coquet with June Sunshine

EVERY woman knows that a parasol is two distinct and separate things: an implement for shade and an instrument of flirtation. In the first capacity, it may be twirled in its possessor's hand, making a fetching background behind her head and shoulders—or it may be carried attentively over her head by her escort. It is an instrument of flirtation even while performing its obvious duty as an implement of shade. It may be used by its possessor as a support for her hands which in return support her cheek, as she sits in a shaded nook with another escort; or it may be a pretty plaything in his hands as he sits beside her—none the less is it an instrument of flirtation. No woman needs to take lessons in how to use a parasol flirtatiously. The knowledge is born in her and grows up with her. If you do not believe this, watch a small girl of six with her first pink silk ruffled sunshade and observe the number of coquettish things she does with it.

Parasols fairly provoke flirtatiousness this season—they are so coquettish in themselves. The plain coaching styles are used only with severely tailored suits; all other parasols are frilled, gathered, shirred, piped, smocked and garnished with flowers, bowknots or tassels. There are flowered silk models for use with bathing suits trimmed with the same flowered silk; there are airy, transparent parasols designed for coquetry only, for they could not possibly keep out the sun; and there are parasols frankly and obviously intended as backgrounds—most becoming backgrounds for pretty faces and charming hats.

The kite parasol makes up for eccentricity of shape by elegance of style. This one of Nattier moire and ostrich.

The swallow parasol is having a tremendous vogue. Two or three darting swallows made of black velvet or silk are appliqued against the parasol cover, sometimes inside so that they show only when the parasol is open. There are also white swallows on navy blue parasols, and dark brown swallows on parasols in biscuit or tan shades. The long, slender lines of the swallow in flight are beautiful and the "swift" threatens now to replace the long fashionable bluebird in favor.

There are canopy top parasols, rather small and dainty in size, with long handles—these for use with small, high-crowned hats; and there are wide-spreading, flat parasols on Japanese lines for use with large picture hats of low-crowned type. A parasol called La Debutante is as large around as an umbrella and almost as flat as a pancake, several of the ribs curving up at one side of the cover to show the lining. It is really remarkable how this parasol can change its "expression" when twirled around to make the saucy up-curve of the inner side come in front of the face, at one side, or just back of the shoulder. La Debutante is a lawn-fete parasol, intended for use with elaborate afternoon frocks. Its cover is of white Georgette crêpe lined with very thin, flesh pink silk. Around the edge is a double pleating of white net, a piping of black velvet and a line of tiny pink chiffon rosebuds running between the pleatings. This parasol has an enormously long white wood handle, so long that when the parasol is closed and its possessor clasps her hands on the end of the handle, her hands are a trifle above her waistline.

Parasol handles are very neat and in conservative style—all the gaiety is in the cover. The handle usually matches the cover, or it may be of polished black wood. Big knobs of colored bone finish many of the parasol handles, and some of the models designed to accompany dressy costumes have bracelets of ribbon or tulle to which are attached little bouquets of artificial flowers. A pretty parasol of this type is of shirred white net, with a double frill of net at the edge. A stiff little nosegay of pink roses and heliotrope is attached to a white tulle bracelet on the handle and the companion nosegay nestles in the net shirring of the cover.

Some of the coaching parasols are made coquettish with many little swinging tassels, a tassel dangling from the end of every rib and from the ferrule where it emerges from the cover. A model of this type comes in navy blue taffeta, with blue tassels and in corn-colored taffeta with tassels to match. Corn-colored parasols are enjoying a special vogue this season and other colors that are evidently fancied, are purple, rose and green. Navy blue parasols are always used and always in good taste; but the navy parasol is usually utilitarian rather than coquettish and accompanies a practical afternoon costume in the same shade.

Flowered silks and smart magpie combinations make this year's parasols pleasing.

Black and white parasols this year are charming; one cannot go amiss in selecting a parasol in black and white combination, if a single parasol must do duty with several costumes. Some of these magpie sunshades are checked; some striped; others a combination of the two. Very handsome parasols with black chantilly, or tucked black net over white silk, are ready for use with distinguished matronly costumes. In gayer semblance is a black and white parasol in which bands of crosswise black and white striped taffeta run down the ribs, separating panels of black satin. This parasol has a long handle of carved black and white wood, with an effective black and white silk tassel.

Another attractive black and white parasol has a cover of white satin, is shirred closely at the center, and at the edge, overlaps in a deep tuck, an ungathered flounce of striped black and white satin. The handle is black with a white tassel.

The kite-shaped parasol is a novelty of the season and is distinctive not only by reason of its newness, but also because it is made of such handsome materials. The cover is a rich moire silk and the ribs at the corners of the kite curve up to show a handsome lining and also the soft ostrich trimming which nestles just under the edge of the parasol.

ARE YOU THE LUCKY ONE?

Somewhere on this page the name of a Plainfielder appears. If it is yours clip out the column in which you find it and bring it to the Plainfield Daily Press office, where you will receive in return a book containing twelve admission tickets to the Plainfield Airdome, valued at $1.20. A name will appear each night on this page; if you don't happen to be the lucky one tonight continue to watch. The tickets are good at any performance and will entitle you to the same privileges enjoyed at this popular amusement center by those who pay.

TO MEET NEW MEMBERS.

Another enthusiastic meeting for new members and young Christians will be held tonight at the Park Avenue Baptist church. Rev. Dr. Birney S. Hudson, the pastor, will give instruction in church history and matters pertaining to church life. Every new member and those expecting to unite with the church are urgd to be present. Last week there were nearly one hundred in attendance.

AUTO BUS CHANGES ROUTE.

Owing to the wretched condition of Plainfield avenue, in South Plainfield, the Suburban Transit Company is compelled to stop operating its bus to South Plainfield over that route. The Park avenue route will be used in the future.

CHANCE FOR PRESS ADVERTISERS TO ATTRACT THE ATTENTION OF THE ENTIRE COUNTY.

As the result of an agreement between the Plainfield Daily Press and the Elizabeth Evening Times any advertiser placing a classified ad in the Press may have that same ad inserted in the Elizabeth Evening Times upon the payment of one-half more than is charged for the Daily Press insertion alone. Thus, if an advertisement in the Daily Press costs forty cents, the same advertisement may be placed in the Elizabeth paper for an additional twenty cents.

The Elizabeth Evening Times has a circulation of 9,000 and is widely distributed throughout Union County. Thus if an advertiser places his advertisement in the Plainfield Daily Press and Elizabeth Evening Times he places it before the eyes of thousands of readers at a very small cost.

Most advertisers welcome the opportunity to attract the attention of the whole county to their offerings and with the co-operation of the Elizabeth Evening Times the Plainfield Daily Press is now able to make this possible. The Elizabeth Evening Times has earned a reputation for itself as an advertising medium, especially along the classified line, and it is a well known fact that its influence extends into other counties besides Union.
